Half And Half Tuna Salad Sandwiches

By MARIE

At a recent and delightful luncheon with my cousins (there were 10 of us) they called my tuna salad sandwiches "Half and Half Tuna Sandwiches" because I use a delicious combination of Bumble Bee Tuna packed in olive oil and a can of the Italian tuna fish, Genova Yellow Fish Tuna.

Today's recipe calls for one can of each which fills about one dozen finger rolls so depending on how many you would like to make, use the tuna accordingly.

RECIPE:

1 can of Genova Yellow Fish Tuna (packed in olive oil)

1 can of Bumble Bee Tuna (packed in Olive Oil)
2 stalks of celery finely chopped
12 finger rolls (the package comes with 18 rolls)

Drain the two cans of tuna, place in a bowl and break apart. Add celery and enough mayonnaise to the tuna and celery to be well blended and mix all together.

Fill each finger roll as desired. Cover tightly and refrigerate until ready to serve. This is a great combo and a great taste.

Serve with your favorite chips, fries or salad.

Healthy Rice Pudding

By SUZIE

Rice pudding is one of my favorite desserts.

Normally loaded with cows milk, white sugar, and white rice (which means pretty much no nutrition or fiber.) This recipe takes the cake. Swapping the white rice for short grain brown rice (long grain will not get good results), real maple syrup (preferably Grade B), cinnamon (which modulates blood sugar) adding nuts (which add important monounsaturated fat, fiber, and minerals) and using coconut milk instead of cows milk (contains Lauric acid, a certain type of fat called MCT which your body loves) makes this dessert luscious and healthy.

RECIPE:

1 can organic coconut milk
Water (just enough to make the total liquid content 2 3/4 cups)

1 cup short grain brown rice
1/4 cup unsweetened dried shredded coconut
4 tablespoons maple syrup (the real stuff)
3/4 tsp cinnamon
1/2 tsp nutmeg
1/3 cup slivered almonds or pistachios (or any nut of choice)

Combine milk, water, rice, and coconut in medium sauce pan and bring to boil over high heat. Reduce heat to low and stir. Cover and simmer about 50 minutes.

Stir in everything else except the nuts, until well combined. Cover and remove from heat. Let stand for 10 minutes. Top with nuts. Serve hot or cold.

Sautéed Chicken Salad Sandwiches

By MARIE

Usually when one makes chicken salad the chicken is either boiled or left over from rotisserie. Both of these make wonderful chicken salad sandwiches but recently at a luncheon I had for my cousins, I prepared the chicken salad a little bit differently.

This time I bought a couple of fresh chicken breast slices and I sautéed them in butter and olive oil for a great flavor.

RECIPE

2 or three pieces of fresh chicken breast
2 stalks of celery finely chopped

Mayonnaise (as much as you prefer)

2 tablespoons of butter
1 tablespoon of olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
1 package of finger rolls

In a skillet heat butter and oil, sauté the chicken turning both sides until chicken is done. Set aside to cool. After chicken is cooled, chop in small pieces. Add celery and mayonnaise and mix well until blended. Fill each finger roll, cover tightly and refrigerate until ready to eat.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open House June 4, June 18

The Dorothy Quincy open for public tours Saturday, June 4 and Saturday, June 18, between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 11 a.m. The last tour starts at 2:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Dating from 1686, the house is 325 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

Quincy Residents Pitch In To Green Up The Blue Hills

Green Up the Blue Hills, the annual stewardship event sponsored by the Friends of the Blue Hills, will be held on Sunday, June 5, from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at Ponkapoag Pond in Canton.

Volunteers will enjoy music, face painting, crafts and a scavenger hunt while helping with an essential task: pulling up invasive weeds that threaten the Blue Hills. Green Up is offered in partnership with the Kohl's "Associates in Action" program.

Many plants look alike for most of the visitors to the 7,000 acre Blue Hills reservation, yet many of the plants that have expanded in recent years are not native to the park and threaten to crowd out naturally occurring species.

Vigorous weeding during the warmer months helps maintain a healthy balance in the forest.

Individuals as well as volunteers from area schools, service groups, and local businesses are pitching in to help. Meg McMillen is a history teacher and the Community Service Coordinator for Quincy High School. At this spring's Quincy High Community Service Fair, nearly 30 students signed up to help with the annual event.

Volunteers should park at Temple Beth David, 1060 Randolph St., in Canton. It is a short, scenic walk to the AMC cabins where volunteers will weed. The event is rain or shine, and while some gloves will be available for weeding, volunteers are encouraged to bring their own gardening gloves if they have them. Refreshments and t-shirts will be provided. RSVP to Greenup@FriendsoftheBlueHills.org.

Friends of the Blue Hills was founded in 1979 and has been working for over 35 years to protect the Blue Hills Reservation's beauty, natural habitats, and recreational opportunities. The Blue Hills has 22 hilltops, 125 miles of hiking trails, and spans six towns: Braintree, Canton, Dedham, Milton, Quincy and Randolph.

HN Garden Club Plant Auction June 1

The Houghs Neck Garden Club will hold its Annual Plant Auction Wednesday, June 1 at Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street.

Stella Izzo will be the auctioneer.

At the event, bidding takes place for plants, many of which are divisions or cuttings from members' own gardens. Funds raised will go towards the club's community beautification projects.

The meeting starts at 7 p.m. with refreshments and a business meeting followed by the program at 7:30 p.m.

Members are encouraged to renew their membership for the 2016-17 year at this final club meeting of the year. New members are welcome.

As a prelude to the club's 10th anniversary celebration June 18th at Nut Island, the Houghs Neck Garden Club will host a pruning workshop at Leo Kelly Park Saturday, June 11 at 9 a.m. This is a free event for those in the Houghs Neck community who wish to learn how to correctly prune their shrubs and trees.

For more information on HNGC's 10th anniversary celebration June 18th at Nut Island, visit <http://hngc123.wix.com/houghsneckgardenclub/>.

Burning Mouth Syndrome

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Burning mouth syndrome is the medical term for ongoing (chronic) or recurrent burning in the mouth without an obvious cause. This discomfort may affect the tongue, gums, and lips, inside of your cheeks, roof of your mouth or widespread areas of your whole mouth.

The burning sensation can be severe, as if you scalded your mouth. Burning mouth syndrome can appear unexpectedly or develop gradually over time. Regrettably, the cause often can't be determined. Although that makes treatment more challenging, you can often get burning mouth syndrome under better control by working diligently with your health care team.

Symptoms of burning

mouth syndrome may include:

- A burning or scalded sensation that most commonly affects your tongue, but may also affect your lips, gums, palate, throat or whole mouth
- A sensation of dry mouth with increased thirst
- Taste changes, such as a bitter or metallic taste
- Loss of taste

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

The discomfort from burning mouth syndrome characteristically has several different patterns. It may occur every day, with little discomfort when you wake, but become worse as the day progresses, start as soon as you wake up and last all day or come and go. Whatever pattern of mouth discomfort you have, burning mouth syndrome may persist for months to years. In rare cases, symptoms may suddenly disappear on their own or become less frequent. Some sensations may be temporarily relieved during eating or drinking. Burning mouth syndrome usually doesn't cause any noticeable physical changes to your tongue or mouth. If you have discomfort, burning or soreness of your tongue, lips, gums or other areas of your mouth, see your doctor or dentist. They may need to collaborate to help pinpoint a cause and develop an effective plan of treatment.

The cause of burning mouth syndrome can be classified as either primary or secondary. When no clinical or lab abnormalities can be identified, the condition is called primary or idiopathic burning mouth syndrome.

Some research suggests that primary burning mouth syndrome is related to problems with taste and sensory nerves of the peripheral or central nervous system. Sometimes burning mouth syndrome is triggered by an underlying medical condition. In these cases, it's called secondary burning mouth syndrome.

These conditions can include: dry mouth or problems with the salivary gland function, other oral conditions such as a fungal infection of the mouth (oral thrush), an inflammatory condition called oral lichen planus or a condition called geographic tongue that gives the tongue a map-like appearance, nutritional deficiencies, such as a lack of iron, zinc, folate (vitamin B-9), thiamin (vitamin B-1), riboflavin (vitamin B-2), pyridoxine (vitamin B-6) and cobalamin (vitamin B-12), dentures (especially if they don't fit well), allergies, acid reflux, medications, particularly high blood pressure medications, endocrine disorders such as diabetes or underactive thyroid, oral habits such as biting the tip of the tongue and teeth grinding, excessive mouth irritation, which may result from overbrushing your tongue, using abrasive toothpastes, overusing mouthwashes or having too many acidic drinks and lastly various psychological factors.

There's no one test that can determine if you have burning mouth syndrome. Instead, your health care providers will try to rule out other problems before diagnosing burning mouth syndrome. Your doctor or dentist will review your medical history and medications, examine your mouth, and ask you to describe your symptoms, oral habits and oral care practices. In addition, your doctor will likely perform a general medical exam, looking for indications of other conditions.

You may have some of the following tests: Blood tests, oral cultures or biopsies, allergy tests, salivary measurements, gastric reflux tests, MRI and CT scan or other imaging tests to check for other health problems. Your doctor may also try temporarily stopping medication to see if your discomfort goes away and may ask you to fill out a psychological questionnaire that can help determine if you have symptoms of depression, anxiety or other mental health conditions.

For secondary burning mouth syndrome, treatment depends on any underlying conditions that may be causing your mouth discomfort. For example, replacing poorly fitting dentures or taking supplements for a vitamin deficiency may relieve your discomfort. That's why it's important to try to pinpoint the cause. Once any underlying causes are treated, your burning mouth syndrome symptoms should get better.

There's no known cure for primary burning mouth syndrome and no one definite way to treat it. Solid research on the most effective methods is lacking. Treatment depends on your particular symptoms and is aimed at controlling them.

Some of the treatment options available may include:

- Saliva replacement products
- Specific oral rinses or lidocaine
- Capsaicin, a pain reliever that comes from chili peppers
- An anticonvulsant medication called clonazepam (Klonopin)
- Certain antidepressants
- Medications that block nerve pain
- Cognitive behavioral therapy

You may need to try numerous treatment methods before finding one or a combination that helps diminish your mouth discomfort.

LIVESTRONG Participants Celebrate Completion Of 12-Week YMCA Program

The first participants of the LIVESTRONG at the YMCA program at the South Shore Y's Emilson Branch recently celebrated their completion of the 12-week program.

This particular group was part of the first LIVESTRONG at the YMCA class that launched at the Y's Emilson Branch Feb. 22.

The group of 10 cancer survivors, led by instructor Julie Ferguson, spent their final class on the Y's newest attraction, the Sky Trail Explorer, a 31-foot tall adventure-based ropes course. Each participant of LIVESTRONG at the YMCA had a chance to experience the Sky Trail, successfully conquering the challenges that it set forth, and feeling the unconditional support of the entire group every step of the way.

At the conclusion of the class, each participant received a certificate for their completion of the program, an emotional feat among the group of 10 cancer survivors, their instructors, Y staff and volunteers.

"The sense of accomplishment and unity that was felt among the ten cancer survivors on the final day of the LIVESTRONG at the YMCA program was outstanding," said Katelyn Szafir, Director of Medical Wellness Programs at the South Shore YMCA. "There was no shortage of support and encouragement among everyone involved in the program."

Over the course of 12 weeks, participants in the program engaged in a variety of activities designed to build muscle mass and strength, increase flexibility and endurance and improve functional ability, including chair yoga, aquatics, Pilates, nutrition, the arts and more.

LIVESTRONG at the YMCA is a small group program designed for adult cancer survivors. This program fulfills the important need of supporting the increasing number of cancer survivors who find themselves in a transitional period between completing their cancer treatment and the shift to feeling physically and emotionally strong enough to attempt to return to their normal life or their "new normal."

For more information about LIVESTRONG at the YMCA at the South Shore YMCA, contact Katelyn Szafir, director of Medical Wellness Programs, at kszafr@ssymca.org.

Quincy Native Keeps Navy Wing Flying

Chief Sean Adams Serving Aboard Naval Air Station Jacksonville

By NAVY OFFICE OF COMMUNITY OUTREACH PUBLIC AFFAIRS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. - A 2000 North Quincy High School graduate and Quincy, Massachusetts native is serving in the U.S. Navy aboard Naval Air Station Jacksonville, the largest base in the Southeast Region and third largest in the nation.

Chief Sean Adams is a naval air crewman (operator) serving with Commander, Patrol and Reconnaissance Wing 11.

A naval air crewman is responsible for operating onboard sensor equipment for maritime patrol aircraft.

"My job has allowed me the privilege of flying in the Navy's newest and most advanced aircraft and traveling around the world while doing it," said Adams.

According to Navy officials, Wing 11's history and reputation remain unparalleled since being commissioned on Aug. 15, 1942. Throughout the decades, Wing 11 has continued to fly combat missions in direct support of the troops on the ground and delivered traditional maritime capabilities, real-time intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance.

Beginning in the 1960s, the P-3C Orion, a land-based, long-range anti-submarine warfare patrol aircraft, replaced the P-2V Neptune fleet. After 50 years of faithful service and the 50th anniversary of Maritime Patrol and Reconnaissance Force, the P-3C Orion is being phased out of the fleet, according to Navy officials.

The P-8A is a modified Boeing airframe featuring a fully connected, state-of-the-art, open architecture mission system designed for long-range anti-submarine warfare; anti-surface warfare; and intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance missions, Navy officials explained.

"The U.S. Navy sometimes asks the impossible of our people. It is sailors that make the impossible possible," said Capt. Anthony Corapi, Commodore, Patrol and Reconnaissance Wing 11. "Chief Adams is one example of a selfless servant of our nation. These heroes ask for very little recognition and perform their daily job with pride and professionalism defending freedom and our way of life around the world. Each member of the Navy's combat team is crucial to our success. I am very proud to have Chief Adams on our team!"

Adams, the son of Meg and Michael Adams of Squantum, is part of a crew that began a transition to the P-8A Poseidon in 2014. Earlier this year, squadron VP-45 entered the Inter-Deployment Readiness Cycle in preparation for their first deployment as a P-8A squadron.

"The camaraderie when going on deployment is great here," said Adams. "There is team mindset and everyone looks after one another and works together to accomplish the mission."

According to Navy officials, the Navy continues to meet milestone after milestone on this world-class mission and is providing an aircraft with superior capabilities to the men and women in uniform that will have a lasting legacy promoting a global maritime strategy.

"Challenging myself and accomplishing personal goals is something that I achieved from the military life," said Adams. "I am very motivated and goal oriented to accomplish what I set out to do."

Patrick McDermott Presented 'Spirit Of American Justice' Award

Norfolk County Register of Probate and Quincy resident Patrick W. McDermott was recognized at Wrentham District Court's annual Law Day ceremony recently with the prestigious "Spirit of American Justice" award. The award is bestowed annually upon those who show an extraordinary commitment to the administration of justice in Massachusetts.

"It is an honor to receive this award from a community of peers in the Trial Court whom I greatly respect," said Register McDermott. "The staff at the Norfolk Probate Court works hard every day to cut through the legal bureaucracy and provide access to justice to all the residents of Norfolk County by helping adoptive parents, families in crisis, and grieving loved ones who need judicial assistance."

Past recipients of the award include Retired Judge and Stoughton Attorney Francis Crimmins Jr. and Walpole Attorney James Brady. McDermott is serving in his fourteenth year as the elected Register of Probate and is the Past President of the Bar Association of Norfolk County as well as Past President of the Massachusetts Association of Registers of Probate.

Wrentham District Court Clerk Magistrate Edward Doherty, who hosts the annual event, says McDermott's leadership at the Registry of Probate stands out.

"I created the American Spirit of Justice award to honor our system of American law and individuals who embody the judicial values of honesty, hard work, dedication to task, kindness, and sound judgement," said Clerk Magistrate Doherty. "Pat McDermott is all of those things and more, and I am proud to call him a friend."

McDermott said the programs he has instituted at the Probate Court are meant to reduce barriers and increase efficiency of the court. He highlighted the Lawyer for a Day program, an initiative where lawyers volunteer their services to those without representation, and the Legal Advocacy Clinic for victims of domestic violence which is run in partnership with Domestic Violence Ended (DOVE).

Individuals who need assistance are encouraged to visit the courthouse at 35 Shawmut Road in Canton or call at 781-830-1200.

'Church Of The Presidents' Seeks Volunteer Tour Guides

The United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents" History and Visitor Program is seeking volunteer guides for the 2016 season.

Volunteer guides provide half-hour tours of the church sanctuary and the crypt, containing the tombs of President John Adams and First Lady Abigail Adams, and President John Quincy Adams and First Lady Louisa Catherine Adams.

"The volunteering opportunity is perfect for individuals who enjoy working with the public and who have an interest and passion for history and architecture," said Bob Damon, director of the History and Visitor Program at UFPC. "Prior experience as a guide or interpreter at a historic site/museum is helpful but certainly not a requirement."

"A working knowledge of Massachusetts colonial history, the Adams Presidents and First Ladies of Quincy is also very helpful, but again not a requirement for the position," Damon said.

Applicants must be able to climb stairs and be on their feet for extended periods of time.

Damon described the volunteers as "the lifeblood of this historical program. We ask volunteers to commit for the length of our season, which runs from April 19 to Nov. 11."

Program hours are Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday noon to 4 p.m.

The minimum commitment is working one full shift, one week or weekend day, no less than every other week.

Training, orientation and historical materials will be provided. Upon learning the material, a trainee may shadow as many tours as they wish until they are comfortable conducting on their own, Damon noted.

Interested volunteers should contact Bob Damon, director, History and Visitor Program, United First Parish Church, Quincy, at 617-773-0062 or by email: visitorsprogram@ufpc.org.

Pedestrian access to both roads will be maintained, and southbound traffic on Hancock Street will be unaffected by next week's work.

Walker said area businesses would be notified about the road closures this week.

"Starting this week, someone will be by all the businesses," he stated.

Temple Street will be rebuilt next week as part of the Adams Green transportation project, Walker said. The road will be lowered six inches as part of the process:

The rebuilding of Temple Street is the last part of the roadwork underway in Quincy Center necessary before the portion of Hancock Street between the United First Parish Church and City Hall closes to traffic permanently. A new city park will be built between the two historic buildings.

Walker said the closure of the portion of Hancock Street between those two buildings has been scheduled for Friday, June 24.

The closure of that stretch of the road will bring about a shift in traffic patterns, with vehicles now traveling in both directions on Temple Street and Washington Street adjacent to the United First Parish Church. New traffic signals installed as part of the roadwork project will also come online at that point.

The city plans on reaching out to the public about the change in traffic patterns, using electronic message boards among other methods.

"There will be plenty of that," Walker said when asked about public outreach.

Once the new traffic pattern begins, traffic headed southbound along Hancock Street will now travel on Washington Street next to the church. Two lanes will be available at the intersection where Washington, Coddington and Temple Streets meet — one to take a right onto Temple and then back onto Hancock Street and the other to continue along Washington Street or turn left onto Coddington Street.

Southbound traffic on Temple Street would flow in one direction until reaching a new raised crosswalk where Hancock Street resumes. At that point, three southbound lanes would be available heading into the intersection with Granite Street — a right-turn only lane onto Granite Street, a center lane to stay on Hancock and a lane to turn left onto Maple or Chestnut Streets.

PORTION OF HANCOCK STREET in Quincy Square between the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall, left) and the United First Parish Church located across the street from the government center will close permanently to vehicular traffic on Friday, June 24, city officials announced Monday. Pedestrian access will be maintained and a new traffic pattern will begin after the closure. A new city park will be built between the two buildings.

Traffic headed northbound on Hancock Street would travel in one lane in the 1300 block between Granite Street and Temple Street. About halfway up Temple Street, traffic would split into two lanes — one allowing vehicles to take a right onto Washington headed southbound towards Quincy Point or go straight ahead onto Coddington, and the other a left-turn only lane that would lead back to Hancock via Washington Street.

The pending closure of Hancock Street is not the only change coming to Quincy Center, as the city-owned Ross Garage closed for good Monday. Demolition of the parking garage, which first opened in 1972, is expected to begin next week and will be completed by June 30, William Geary, the special counsel to the

June Children Events, Activities At Crane Public Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane
Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library has scheduled the following events and activities for children during the month of June.

Preschool Discovery @ Wollaston

Drop by the Wollaston Library with your preschooler any time between 10 and 11:30 a.m. on Thursday, June 2nd to do some fun simple science together. Activities, experiments and instructions will be provided for science you can do with your child.

This month we will be experimenting with magnets. Make magnets float above each other, chase each other around, use them to go fishing, and more!

This program does not require registration.

Music and Movement with Rubi - Saturday, June 11th

On Saturday, June 11th at 10 and 10:30 a.m. sing and dance with Rubi Lichauco! Rubi brings her popular preschool program to Quincy so put on your favorite dancing shoes and join us for this lively mix of music and movement for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult.

This program has become so popular there isn't room to move and dance as we would like so we have decided to split the group in two. No registration is required; when the 10 a.m. session fills we will close the doors. Please spend some time in the children's room choosing books or playing with our early literacy activities while you wait for the 10:30 a.m. session. Thank you for your cooperation we really think 2 smaller groups will make this program more fun for everyone.

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books.

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 meets on the 2nd Thursday of each month. This month we will be meeting on Thursday, June 9th at 7 p.m.

For this month's meeting we will have open choice. What have you been reading? What books would you like to recommend to your friends? Looking for some good summer reads? Join us to share your favorites and find some new titles to read over the summer. Any questions? Call 617-376-2411 and ask to speak with Ms. Cronin.

2nd graders who will be entering 3rd grade in September 2016 are welcome to join the Night Owls Book Club in June and July. We can't wait to meet you!

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. The Club will meet on Tuesday, June 14th at 7 p.m. at the Main Library.

This month's theme: Sports & Athletics

This year's summer reading theme is On Your Mark, Get Set, Read! So to get ready for a summer full of sports and athletics we're reading sports and athletics themed books. Feel free to get creative with this one! Sports doesn't just mean baseball, basketball, football or hockey. Pick one of those, or maybe soccer, swimming, skating, running, fencing, hiking, rafting, surfing, even Quidditch.

4th graders who will be entering 5th grade in September 2016 are welcome to join the Phoenix Book Club in June and through the coming summer. We can't wait to meet you!

Saturday Storytime @ North Quincy

Join children's librarian Cathy deVeer and special guest local author Julia Denos at the North Quincy Branch, on Saturday, June 11th at 10 am for a lively family storytime full of stories and songs about art and artists. Julia will be reading her new book Swatch: the Girl Who Loved Color. This program is for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult. No registration required.

Saturday Storytime

Join Diana Kane on Saturday, June 18th at 10 a.m. for a family storytime full of stories, songs and rhymes for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult. No registration required.

Bicycling with Quincycles for ages 8-12

Are you a kid who likes to ride your bike? Join Quincycles on Saturday June 18th at 10 a.m. for a morning of Bike Challenges designed to improve your cycling skills, Strategies to Stay Safe and have more fun riding, and even a Bike Trivia contest. We welcome riders between the ages of 8-12 for this program. Please bring your own bike and your own helmet.

Registration is required for this program. Register online, by phone at 617-376-2411 or in person in the Main

Historical Society To Host Evening Of Poetry, Music At Adams Academy June 2

Quincy Historical Society will present the debut reading of the just-published poem cycle, The Fore River, by Quincy native William Thibodeau, in an evening of poetry and music featuring Thibodeau and folksinger Chris Pahud, Thursday, June 2, at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Thibodeau grew up in the shadow of the Fore River Shipyard, where both his father and grandfather worked and where he worked as a young man. He is a founding member of the Carpenter Poets of Jamaica Plain, a fellowship of working artisans who write poetry. He has appeared on PBS and the Hallmark Channel and been featured in the Boston Globe. He has also led a series of poetry workshops at North Quincy High School.

Fore River is Thibodeau's third published volume. The poem cycle embraces his childhood memories of good and hard times, the majesty and terror of shipbuilding, and the history of the Fore River Yard from its glory days to its afterlife as memory.

"Fore River is a remarkable work," says Historical Society president Jim Edwards. "It stands in a proud tradition of American poems about working people's lives. Bill Thibodeau also joins artists like painter May Stevens and sculptor Carl Andre who draw inspiration from their childhood memories of Fore River."

Thibodeau's poetry will be complemented by a set of songs by Chris Pahud, a favorite performer on the greater Boston coffeehouse scene and a longtime member of the Historical Society. With a baritone voice that has been described by WUMB's Dave Palmenter as "rich" and "powerful", Chris sings of the sea, work, and loves lost and won.

Everyone is welcome to attend. Bill Thibodeau will sign books and Chris Pahud will sign CDs after the program.

The evening also serves as the Historical Society's Annual Meeting. Officers and trustees for the coming year will be elected.

Library Children's Room.

Quincycles is a volunteer group that advocates for bicycle infrastructure on our city streets and promotes responsible riding as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise in Quincy.

Full STEAM Ahead with Science Saturday - LEGO math

On Saturday, June 25th get ready to build and learn with LEGO bricks! We all know that LEGO bricks are a ton of fun to build with, but did you know you can use them for math skills too? Come in and find out all about it! We'll have two large bins of regular LEGO bricks to dig through for both building whatever you want and for doing some basic math - sorry, we will need the bricks back when you're done. We'll also have some larger bricks more suitable for younger children.

No registration is required.

Throughout the school year Full STEAM Ahead will explore the areas of Science, Technology, Engineering, Art and Math on the fourth Saturday of each month.

All programs sponsored and supported by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

What Is FICA?

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Receiving your first paycheck is an empowering milestone. Do you remember being a little shocked by the taxes that Uncle Sam takes out of each paycheck? Understanding how important your contribution is takes some of the sting away because your taxes are helping millions of Americans — and financially securing your today and tomorrow.

By law, employers must withhold Social Security taxes from workers' paychecks. While usually referred to as "Social Security taxes" on an employee's pay statement, sometimes the deduction is labeled as "FICA." This stands for Federal Insurance Contributions Act, a reference to the original Social Security Act. In some cases, you will see "OASDI," which stands for Old Age Survivors Disability Insurance, the official name for the Social Security Insurance program.

The taxes you pay now mean a lifetime of protection — for retirement in old age or in the event of disability. And when you die, your family (or future family) may be able to receive survivors benefits based on your work as well.

Right now you probably have family members — grandparents, for example — who already are enjoying Social Security benefits that your Social Security taxes help provide. Social Security is solvent now and will be through 2033. At that point, we'll be able to fund retirement benefits at 75 percent unless changes are made to the law. In the past, Social Security has evolved to meet the needs of a changing population — and you can count on Social security in the future.

Because you're a long way from retirement, you may have a tough time seeing the value of benefit payments that could be many decades in the future. But keep in mind that the Social Security taxes you're paying can provide valuable disability or survivors benefits in the event the unexpected happens. Studies show that of today's 20-year-olds, about one in four will become disabled; and about one in eight will die, before reaching retirement.

Be warned: if an employer offers to unlawfully pay you "under the table," you should refuse. They may try to sell it as a benefit to you since you get a few extra dollars in your net pay. But you're really only allowing the employer to deprive you from earning your Social Security credits. This could keep you from qualifying for any benefits, or result in you receiving less than you should.

Also, don't carry your Social Security card around with you. It's an important document you should safeguard and protect. If it's lost or stolen, it could fall into the hands of an identity thief.

HN Maritime Center Plans Draw Mixed Response

city's Committee Preservation Committee.

Duncan Mellor, the principal coastal engineer for Tighe & Bond, said the current boat ramp is not properly graded. The bottom of the single-lane ramp is too flat to allow boats to be launched during low tide.

"If you've been down to this ramp at low tide, it gets very flat at the bottom," Mellor said. "The problem with that is you don't have enough water depth to get your boat in the water before your exhaust goes in the water."

The city plans to install a 30-foot-wide, double-lane ramp in place of the current ramp. The new ramp will be made from pre-cast concrete, which Mellor said is preferred by regulatory agencies. Laforest said the permitting process for the ramp project is expected to take about six months, and the reconstruction of the ramp about 30 days.

The Houghs Neck Maritime Center is currently owned by the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation; the city operated the facility under a memorandum of understanding with the state agency that has expired, Laforest said. Quincy officials have met with the DCR regarding the maritime center, and would like the site transferred to the city before further work commences, she explained.

"We want to be sure that this is a municipal facility if we're doing all this public investment," Laforest said. "We left it at the table that there was going to be a short-term memorandum of understanding update and we would be working on a long-term solution."

State Rep. Tackey Chan, who was in attendance May 19, said the DCR has made no firm commitment regarding the future of the site. The conversation, he said, is still ongoing.

Lt. Bob Gillan of the Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit added that boat ramp would still be owned by the Massachusetts Department of Fish and Game even if the DCR agreed to transfer ownership of the maritime center building and parking lot to the city. That is also the case for boat ramps in Hingham, Weymouth, East Boston and Winthrop.

The city is seeking a $250,000 grant from the Seaport Economic Council for engineering and permitting a new maritime center building. Laforest was optimistic about receiving that grant as soon as June or September, when the state agency issues its next two series of grants. Laforest said the new maritime center building could possibly serve as a home for a community center, if the Houghs Neck Community Council supports that idea.

The public landing could also be rebuilt as part of the project. A breakwater, which Mellor said would be located offshore in the vicinity of Spiers Stand, is also on the table.

Koch's proposal for the maritime center expansion featured in the capital improvement plan includes the acquisition of three homes in the vicinity of the parking lot. Those homes would then be razed to make way for the expansion and renovation of the parking lot.

Laforest said the city would not seek to take the homes by eminent domain if the three homeowners did not want to sell their properties. She said the three homeowners have expressed an interest in selling those homes.

The acquisition of the Sea Street parking lot owned by the restaurant Louis was also included in the mayor's capital plan. The parking lot would serve both the maritime center and area businesses if the city acquired it.

Laforest said the acquisition of Louis' parking lot was first proposed by a resident during a previous public meeting, and supported by a majority of those in attendance at that meeting.

Residents, Laforest explained, were concerned about a possible condo development on site. She noted the city's Zoning Board of Appeals rejected a variance for a Wollaston Center restaurant because of parking concerns, only to have a Land Court judge overturn that decision, saying the restaurant could count spaces in the Wollaston MBTA station lot towards its parking requirements. Laforest said that could set a precedent for the Louis parking lot, where a developer could count a public parking lot at Brill Field towards their parking requirements.

Laforest said two developers have approached her about buying both Louis and its parking lot and building condos on site.

"I don't want a development on site that is not beneficial to the neighborhood," she stated.

Michael Cheney, a former Ward 1 councillor, was among those in attendance who questioned the proposal to expand the maritime center. He said the proposal would change the neighborhood's character and create more traffic.

"My mom and dad have an investment less than 100 feet from there. You're creating a parking lot where there is not a parking lot now. It's a parking lot within a residential community. You're changing the character of this community to be non-residential," Cheney said.

"By tearing these down and making a giant parking lot, the only thing you're doing is inviting traffic down Houghs Neck - everybody coming down here to use your regional facility."

Laforest said the concern about the site becoming a regional facility should have been raised before the site was acquired by the state.

"If you didn't want to share with the boating public beyond Houghs Neck, that was a discussion for 20 years ago," she said. "This is a regional boating facility. It's been a regional facility since the minute the state acquired it for public access. I can't undo that."

Residents in attendance suggested two locations in Quincy Point where a boat launch could be constructed - the Fore River Shipyard and on land near the CVS store on Southern Artery.

Laforest noted both of those sites are in designated port areas, which would preclude them from recreational use. Mellor said those sites also pose other challenges. The water at the shipyard is 35 feet deep - making it unsuitable for use as a recreational boat launch - and the Southern Artery site contains historic granite seawalls that would need to be removed.

Others in attendance were supportive of the proposal to improve the maritime center.

Chris Fox, a Merrymount boater, said it would allow more of the boating community to utilize the facility.

"If you're a person who trailers a sailboat, you can't use this. It's not an option," he said. "This idea - whether it's this large a scale or not - at least allows the entire boating community... to utilize a public ramp. Not a Houghs Neck ramp, but a Quincy public ramp."

Houghs Neck resident Suzanne Condon said the neighborhood has a chance to have a real maritime center. Condon said she had a boat for a decade after moving to Houghs Neck, but gave it to her sister because she had to pay to have it moored elsewhere in the city.

"I don't think this meeting tonight is about Louis' parking lot. I think this meeting tonight is about the opportunity to have a real marine center here," Condon said. "Are there going to be problems? Are there going to be issues that we all have to wrestle with together? Yes, but I think we have a real opportunity."

Infrastructure Work, Pedestrian Plazas In New QC Plan

and Development Plan for Quincy Center was introduced at Monday night's City Council meeting. It was referred to the council's ordinance committee, which will meet to discuss the plan June 6 at 6 p.m., beginning with a presentation on the document from administration officials and a public hearing where residents will have the chance to comment on the proposed amendment.

The URDP provides an outline of the city's strategy for redeveloping Quincy Center. If approved by the council, it would not authorize any new borrowing or the disposition of city-owned land for development; both would require additional council votes.

The proposed URDP amendment, which would be the fourth change made to the document if it were ultimately approved, is based on recommendations made by Redgate Real Estate Advisors in a March 2015 report to the city. Koch hired the Boston-based firm to serve as a consultant for the redevelopment of Quincy Center in 2014, after the city cut ties with previous master developer Street-Works earlier that year.

The proposed amendment to the URDP reflects the city's new role as the master developer for Quincy Center, Koch said in a letter to councillors.

"The city shall take the lead role in preparing city-owned sites for redevelopment by implementing necessary infrastructure projects to improve public safety, traffic, transportation, modernized utilities, and new open spaces and parks, enhancing the city's attractiveness as a place to live, work, recreate and invest in economic development," Koch said.

"The city intends to vigorously advance the momentum we have gained over the past year," the mayor added, "to ensure that we achieve a number of milestones in the forthcoming year to trigger the redevelopment of the Hancock Lot and the Hancock Street corridor."

The plan for the Hancock Lot – a five-acre site with 525 parking spaces – includes the construction of a 600-space garage at a cost of $18 million and $20.48 million worth of public infrastructure improvements. Those infrastructure improvements would include the construction of 3,800 linear feet of new roadways to provide access to the parking garage and entrances onto Hancock and Chestnut Streets, as well as streetscape improvements on abutting streets, and underground utility work.

Additionally, the city would acquire 23-31 Cottage St. and 1546 Hancock St. and demolish the buildings on site, as well as the acquisition of the Messina lot. The acquisition of those properties is expected to cost $9.5 million, the relocation of existing businesses $2.42 million and demolition $375,000.

The URDP envisions the redevelopment of the Hancock Lot would include, a total of 283 residential units, 56,790 square feet of commercial/retail space, and a 125-room hotel.

Two developers have previously announced plans to undertake new developments on the Hancock Lot. LBC Boston plans to build the 125-room hotel along the 1500 block of Hancock Street, with a portion of the work on the site of the parking lot, and Peter O'Connell a 15-story high-rise apartment building fronting the Dennis Ryan Parkway.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for the mayor, said Tuesday land disposition agreements for those two projects would not be submitted to the council before the body recesses for the summer next month. They would be submitted in the fall, after the council approves the URDP amendment.

"We don't want to throw too much at the council all at once," Walker said. "We're going to go step-by-step."

The vision for the Hancock Lot also includes a new pedestrian plaza in the middle of the site. The plaza would allow for pedestrian circulation, outdoor café space and seating areas, and pop-up markets such as a farmers' market, for example. Two pedestrian access points at either end of Cottage Avenue would lead to the central plaza, lined with retail and restaurant space at the ground level as well as space for vending carts.

The plan for the 5.3-acre Ross Garage site includes the demolition of the existing garage, which will begin next month. The demolition and related work will be paid for using a $5.8 million MassWorks grant awarded to the city last year.

As part of the redevelopment of the Ross Garage, the city would construct one or two parking garages, with more than 1,000 spaces total. The cost for the parking facilities is estimated at $36 million. Public infrastructure improvements – including the realignment of Ross Way and the extension of Cliveden Street to Burgin Parkway – would cost an additional $21.42 million.

One property – 100 Parkingway – would be targeted for acquisition by the city and demolished. The URDP estimates it would cost $508,000 to acquire the building, $100,000 to relocate the business located there, and $100,000 to raze the structure.

The redevelopment of the Ross Garage is anticipated to add 327 residential units, 96,000 square feet of retail/commercial space, 300,000 square feet of office space, and 90 hotel rooms. New pedestrian space and plazas would be included there as well, though their design is not specified in the URDP amendment.

The URDP anticipates the city would issue $55 million in district improvement financing (DIF) bonds to pay for a portion of the costs associated with redevelopment. The DIF bonds are paid back using new tax revenue generated in Quincy Center. The council has authorized borrowing $410 million in DIF bonds to date.

Walker said the $55 million in new DIF bonds included in the URDP amendment is based on preliminary cost estimates, and the city could wind up borrowing less money once the costs are further refined.

"These are all estimates based on the roadmap here," he stated.

The sale of the Hancock Lot and Ross Garage site to developers is expected to provide more than $21 million to the city – $9.85 million from the sale of the Hancock Lot and $12 from the Ross Garage site.

Additionally, the city anticipates using $40 million state Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) money to pay for some of the costs.

The URDP does not anticipate using general obligation bonds – paid back out of the city's general fund – or parking revenue to pay for any of the costs associated with the outlined work.

Council Seeks Report On Potential Downtown Tax Incentives

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors want administration officials to review whether tax breaks can be used to help bring new development to Quincy Center, and whether it would be wise to offer such incentives.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci introduced a resolution Monday night asking Mayor Thomas Koch's administration to review whether tax incentives could be used to spur redevelopment in Quincy Center. The resolution seeks an analysis of how those tax incentives – which are allowed under Massachusetts law – would be used in the downtown and whether it would be advisable to consider them.

The council approved the resolution on an 8-0 vote, sending it to the administration for consideration. Councillor Joseph Finn was not in attendance Monday.

Palmucci said the developers could make payments for items such as affordable housing and receive a break on property taxes for a certain period of time after construction, instead of having them pay full property taxes and not pay into the affordable housing fund and others.

"The way I would like to see it used, is rather than incentivizing development downtown by agreeing in the (urban renewal) covenant to waive the art fund, the affordable housing piece and contributions to the parking structures and the parking needs downtown, the next developer pays into those funds at a full rate – so the taxpayers won't have to on the upfront – and then they get a benefit in the back end where they have a discounted real estate tax moving forward," Palmucci stated.

"Even if that's not the direction the administration chooses to take with this, it at least gives the mayor another tool in the toolbox to invite developers in and try to incentivize the right kind of growth downtown."

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain said it was a good idea to consider other ways the city could attract new developers to Quincy Center.

"I think this is a great idea. I think it's always good to take an opportunity to sharpen those pencils and think of how we can best be positioning ourselves for growth in the downtown area," Cain said, noting a new development plan for Quincy Center that includes $128.7 million in infrastructure work and public improvements had just been unveiled moments earlier.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, who is the chairman of the council's finance committee, said the conversation about tax incentives is one worth having.

"I think these are substantive discussions we should be having as a city," he said. "Anytime there is a potential to mitigate risk on behalf of the taxpayer, I certainly believe that that conversation is worth some serious vetting."

Croall did note, however, that the council has already authorized $40 million in district improvement financing (DIF) bonds – and the new downtown plan calls for as much as $55 million in new DIF bonds – which are paid back using new tax revenue generated in Quincy Center. He wanted to know what impact tax incentives would have on the ability to pay back those debts without dipping into the general fund.

ESOPHAGEAL CANCER LINKED TO GUM DISEASE

Cancer is not one disease. It is, instead, a group of diseases with a variety of different causes and treatments. As researchers delve into the many possible causative factors, they uncover information that may seem unlikely and surprising. One such discovery recently came to light when researchers found that a bacterium (Porphyromonas gingivalis) that contributes to gum disease was present in nearly two-thirds (61 percent) of the cancerous tissue samples taken from patients with esophageal cancer. This type of cancer begins in the tube that moves food from the throat into the stomach. It is difficult to diagnose in its early stages, and usually progresses rapidly. The hope is that treating gum disease may help prevent its occurrence.

This informative column on esophageal cancer has been brought to you as a public service. We stress the importance of preventive dental care for the entire family. When was the last time you had your teeth checked by a professional? Call us now at 617-479-6220 and schedule an appointment. We will only do what is best for you, and we will not compromise. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. If it is proven that P. gingivalis actually causes esophageal cancer, a dental exam may become a screening tool for the disease.

Mosquito Spraying Starts Next Week

The Quincy Health Department has received notice from the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project that early morning application (ULV) of the pesticide Zenivex (EPA Reg#2724-807), for the control of nuisance and/or disease carrying adult mosquitoes is scheduled to begin during the final week of May and will continue (weather permitting) throughout the summer months until late September.

Applications in Quincy will be made on Thursday evenings, weather permitting.

Residents requesting ULV application can contact the Quincy Health Department by 10 a.m. on Wednesday to request mosquito fogging.

For further information, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project via telephone at: (781) 762-3681.

New City Ordinance Would Crack Down On Wage Theft

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new ordinance introduced Monday night would require contractors bidding on city projects to disclose any criminal or civil judgments, citations and debarments against them or any subcontractor in the prior three years.

Councillors Brian Palmucci and Noel DiBona introduced the ordinance, meant to crack down on wage theft, at Monday's meeting of the City Council. It was referred to the ordinance and oversight committee for review at a future meeting. The oversight committee, chaired by Palmucci, has held two hearings this spring on wage theft and the misclassification of employees in the construction industry, and plans to hold additional ones in the future.

Palmucci said the language in the ordinance proposed Monday night mirrors that of a bill pending on Beacon Hill meant to rein in the misclassification of employees.

The ordinance would require the Purchasing Department or any other city department issuing a bid or a request for proposal to notify bidders they are required to disclose any criminal or civil judgment, administrative citation, final administrative determination or department issued against them or a subcontractor in the previous three years.

Bidders would be required to certify they had no such infraction against them in the previous three years, or prove they paid all relevant fines, fees and damages to aggrieved parties if they in event they did have in infraction levied against them during the prior three years.

Bidders who had committed a wage theft violation in the previous three years would be required to have a wage bond or other type of insurance.

Successful bidders for city contracts would have to provide monthly payroll records to the city, and also notify the city of any judgment entered against them during the duration of the contract within five days.

Violation of the ordinance or relevant wage loss could result in termination or suspension of the contract with the city, and debarment from future city contracts within three years.

In addition to the proposed ordinance on wage theft, Palmucci also introduced a resolution in support of the Senate bill pending on Beacon Hill.

That resolution was approved in a 6-0 vote, with Councillors Ian Cain and Kirsten Hughes both voting present. Councillor Joseph Finn was not in attendance Monday.

Adams-Hancock Green Work Begins

Work for the next phase of the Adams-Hancock Green is now getting underway with infrastructure work and final landscaping for the portion of the park nearest City Hall.

Funded by a $4.2 million state grant, the work will include installation of new water, drainage, and electrical services for the park - which will connect the historic First Parish Church to City Hall and the Quincy Center MBTA station with an expansive new public space.

The park project centers around the upcoming closure of Hancock Street in the area immediately in front of the First Parish Church and transforming the traffic pattern around the church into 2-way traffic.

This phase of the project will also include final design and landscaping for the park area on the north side of City Hall - including the installation of new engraved bricks for the "Walk of Names" in front of City Hall.

The landscape improvements will also include trees, plantings, walls, benches, and steps to provide a visual connection to the newly restored old City Hall building.

Construction fencing is now being installed around City Hall - but public access to the building will be maintained throughout construction.

This summer's work will include the creation of a temporary park space in the area between the First Parish Church and City Hall that is currently Hancock Street in preparation for the final construction phase of the park.

Work is anticipated to continue through July.

Norfolk Sheriff's K-9 Officer Honored With State Award

Sheriff Michael Bellotti announces that one of his officers, Quincy native Lt. Jack Kilrain, received a Correctional Employee of the Year award at the State House for his role in a successful search for a suicidal man who took an overdose of pills and disappeared into a forest.

Gov. Charlie Baker presented the Meritorious Recognition award to Kilrain during a ceremony at the State House on May 20. Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito and Sheriff Bellotti also took part in the presentation in front of a standing-room-only House chamber.

"Lt. Kilrain is the chief of our K9 unit and is an integral part of our command staff at the Norfolk Sheriff's Office," Sheriff Bellotti said. "He is a credit to the uniform, and we are very proud to have him representing the Norfolk Sheriff's Office."

In 2011, Kilrain received his first Correctional Employee of the Year award for being part of a search team that tracked down an elderly woman with dementia who had become lost in a swamp in Millis. She was found waist-deep in water as darkness fell on a winter night.

In his latest award-winning effort, Kilrain and his K9 partner, Lolek, found the suicidal man with a weak pulse and slashed wrist, lying on his back on a rock in Needham Town Forest on July 2, 2015. Emergency medical response revived the man.

Mobile Friendly Norfolk Registry Of Deeds Website

Register William P. O'Donnell announces a re-design of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds website, www.norfolkdeeds.org, making it easier for users of portable devices, including those using smartphones and tablets, to navigate the website.

"In today's world, more and more individuals, particularly young people, are browsing the Internet with a mobile device. People are constantly looking for information and seeking more accessible ways to obtain it. They don't want to be chained to their home or work desk to get things done," O'Donnell said.

"Having a more accessible and friendly web presence for mobile phone users is a critical component to ensuring our customers experience is a good one. One of the major benefits of the redesigned website is the re-sizing of its content to fit on a phone or tablet's screen."

O'Donnell listed some of the practical ways that mobile phone and tablets users will benefit from the newly redesigned website.

"It will be easier to obtain information on acquiring a copy of your property deed; appreciate the advantages in filing a Homestead application; seek foreclosure information; study county real estate data; learn how to avoid paying an outrageous price for a copy of your deed; understand the importance of ensuring mortgage discharges are filed in a timely manner and the advantages to sign-up for the Registry's free Consumer Notification Program, alerting you to any recording changes made to your property," O'Donnell said.

"Staying up-to-date on the latest technologies is truly critical when it comes to responding to the changing needs of the consumers," the register said. "I am proud of our redesigned website and the way it ensures a more mobile friendly experience. I want to thank my staff and our website design vendor Getfused for their outstanding work on the project."

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior'

Because we live in a very small house, my twins – a daughter and son – sleep in bunkbeds in the same bedroom. They are now four and it's time to do away with the teddy bear theme. What ideas do you have for décor that will suit both a boy and a girl? Carly

First, ask them what they'd like! It's good for a child's development of self-esteem if they play a part in the selection process. If they like Disney characters, for example, a large poster each of Mickey and Minnie would bridge the gender divide. You could also do pirates and princesses. But they will outgrow these, too.

My suggestion is to forego a theme and concentrate on color and fabric choices. If you have a neutral wall color (like white, cream, beige, or gray) you can paint their bureaus in colors they choose (as long as the colors have the same value or intensity). For bedspreads, find denim comforters and customize the pillows according to their tastes. Hang two large bulletin boards on the wall and allow each child to add paintings, coloring book pages, or other art they have created.

Because it is not a "public" room in your home, you can actually divide it up anyway to fit your children's wishes. If you watch the TV show Black-ish, the young twins have different wall-papers (bright geometrics, as I recall) behind their headboards and it's adorable.

The lamp on my bureau is a wee bit short. Any ideas to boost its height without spending extra money? Lynette Sure, get three books with the same color spines (or spray paint them or cover them) and place the lamp on top. You can also stuff a gift box with lots of crumpled newspaper and wrap it as a decorative box for the same lifting purpose.

Do you have a question on interior decorating? Send it to barbara@sec-interior.com and it may get printed in a future issue of The Quincy Sun.

Barbara Graceffa is president and CEO of Secretary of the Interior, an interior decorating company in Quincy. To learn more about Barbara's services or to see her portfolio, visit www.sec-interior.com.

mayor for downtown development, told The Sun previously.

Two temporary lots will open to accommodate vehicles displaced by the closure of the garage. The larger of the two will be located on the vacant Messina-owned parcel at the corner of Hancock Street and Hannon Parkway, adjacent to the Cliveden Place development. The second lot will be located on the city-owned land directly across Hannon Parkway from the Messina lot.

Geary said the two temporary lots would have room for a total of 120 vehicles, and the open-air surface presently next to the Ross Garage had about 80 spaces available. The city also hopes to shift some of the vehicles over to the Hancock Lot, which Geary said had approximately 160 extra spaces available on average on a daily basis.

Once the Ross Garage is demolished, a new surface lot would be built on its footprint. The temporary lot there would have room for approximately 200 vehicles, and should be ready to open by the fall.

TEMPLE STREET (foreground) looking north toward the 1300 block area of Hancock Street will close to vehicular traffic May 31 through June 3 so the road can be rebuilt as part of the Adam-Green transportation project. The portion of Hancock Street between Granite Street and Temple Street will be closed to northbound traffic during that time as well, with vehicles detoured onto Maple Street.

BBB Offers Tips For Hiring A Trustworthy Moving Company

To avoid a moving mishap, Better Business Bureau Serving Eastern MA, ME, RI & VT (BBB) recommends checking out reliable movers online with BBB's Accredited Business Directory. Here you can read customer reviews and find out more information on over one hundred BBB Accredited movers.

May is National Moving Month and BBB urges consumers to check out these tips for hiring a trustworthy moving company:

Do your research. Look up moving companies on bbb.org. Many movers that are BBB Accredited Businesses are also AMSA Pro-Movers; these companies have pledged to uphold high standards of trust and to resolve complaints quickly. Note the length of time a mover has been in business and read reviews from previous customers.

Get at least three estimates. Written, in-home estimates help you make an informed decision. Show the mover everything that needs to be moved. Be wary of unusually high or low estimates. If someone says they can give you an estimate over the phone or by email, it's possible they're trying to scam you.

Get all agreements in writing. Read everything carefully and make sure you have it all in writing. Get copies of everything you sign, especially the most important document, the bill of lading, which is the receipt for your goods and the contract for their transportation. Never sign any blank forms. Be on the lookout for fine print or any exclusions to your agreement.

Know your rights. Interstate movers are required by law to provide you with certain information that explains the moving process, as well as your rights and responsibilities during and after the move. Ask for proof of licenses, insurance, etc.

Protect your possessions. Make sure that your mover provides full-value protection insurance for any lost or damaged possessions.

Note that insurance is by the pound, so expensive items such as a flat-panel television may need additional replacement cost coverage in case they are damaged in transit.

Be wary of unusual requests. If a mover asks for a large down payment or full payment in advance, that may be a warning sign. And if a company says it won't return your items to you without more money than you agreed to pay, contact BBB or local law enforcement for help.

Take your valuables with you. Cash, coins, jewelry, photographs and important papers should be taken with you or shipped separately using a shipping service with tracking numbers and insurance.

Ask questions. Don't be afraid to ask questions about anything you don't understand. If the moving company can't or won't answer your questions, you might want to look for another mover.

Over 740 Graduate From Quincy College Friday

Associate Degrees in Arts, Sciences; Certificates From The College To Be Presented

Kenneth S. Ansin, community banking director of Enterprise Bank and Trust, founder of The Fitchburg Plan, a private and public sector community economic development initiative, and long-time, committed community advocate will address Quincy College 2016 graduates at the Quincy College commencement Friday, May 27 at noon at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

Over 740 students will receive associate degrees in arts (AA) or sciences (AS), or certificates from the college.

Ansin's career began in his family-owned shoe factories of New England. Following his college graduation from University of Massachusetts Amherst with a bachelors degree in political science, his first job was to turn the failing businesses around. His clients included Cole Haan, LL Bean, Nordstrom and Neiman Marcus.

During his decade-long tenure as president of LB Evans and Ansewn Footwear Companies, Ansin was an early Investor/Director in Enterprise Bank and Trust Company (EBTC) of Lowell, Massachusetts, and later a founding investor/director of United Site Services Corporation (USS) of Mansfield, Massachusetts.

In addition to his experience in the private sector, over the past decade Ansin has expanded his attention to include government and the not-for-profit sectors. In 2004, he started work in the West African country of Mali, to build schools and increase private enterprise, in conjunction with Save the Children and Oxfam. He is a frequently quoted expert in the area of micro-finance, having worked with Grameen Bank and BRAC, in Bangladesh and India, and most recently as former Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick's advisor in micro-finance and private enterprise.

A native of North Central Massachusetts, Ansin founded the Ansin Consulting Group (ACG) upon temporarily moving to the San Francisco Bay Area in 2009. ACG provides critical assistance to growing, private sector social enterprises, not-for-profits, and C-level executives.

Ansin has been an adjunct/guest lecturer at Brandeis University, Bentley College, Fitchburg State University, and Mount Wachusett Community College. In addition to a Bachelors in Political Science from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Ansin holds a Masters in Public Administration from Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government. He currently serves as the Community Banking Director for Enterprise Bank, a $2.3 billion community commercial bank headquartered in Lowell, Massachusetts, with 23 branches throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Ansin has served as a director of Root Capital, Applewild School, the United Way, the Fitchburg Art Museum, Chamber of Commerce of North Central Mass, Vietnam Veterans of America Foundation, and the Seven Hills Foundation. In 2012 he founded The Fitchburg Plan, which brings private and public sector leaders together, in order to harness economic development in re-imagining the Fitchburg community.

Quincy College commencement will also include student speakers and faculty leadership participation.

"At Quincy College we are focused on teaching and learning, one student at a time," said Quincy College President Peter H. Tsafaras, J.D. "As such, we are pleased that we have played a part in the success our graduates have had to date and are confident that they have been prepared for the challenges and opportunities that await them in the future, wherever their lives may take them.

"At Commencement, we will hear from educators and activists who have used their education to better the world, locally and globally. Commencement will be an inspiring day to commemorate and celebrate our students achievements and usher them toward new adventures."

Student speaker Marion Mukundane, a native of Mbarara, Uganda, a Gamma Beta Phi honor society member and criminal justice student will address her fellow graduates.

The Mace Bearer for Commencement will be Quincy College President's Award for Faculty of the Year recipient, Criminal Justice instructor Matthew Delaney who has been teaching at Quincy College since 2009. Prior to working at the college, Delaney worked in the law enforcement and private security fields for almost 20 years. He has held positions ranging from a senior special investigator for the Massachusetts General Hospital's Department of Police and Security and Senior Investigator for EMC's Global Security Department to the Manager of Public Safety for the Massachusetts Convention Center Authority while simultaneously serving a sixteen year career as a Non-Commissioned Officer for the Massachusetts Army National Guard.

The Quincy College Faculty Marshal will be Sabrina Mohan. Mohan has been a full time faculty member in the Academic Division of Professional Programs at Quincy College since 2011 and is also a Quincy College President's Award for Faculty of the Year recipient.

After completing her undergraduate degree from Wheaton College, Mohan received her Masters degree from Wheelock College and an advanced post Masters certificate in Contemplative Clinical practice from Smith College. She is presently pursuing her doctorate degree from Northeastern University. Prior to coming to Quincy College, Mohan worked in multiple human services settings both internationally and domestically. Internationally, Ms. Mohan spent time in Calcutta, India working in a hospital with leprosy patients. She also spent time with children who were orphaned due to malaria outbreaks in Accra, Ghana and taught English and nutritional skills in villages just outside of Antigua, Guatemala.

Committee Hears Update On Parks/Playground Projects

By TOM GORMAN

The school committee was updated on parks and playground projects that are underway or about to get started.

Park, Forestry and Cemetery Director Christopher Cassani discussed Teel Field, the Quincy High School plaza and Parker School playground with the committee on May 18.

"These are projects we are extremely proud of and have long term benefits for the schools," he said.

Cassani explained that the $12 million Teel Field project in North Quincy is on schedule and the new artificial turf installation should be finished in time for the fall sports season.

"The field will be ready by Sept. 1 for practice," he said.

Located off Newbury Avenue, the 2.5-acre field is home for North Quincy High School varsity soccer, lacrosse and football practice as well as youth league games.

Teel Field is located on Newbury Avenue next to North Quincy High School. It is being completely redone and in addition to a modern turf, it will also feature 600-seat bleachers, lights for night games, scoreboard, a sound system, restrooms and a concession stand.

Once the field is completed, Cassani said work would begin on creating a 120-plus space parking lot adjacent to the field along Newbury Avenue and Hunt Street. The field will be connected to the North Quincy High campus.

Cassani said the new field will allow for better scheduling for games.

"Once the field is complete, we will have two first rate fields - one for Quincy and one for North Quincy," he said.

The Quincy High School memorial plaza is "the final milestone" of the school that opened a few years ago, according to Cassani. The plaza, located at the front of the building, is nearing completion and features landscaping and a wall.

He explained that the original design and cost had issues and that's when his department stepped in to take over the project and saved the city about $500,000.

"The work is of the highest quality," he said. "It's an absolutely beautiful landscape. It's a big point of pride"

He noted that students are often seen throwing Frisbees.

"It's what you want to see there," he said.

When the project is completed, Cassani said a ceremony will be held to dedicate the new plaza.

Cassani said the $75,000 Parker School playground expansion project will get underway this summer and will be completed by fall. He said he is working closely with parents to select the proper playground equipment.

"Things work better when we work together," he said, adding that the children would also have input for the project.

He explained that his department is constantly maintaining playgrounds in the city, noting that there is vandalism and aging equipment to deal with.

Cassani said that Safety Fiber - a mulch-like material - has been placed at four playgrounds and that it is refreshed at others when needed.

Committee member James DeAmicis questioned about how poison ivy near the playgrounds is being handled. Cassani said that an herbicide, Avenger, is used and is deemed safe for playground use.

Josiah Quincy House Open June 4

Historic New England's Josiah Quincy House in Wollaston will open for the season with free tours on Saturday, June 4, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard. Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family was documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

The Quincy House recently underwent a three-year focus that included the repainting of several rooms based on the scientific analysis of the original paint colors. In addition, curators reinstalled rooms based on Eliza Susan Quincy's journal and photographs taken in the 1880s.

The Quincy House will be open from June to October on the first and third Saturdays of the month. The house, located at 20 Muirhead Street in Wollaston, also offers school programs, and tours by appointment.

St. Moritz Nature Trail In Blue Hills Reservation Re-Opens

The St. Moritz Nature Trail - part of Blue Hills Reservation with access in West Quincy - recently re-opened.

Parking is available at Shea Rink, 651 Willard St.

The Friends of the Blue Hills, the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), and the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development (PCD) sponsored the re-opening ceremony in conjunction with annual "Cleaner Greener Quincy Day."

Part of the ceremony included the unveiling of a new DCR sign along Willard Street that identifies St. Moritz as part of the Blue Hills Reservation. DCR also installed log benches overlooking St. Moritz Pond.

The scenic Nature Trail passes a wetland and natural spring.

Between 1929 and the early 1940s, the St. Moritz area was the site of a very popular Winter Carnival, which drew tens of thousands of spectators and top athletes in the country. The two ponds were used for figure skating exhibitions, hockey and barrel jumping. jump, the remnants of which There was also a 400' ski are still visible today.

School Records, Personal Bests, Outstanding Performances Accent Quincy-North Quincy Meet

By BILL GRIFFIN

The two rivals almost always bring out the best in each other.

There were school records, personal bests and numerous outstanding performances in the dual meet between the boys and girls track teams from Quincy and North Quincy at Faxon Field last week.

Freshman Nathan Sleiman captured the triple jump and the high hurdles, junior Jimmy Cannon won the 400 and 800, and senior Nick Kelly took a first in the javelin and a second in the shotput to lead the North boys to a 56-43 decision over the Presidents.

Junior Izzie Flaherty was a double winner in the high jump and the hurdles, and sophomore Julia Klincewicz and sophomore Devin Hiltunen each added a first and a second to lead the Red Raiders to a 72-36 decision over Quincy in the girls meet.

"There were so many personal bests that they were hard to count," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "The rivalry is just right for this meet. The intensity and the competition pushes the athletes to do their best. It's the right chemistry for outstanding performances."

One of the best came from Quincy senior Mike Munroe who remained undefeated in the discus and shot put in dual meets. For the second straight meet, he set personal bests in each event. He threw a school-record 58 feet in the shot and a personal best of 154' 02" in the discus.

"I'm happy that it came in my rivalry meet," said Munroe who set 60 feet as a goal in the shot before the outdoor season began. "It's been a roller-coaster season.

I'd have one personal best and then a low throw. I've been more consistent lately, especially this week. I'd like to do well at states, break 60 feet and maybe aim at the state record of 62'9".

"I've been over 60 feet in practice. It's just a matter of doing it in a meet."

Cannon won the 400 in 57.8 and the 800 in 2:10.2. He is a gifted, versatile runner who excels in everything from the middle to long distances. He already qualified for states in the two mile with a time of 10:16.

previous meet with a throw of 181'1" which is the longest throw in the state this year. He won the javelin against Quincy with a toss of 138'06" and took second in the shot with a 48'05".

Kelly has an interesting story. In less than three months, he has gone from someone who never threw the javelin to the holder of the school record. This was a quick trip.

"I had always played baseball through tenth grade," he said. "Someone suggested that I try the javelin. I put the work in and it feels great. I was a catcher, and the javelin has the same throwing motion. I think it connects pretty well to baseball."

Sleiman has had a breakout season as a freshman. Against Quincy, he took the triple jump with a 40'09" jump and the 110 high hurdles with a 17.8. He has a triple jump of 41 feet and has run a 17.3 in the high hurdles this season. He has the best triple jump and best time in the high hurdles of any ninth-grader in the state.

As an eighth-grader, he was nationally ranked fourth indoors and eighth outdoors in the triple jump.

"I just started in the seventh grade because it was a good way to stay in shape, and I've enjoyed putting the work in," he said. "My goal is to do well in states and see if I can improve my personal best in each event."

Sophomore Shorn Hawthorne had a terrific meet for the Presidents taking firsts in the 100 (11.4) and high jump (5' 07") and a second in the triple jump (36' 03"). One of the best races of the day came in the 100 when Hawthorne nipped North's Aidan Brown (11.9). The two also duelled on Thanksgiving when Hawthorne played defensive back for the Presidents, and Brown was a multiple offensive threat for North.

"I didn't get off to the best start, but I was able to pick it up as the race went on," said Hawthorne. "I remember Aidan from football. The rivalry definitely motivated me. I wanted to accomplish something in this meet. My goal now is to qualify for states."

Brown, who will play football for UNH, has already qualified for states with a long jump of 20' 8". He took second in the long jump against Quincy with a leap of 19' 06".

"I had trouble hitting my mark today," said Brown. "I'm excited about playing at UNH. They have a great program up there."

Frank Nunziato (23.9 in 200), and Dominic Laptiste (20 feet in the long jump) also grabbed first places for Quincy. Nunziato also had thirds in the long jump with an 18' 04" and the triple jump with 36' 02".

For North, Aidan Ring won the mile in 5:29.2.

North athletes who took seconds were Nelson Walinjom (26.5 in 200), Ho Jie Lin (1:01.0 in 400), Kevin White (2:26.3 in 800), Jonah Trujillo (98' 09" in discus) and Tim Layden (126' 06" in javelin).

Quincy's Nick Oulette was second in the mile with a 6:19.2.

In the girls meet, freshman Abby Murphy and senior Nicole Jorgensen had fine performances for the Presidents. Murphy was a double winner in the 400 (1:06.2) and the 800 (2:42.5) while Jorgensen took firsts in the discus (76' 06") and the javelin (116 feet).

Jorgensen's winning toss in the javelin was a school record. Like Kelly on the boys' side, this is an interesting story. This is the first season, indoor or outdoor, that Jorgensen has been on a track team or thrown the javelin. Presto. A school record.

"There's been a lot of work on technique, and the lifting has definitely helped me," said Jorgensen who will play basketball on a full scholarship at URI. "This is my first season with an individual, not a team sport. It's a lot different. There are no teammates to back you up if you make a mistake."

For North, Flaherty won the high hurdles in 17.9 and took the high jump with a leap of 4' 10". Flaherty has qualified for states and had a personal best of 5' 0" in the high jump in her first meet of the season. Against Quincy, she was well over the bar at 5' 0" with one jump, but just grazed the bar with a trailing elbow to jar it loose.

"I had my best high jump and my best time in the hurdles in my first meet."

GARDEN VARIETY EXERCISE

There's no question that gardening is a calming and fulfilling endeavor that cultivates a connection to the cycle of life and heightens spirituality. It's also a potentially rigorous form of exercise that poses as much of a threat of injury as working out in a gym or running on the street. As you put on your gardening gloves and reach for the rake or shovel, bear in mind that bending over, kneeling down, pushing, pulling, lifting, and hauling can all lead to muscle strains, ligament sprains, and tendonitis. Performing repetitive motions while gardening can give rise to a host of mechanical problems within the body. Chiropractic treatment can help gardeners in the same way that it proves beneficial to athletes.

Is gardening one of the hobbies you pursue? At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are ready to work with you to alleviate your discomfort and restore you to better health as quickly as possible. We will go to extraordinary lengths to educate our communities about the benefits of chiropractic in restoring and maintaining the health of every man, woman, and child, safely and without harm. We welcome you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. Gardeners should perform stretching and warm-up exercises before working in the garden as a means of averting injury.

Hiltunen took the 200 in 26.4 and grabbed second in the long jump with a 15' 01". Klinecicz won the triple with a 31' 01" and was second in the 400 with a 1:08.8.

"My 200 was pretty good today," said Hiltunen. "My times have improved as the season has gone along. They are better than last year. I've done weight-training and that has helped a lot."

North's Melody Umoren won the shot put with a 34' 04" and took third in the javelin with an 83' 01". Allison Wong won the 100 in 13.3 for the Red Raiders while Jessie Zhang won the mile in 7:56.25.

Alex Case had an excellent showing for Quincy. She took the long jump with a 15' 10.5" and grabbed second in the 200 with a 27.0. Case has qualified for states in the 100, 200, and long jump.

Mia Healy had two seconds and a third for North. She took second in the 100 (13.7) and the triple jump (29 feet). She was third in the long jump with a 13' 09".

Ivy Tang (3:11.0 in the 800) and Jen Butka (51' 04" in the discus) earned seconds for North.

Isabelle Doherty (19.4 in the high hurdles), Ciana Williams (4' 4" in the high jump), Taisha Alexandre (107' 06" in the javelin), and Kezia Milenga (28' 01.5" in the shot) took seconds for Quincy.

QCAP Money Wise Workshop May 26

Quincy Community Action Programs will host a "Operation Money Wise" workshop Thursday, May 26 from 6 to 8 p.m. at QCAP, 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor.

The workshop is open to everyone but special emphasis on military service members, veterans and families.

Topics include financial goal setting, external and internal obstacles to success, monthly spending plans, tips for decreasing expenses and increasing income, online resources for military and veterans' benefits and creation of cash flow and balance sheet financial statement.

Registration is required.

NeighborWorks Golf Tournament At Brookmeadow Country Club June 10

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will host its 17th Annual Mulligan Golf Tournament Friday, June 10 at the Brookmeadow Country Club in Canton.

The event will begin at 8:30 a.m. and feature 18 holes of golf plus a luncheon, poker, a silent auction and prizes. Proceeds benefit NeighborWorks' programs to develop housing for people and families without a home, including battered women and their children and adults with disabilities. The organization also has developed numerous homes specifically for returning veterans and their families.

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Executive Director Robert Corley noted that the Mulligan Tournament takes its name from the golf term for a "do-over," or second chance.

"Proceeds from the Mulligan Tournament help us give people a second chance," Corley said. "It's estimated that on any given night over 100,000 veterans are homeless. The Mulligan Tournament helps us raise the funds needed to give our returning heroes a safe and affordable place to call home."

The registration fee for the Mulligan Tournament is $125 per player and includes golf, use of a golf cart and a sit-down luncheon. Tournament sponsorship opportunities are also available.

To register online or become a tournament sponsor, visit www.nwsoma.org or call Janine Vlassakis at (617) 770-2227, ext. 23 for more information.

Atherton Hough School 'Touch-A-Truck' June 18

Atherton Hough Elementary School will host a "Touch-a-Truck" fundraiser Saturday, June 18 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the school, 1084 Sea St., Quincy.

Youngsters are invited to interact with construction vehicles and learn hands-on about the vehicles seen in the neighborhood. Trucks include a fire engine, sheriff's command center, street sweeper, ambulance, Bobcats, mini excavator, large dump truck, police cruiser, postal truck and more.

fer children a chance to meet the men and women who operate these machines.

The fundraiser will feature prize raffles, a DJ, face painting, food and a police K-9 demonstration. Admission is $5 per person.

Q's Desmond Outduels NQ's Helfrich For 5-2 Win

Seniors Go The Distance On A Special Night For 'Sully'

By BILL GRIFFIN

On a night which had deep meaning for the baseball community in the city, before the largest crowd at Adams Field in years, a senior who appreciated well the importance of it all stepped up and won the baseball game.

Cody Desmond sketched a fine final image for a terrific two sport career at Quincy High. The senior lefty threw a complete-game four-hitter and struck out eight. He also had a double, two singles, two RBI and two runs scored to lead the Presidents past North Quincy, 5-3, in a Patriot League game Saturday night.

The game was played after a ceremony honoring Steve Sullivan, North Quincy's pitching coach who passed away in March.

"This is the greatest feeling ever," said Desmond. "To go through my career without losing to North in football or baseball is unbelievable. This is, by far, the most fans who have ever seen me pitch. It was a special night.

"I didn't know Coach Sullivan personally. I knew him enough to say hello, but I could tell from the way everyone talked about him and from the ceremony tonight that he was a special man who touched a lot of people. That makes tonight more meaningful to me."

Desmond was excellent with men on base. That, more than anything, decided the game. He stranded four in the first two innings when North went up, 2-1, and had a chance to break to an early lead. He was at his best in the sixth, protecting a 5-3 lead with runners on second and third and one out.

He is a senior. He has pitched in games like this. He knew what he was do-

QUINCY'S CODY DESMOND tossed a complete game, four-hitter and knocked in two runs to lead the Presidents to a 5-2 win over rival North Quincy Saturday at Adams Field.

NORTH QUINCY'S JOSH HELFRICH also battled on the mound as he went the distance striking out four batters and stranding eight runners.

ing. He fired fastballs for strikes and spun curveballs into the dirt. Desmond changed the eye level and kept North from focusing on one pitch. He escaped on a weak grounder and lazy fly ball to the outfield.

"Experience does help. It helps keep me calm and slow me down," said Desmond. "I just tried to remember what a coach in youth baseball told me. Take a little off the fastball and throw strikes. Attack the zone and don't worry if they hit it."

He not only hit, he hit when it counted. He doubled in the first to send Chris Mann (single, walk, run scored, stolen base) to third. Mann scored on a single by Mark Munroe (three hits, a sacrifice and an RBI). In the third, Desmond singled home the tying run when Quincy was down, 2-1. In the fifth, he singled home Mann with the go-ahead run for a 3-2 lead which Quincy never relinquished.

Big night. Big pitches. Big hits. A splendid memory.

"I saw the ball well. I've also faced Josh (Helfrich) going back to youth baseball," said Desmond. "I know what he likes to throw. He has an excellent curveball and you have to be aware of that when you face him. I think I hit two fastballs and a curve.

"I can't say enough about Cody," said Quincy coach Rick Beach. "Pitching, hitting and being a leader, he's done everything I've asked. Tonight, he also picked off a runner, and he's one of the best center-fielders in the league."

Desmond had to be good because Helfrich was tough. This was a duel between two seniors. Neither would give in. Desmond threw 153 pitches. Helfrich threw 146. Neither coach thought about taking the ball from their senior ace in their final rivalry game. Helfrich spun curveball after curveball which tested his arm on the cool, damp night. He struck out four. He never stopped competing. Helfrich stranded eight base runners over the final four innings. He gave his team a chance to win.

"I didn't think about taking the ball away from him," said North coach Matt Edgerly. "There's nobody I would rather have out there. He gave us everything he had, and he never gave in to them. They had that one inning (the fifth) when they got three, but Josh was very good for us."

Quincy hit the ball. The Presidents had 11 hits.

THE CITY'S TWO high school varsity baseball teams - North Quincy (above) and Quincy (below) paid tribute to the late Steve Sullivan by wearing his number 26 during Saturday's night baseball game between the Red Raiders and Presidents at Adams Field. Here the two teams line up on the third base and first base foul lines for a pre-game ceremony that honored the late great high school and college baseball player and pitching coach for the Red Raiders. His number 26 was retired during the ceremony and no player from either school will wear it again.

North and Quincy.

The ceremony began at 6 p.m. By 5:15 p.m. cars and trucks lined both sides of the Artery. The crowd gathered behind the backstop, splitting into small groups, talking of Sullivan, baseball and the rare, old times.

Adults bought tickets to a raffle which would raise over $1,000 in one night to benefit the scholarship fund the Sullivan family will donate to seniors on the North Quincy baseball team. Children skittered and chased among the crowd. They found gloves and baseballs, raced behind the concession stand, and played catch by firing the ball off the wall.

Nearly everyone wore black T-shirts. The name Sully traced the back of each. Below his name was his number 26. Josh Helfrich wore 26 for North this year. No player from the city, from North or Quincy, will wear it again.

The first notes from the bagpipe filled the cool, damp night 20 minutes before the ceremony. The crowd grew and grew. It swelled behind the backstop, people standing 10 and 12 deep, ringing both sides of home plate, spilling into the grandstand, the largest crowd at Adams Field in five years. A truck from a Boston television station, its tower stretching high, parked beside the entrance to the field.

"I MISS TALKING baseball with Sully," said close friend Matt Edgerly, the head baseball coach at North Quincy High School, in a heart-felt tribute to his former pitching coach who lost a battle with cancer in March at the young age of 28. "I wanted to call him after every game," he told a crowd of Sullivan's friends, family and others at Adams Field during a pre-game ceremony in honor of "Sully" Saturday.

At 6 p.m., the players and coaches from North and Quincy were introduced. Quincy lined the third baseline. North lined the first baseline. Each player wore a T-shirt with the number 26. Quincy wore blue. North wore black.

The crowd was hushed and silent. Joe Cheevers of the Boston Police Pipe Major and Boston Police Gaelic Column played "God Bless America" on the bagpipe. North Quincy coach Matt Edgerly gave an eloquent and moving tribute to his close friend.

Alanna, Maria, and the entire North Quincy team walked towards right field.

There was a covered plaque on the fence between the scoreboard and retired numbers. As they walked, Cheevers played "Going Home".

When they uncovered the plaque, it showed his number. Number 26. Number 26 on the fence at Adams Field. It was simple and perfect.

Sullivan's father threw the first pitch to Sullivan's high school baseball coach. Then it was time to do something Sullivan knew so well: Play Baseball.

As Maria Sullivan walked towards right field, she thought of all the people. She also thought of what her husband's uniform number meant to both of them.

"I'm amazed so many people are here. It's a testament to what Steve meant to them," she said. "He hated being the center of attention, so all this might have embarrassed him, but I'm sure he would be filled with pride."

"The number 26 was important to us. It was not only his uniform number. It was also the address number for our house and the date of our wedding."

Sullivan continued to coach during his 18-month battle with cancer.

"I think coaching was like therapy for him. It made him happy. He was always happy when he came home from coaching, even when he was sick," said Alanna. "He was passionate about kids. He loved them and loved having the chance to influence their lives."

Alanna worked for the school system when Steve died. She remembers the response from the kids. And, like Maria, she remembers how much the number on the right-field fence meant to her.

"It was always more than the baseball," said Alanna. "Kids would come up to me in the hall and talk about my brother. They would be having a bad day, and Steve would bring them into the gym to play ping-pong. When he died, I got text after text from kids saying how sorry they were and what a great guy he was."

"I'll always remember that number. I was five when Steve went off to col-

Fundraiser June 4 To Benefit Disabled Veterans Fishing Trip

Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club will hold a fundraiser June 4 to benefit the 60th annual Disabled Veterans Day Salt Water Fishing Trip.

The fundraising event will take place at the Town River Yacht Club, 60 Mound St., Quincy, on Saturday, June 4 from 7 to 11 p.m.

The event includes music by Mike Murphy, local D.J.,

a hot and cold buffet, raffle prizes, and a cash bar.

All proceeds will go toward hosting a benefit to help support the disabled veterans fishing outing.

"We need your help and support to provide our disabled veterans with one day of outdoor fishing," said former city councillor Michael Cheney.

"For some disabled veterans this is the only day trip out of the hospital. They have given so much for our country the least we can do is provide one day on the water fishing," Cheney added.

Volunteers from all walks of life including local lobster men take the day off to help make this a special day for disabled veterans. "It would be impossible to recognize everyone involved in making this event possible however on behalf of all the disabled veterans from area hospitals I would like to thank everyone involved whether you donate a dollar or assist on Veterans Day," Cheney said. "I would like to thank you for your past help and support. Your involvement has made a difference. This year, we need your help more than ever."

Cheney said this year's fishing trip is special not only because it is the 60th anniversary of the event but "because we are at war and unfortunately, every day we add another disabled veteran to the rolls."

Tickets for the fundraiser are available at the door at a cost of $15. All proceeds will go to offsetting the cost of running the Veterans Day event. There are sponsor forms available as well for anyone who wishes to sponsor the event.

To make a donation, send a check to Cheryl Cowan, Treasurer, 48 Crosby St., Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information, call Michael Cheney at 617-592-2501.

lege. I was 11 years younger than him. I remember how big that 26 on the back of his uniform looked to a little girl. I idolized him because he was my big brother. I still do."

Johnny Orlando was Sullivan's best friend since age 10. They played on youth championship clubs, and they played on great teams for Draicchio at Quincy High.

"It's so sad, such a loss for a lot of reasons," he said. "I think the biggest was that Steve realized he had gained a lot of knowledge about the game. He wanted to give back. He wanted to share it with kids. This night would have meant a lot to him. He took a lot of pride in Quincy baseball."

Draicchio was Sullivan's coach when he was a young player and his boss when Sullivan was an adult. Sullivan worked as a security officer at North Quincy High. Draicchio is the director of Security Personnel for the city.

"I had a chance to know him as a coach and a colleague," said Draicchio. "He was a great player. He led the league in hitting for two straight years. He pitched, played third and first base. He was an all-scholastic. We had some good teams and he was our best player."

"If I had to pick one word for Steve, I would pick compassion. He felt compassion for the kids. He wanted to work his way up and become a guidance counselor so he could make a difference in their lives."

Sullivan is second on Westfield State's all-time record for saves. Rick Beach understands this well. Beach currently coaches Quincy. When Sullivan played for Quincy, Beach coached North. Beach has two memories of Sullivan on the mound. Sidearm. Curveball.

"He was a great kid, but when he dropped down to the side and threw that curveball, he was intimidating. We must have hit a 100 curveballs in practice to get ready for him," said Beach.

In recent years, Beach saw Sullivan at the great

Quincy-North basketball games. When they spoke, Beach mentioned his son, Tyler, wanted to go to Westfield State and play baseball. Sullivan said he would help.

"Steve made a call to the coach and Tyler went to Westfield," said Beach. "This is a good night. This is the type of person we should honor: someone who gives back. We should do something like this every year, a game like this is his memory. This is the type of person we want our kids to be."

The night showed well the number of people he touched and the different ways he touched them.

"The impression I always got from Steve was kindness. He was always respectful. Everyone I knew that he came in contact with said that about him," said Mayor Koch.

"What I always remember about Steve was that he called me Mr. Eckbom," smiled veteran Morrisette manager Ray Eckbom.

Edgerly spoke with feeling and grace about his friend. He talked of Sullivan's wisdom and competitiveness which touched everything from life to baseball to ping pong. He talked about Sullivan's love of family and friends, especially of his love for Maria.

It was not an easy speech, and it has not been an easy season.

"I miss talking baseball with him," said Edgerly. "There were so many times I wanted to call him on the phone this season. I wanted to tell him all the seniors were going to college. I wanted to tell him that Josh and Matt (Eagles) and Shawn (Kelly) had matured into good pitchers. Those were his kids. I wanted to call him after every game."

After the ceremony, the game began and the concession stand opened. There was a sign on the glass of the concession stand which captured well the night and the man it honored.

It read:

Sophomore DH Curtis Frazier had the biggest. In the first game between the two, Frazier drilled a bases-loaded triple after Munroe dropped down a bunt to win the game. Saturday night, he lined a two-run single after a Munroe sacrifice bunt for a 5-2 lead in the fifth which held up the rest of the way.

"It was just like the first game: Munroe's bunt and Frazier's hit. Curtis has been hitting the ball hard lately, and he's been hitting in the clutch," said Beach.

Joe Ferracane had a pair of hits for Quincy. Peter Saccoach had a single, a run scored and a stolen base. Matt Tomlinson had a single and two hard, line-drive outs.

Hunter Phillips had a two-run double in the second for North. Helfrich added a single, two walks and scored on a throwing error in the sixth. Dara Griffin and Kevin McDonald had singles for North.

The Red Raiders played good defense. They made just one harmless error. Matt Eagles did a good job in left field, ranging twice to the line to catch line drives. Catcher Cam White cut down two runners at second with strong, accurate throws.

"Our defense was good. We put runners on base. The story of the game and the season has been we haven't got that one timely hit," said Edgerly whose team slipped to 3-14 with seven losses coming by two runs or less.

Chapter VCVCAF; George F. Bryan Post 613 VFW; Houghs Neck Post 380 AL; Quincy Post 95 AL; Wollaston Post 295 AL; and the Jewish War Veterans Post 193.

Also taking part will be the U.S. Naval Reserve; USS Constitution Honor Guard; the Quincy/North Quincy High School combined band; a fire truck with World War II veterans; a trolley with Vietnam and Korean veterans; Junior ROTC; Gold Star families in vehicles; Windjammers; the Ancient Honorable; Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts; Paul Moody's flag truck; Brewster Ambulance; U.S. Coast Guard Honor Guard; and the Quincy National Guard G Company 186 BSB.

Staff of the city's veteran's organizations are also invited. They include:

John McDonough, commander of the Bryan Post; Cathy Lewis, commander of the Morrisette Post; George Fred McCray, commander of the Quincy Post; Peter Walsh, commander of the Houghs Neck Post; James Doherty, commander of the Nickerson Post; Marthur Bumgardner, commander of the Wollaston Post; Daniel Tinney, commander of the Cavanagh Chapter; Philip Singer, commander of the Memorial Post 7 AMVETS; Harvey Solomon, commander of the Jewish War Veterans Post; Chuck Behenna, commandant of the Caddy Detachment; Lawrence Norton, president of the Quincy Chapter VCVCAF; and Vincent Dolan, president of the Second Marine Division Association.

Vandiver was born and raised in Louisville, Kentucky. He attended Auburn University and was commissioned as an officer in the U.S. Navy upon graduation. Vandiver has been on active duty for 18 years.

Vandiver has served on the amphibious transport dock ship USS Austin (LDP-4) and the destroyers USS Briscoe (DD-997) and USS Cole (DDG-67). He has deployed seven times across Europe, the Middle East and South America.

After earning his master's degree from the Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island, Vandiver served on the staff of the commander of the Naval Surface Forces Atlantic and in the office of the chief of the naval reserve. He assumed command of the Naval Operational Support Center Quincy in June 2014.

Vandiver is married with two children.

Others scheduled to speak at the ceremony include Koch; City Council President Kirsten Hughes; Nicholson; Lewis; Norton; the Rev. John Carl Swanson, chaplain of the Quincy Veterans' Council, who will give the invocation; and the Rev. Rebecca Froom of the United First Parish Church, who will give the benediction.

Nicholson will read Gen. John Logan's 1868 order proclaiming Decoration Day; Robert Noble will read Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address; and McCray will read the poem "In Flanders Field."

Abigail Coughlin is set to sing "The Star Spangled Banner," Hughes will sing "Amazing Grace," and Robert LaFleur will sound "Taps."

During the week leading up to Memorial Day, veterans' organizations will decorate squares and memorials throughout the city. Memorial services will be held at the Hancock Cemetery, the National Sailors Home Ceremony, Hall Cemetery, Christ Church Burial Grounds, and Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

At 10 a.m. on Memorial Day, Monday, May 25, a short memorial service will be held at Christ Church Burial Grounds. The historic cemetery, located next to Saint John the Baptist Church at 54-60 School St., was founded in 1737 and was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1989.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will be held at 11 a.m. in the Quincy High gymnasium.

MONDAY'S MEMORIAL DAY PARADE will include many marching groups including Quincy Police (front) and Quincy Fire (back) Color Guards. The parade steps off at 10:30 a.m. from the Quincy Credit Union at 100 Quincy Ave. and proceeds along Quincy Avenue and Hancock Street to Coddington Street to Sea Street to Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The Memorial Day Observance will follow at the cemetery's World War II podium overlooking Sea Street. Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Bosworth

Morrisette Post Memorial Day Ceremony Monday

The Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post #294 will hold its annual Memorial Day Ceremony at Hall Cemetery Monday, May 30, at 9 a.m.

Color guards and distinguished guests should form up at St. Mary's parking lot, 95 Crescent St., at 8:45 a.m. for a short march to Hall Cemetery. Master of ceremonies, Past Commander Lawrence M. Norton, will introduce the guest speaker, the Hon. John F. Keenan, senator, Norfolk-Plymouth District.

Invocation will be by the clergy and benediction will be said by P.C. Robert LaFleur, the legion chaplain.

Post Commander Catherine A. Lewis will place two wreaths - one at the grave of the post's beloved namesake, Cyril P. Morrisette, and the other one for all fallen deceased members of the post, which is more than 500 members combined.

Local, country and state officials have been invited to attend. The public is welcome to attend as well.

Central Memorial Day Ceremony Today

Thanks, in part, to a grant from the Quincy Public Schools Business Partners, students from Central Middle School will remember American veterans from Quincy in a Memorial Day Ceremony scheduled for today (Thursday) from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

The ceremony will take place at the Korean War Memorial on the corner of Merrymount Parkway and Hancock Street, across from the middle school.

Students will honor each veteran on the memorial by reading his or her name and branch of service. Students will also mark the occasion by planting a flowering plant for each veteran in a newly constructed flower bed. City Parks Department workers collaborated with the school by constructing a flower bed in front of the memorial for the ceremony.

The event is free, open to the public, and handicapped accessible.

ENC Names Larry Bollinger Vice President, Institutional Advancement

Eastern Nazarene College has named Quincy native Larry Bollinger vice president of institutional advancement at the Christian liberal arts institution.

An alumnus of the college, Bollinger returns to ENC after two decades with Nazarene Compassionate Ministries. For the past 12 years, he has served as its director, traveling to more than 100 countries and working with staff to implement global humanitarian programs.

As CEO and president of Nazarene Compassionate Ministries Inc. – a separate nonprofit that works with government and foundation programs – Bollinger has overseen multimillion-dollar initiatives funded by USAID and the Department of Justice.

"We are so pleased to welcome Larry Bollinger back to the campus of Eastern Nazarene College," ENC President Dr. Corlis McGee said. Larry's expertise in marshaling the resources needed for Christians to live out their faith and help those in need will prove invaluable as we work to put a Christian liberal arts education within reach of as many students as possible."

McGee noted that Bollinger has strong ties to Quincy; in addition to being born at the former Quincy City Hospital, he grew up in and around the ENC campus, where his father was a longtime administrator.

"Eastern Nazarene College has always enjoyed a strong, positive relationship with the City of Quincy," McGee said. "Larry's roots in the City of Presidents will no doubt help us to strengthen that relationship, helping us to create new ways for our students to contribute to the local community."

Bollinger holds a BA in Business Administration from ENC, an MBA from Eastern University and an Ed.D. in Ethical Leadership from Olivet Nazarene University. He also completed Harvard University's Executive Training in Strategic Management for leaders of NGOs program.

"It is with great joy that we are coming home to Quincy and to the ENC community," Bollinger said. "I am inspired by the meaningful tradition of graduating exceptional students with a passion to make a difference in the world."

Bollinger succeeds Dr. Scott Turcott, who will serve ENC as special assistant in an advisory capacity through July 2016 in order to assist with the transition of leadership.

2. Every RFP or bid issued by the Purchasing Agent or other City department shall notify bidders that they have an affirmative duty to report any criminal or civil judgment, administrative citation, final administrative determination, or debarment against the bidder or any of their subcontractors occurring while their bid is pending to the City, and, if they are the successful bidder, while their contract with the City is in effect, within five (5) business days of receipt. The RFP or bid will identify the City department and individual to whom this must be reported.

3. Every RFP or bid issued by the Purchasing Agent or other City department shall notify bidders that they may not contract with the City during any part of the debarment by the City of State if they have been debarred by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts or the City of Quincy, either voluntarily or involuntarily, for the entire term of the debarment. Such RFPs or bids shall also notify bidders that they may not use any subcontractor who has been debarred by the City or the State during the period of that subcontractor's debarment.

4. Successful bidders must either:

a. Provide a certification of compliance as required by this Ordinance below. To the extent the bidder has been in business for less than three years, it shall provide a certification certifying compliance for the entire period of time for which the entity has been in existence.

b. To the extent a judgment, citation, or final administrative order has issued against a bidder within 3 years prior to its bid, provide a copy of the same, in addition to documentation demonstrating that all damages, fines, costs, and fees have been paid to all aggrieved complainants. In addition, the bidder must post a bond, to be maintained for the life of the contract, as specified below.

5. Successful bidders must agree to post the notice available at <http://www.mass.gov/ago/docs/workplace/wage/wagehourposter.pdf> in a conspicuous location accessible to all of their employees. To the extent not all employees would have reasonable access to the notice if posted in a single location by the successful bidder, the successful bidder must inform the Purchasing Agent or other City department of the number and location of postings in order to ensure that the successful bidder provides reasonable notice to all of their employees and agree to make those additional postings.

B. Certification And Disclosures

The Purchasing Agent and any other City department entering into contracts on behalf of the City shall adopt the attached certification and disclosure requirement for all applicants providing:

1. That an applicant certify to the Purchasing Agent or other City department that neither they nor any of their sub-contractors have been subject to a Federal or State criminal or civil judgment, administrative citation, final administrative determination, or debarment resulting from a violation of G.L. c. 149, G.L. c. 151 or 29 U.S.C. 201 et seq. within three (3) years of their application;

2. In the alternative, the applicant shall disclose to the Purchasing Agent or other City department any such criminal or civil judgment, administrative citation, final administrative determination, or debarment and include a copy of the same in their applications.

3. Every City department issuing a Request for Proposals or bids shall notify applicants that they have an affirmative duty to report any criminal or civil judgment, administrative citation, final administrative determination, or debarment occurring while the contract is in effect to the department within five (5) business days of receipt.

C. Reporting and Notice Requirements during the Contract Term

1. Upon request by the Purchasing Agent or other City department, all City Contractors shall furnish their monthly certified payrolls to the City's Purchasing Agent for all employees working on City contracts.

2. To the extent a contract is for a term of one year or more, a City Contractor will provide the Purchasing Agent or other City department with a certification compliant with this Ordinance on the effective date of the contract and at each anniversary thereof until the contract expires.

3. All City Contractors will furnish to the Purchasing Agent or other City department any criminal or civil judgment, administrative citation, final administrative determination, or debarment issued during the term of their contract(s) with the City against the City Contractor or its sub-contractors within five (5) business days of receipt.

4. To the extent required as set forth below, all City Contractors shall maintain a wage bond for the term of the contract(s) with the City.

D. Wage Bonds

Any Successful Bidder or City Contractor admitting in writing to or determined by the Purchasing Agent to have committed a wage theft violation or subject to a criminal or civil judgment, administrative citation, final administrative determination or debarment as a result of a violation of G.L. c. 149, G.L. c. 151 or 29 U.S.C. 201 et seq. within the three (3) year period prior to the date of its bid to contract with the City, shall be required to obtain a wage bond or other form of suitable insurance in an amount equal to the aggregate of one year's gross wages, or for the term of the contract, whichever is less, for all employees, based on an average of its total labor costs for the past two years. Such bond must be maintained for the entire term of the contract(s) and for all contracts of one year or more, proof of maintenance must be provided annually or upon request of the Purchasing Agent or other City department.

E. Suspension or Revocation of Contract/Wage Theft as Material Breach as Conditions in RFP or Bid

If a City Contractor is found to be in violation of G.L. c. 149, G.L. c. 151 or 29 U.S.C. 201 et seq. or this Ordinance, and therefore in breach of its contract with the City, the City may take one or more of the following actions:

1. Revocation of City Contractor's contract with the City;

2. Suspension of the City Contractor's contract with the City;

3. Debarment from all City contracts for a period of up to three years;

4. Imposing conditions on any future contracts with the City, including but not limited to, the posting of a wage bond and other reasonable requirements.

On Tuesday, May 17, 2016, Anti-Crime Officers DesRoche and Lanergan were working in plain clothes capacity in the area of the Quincy Center MBTA station and McIntyre Mall conducting surveillance operations due to complaints of criminal activity and past arrests.

At approximately 4:05 p.m., Detective DesRoche observed a male known to him from past arrests and incidents standing in the smoking area between the Quincy Center T station and City Hall. He was talking with a few other people, also well known to the Quincy Police. This particular male was also suspected of stealing bicycles in around Quincy Center.

After a few minutes, the male walked away from the group of people and headed towards the entrance of the Quincy Center train station. The male looked around as if checking to see if anyone was watching him and then walked over to a light post which had a bicycle chained to it. He stood over the bicycle for several minutes and continuously scanned the area. The male put his sweatshirt hood up to cover his head and then put on his sunglasses as if to disguise his identity. He then opened a red plastic bag attached to the seat of the bicycle and reached in to check the contents. He closed the bag and started to walk away towards the pathway that leads to the rear of City Hall.

Officer DesRoche maintained his surveillance position and watched as the male bent over and picked up a large boulder. He then returned to the bicycle's location and again looked around to see if anyone was watching him. After a brief pause, the male began to strike the bicycle lock several times with the boulder in an attempt to break the lock. After about 45 seconds of slamming the lock with the rock, the male dropped the rock as a citizen was neared the scene. The male then walked away from the bicycle and headed to Hancock Street.

At this time, Officer DesRoche notified Officer Lanergan as to what he observed and advised him that he was going to stop the male suspect and place him under arrest.

The Officers made their way over to 1250 Hancock Street where he last saw the suspect enter the building. Once inside the building, the Officers checked the entire lobby area with no luck. The Officers walked into the convenience store looking for the suspect and was told by the employee, "I think he just went out that door," pointing to the exit door leading to Saville Ave.

The Officers looked down Saville Avenue and saw the suspect running down Saville Avenue nearing Quincy High School. Officer DesRoche notified Quincy communications of the situation and asked for some assistance from other units. Officer Goldrick was dispatched to assist. Officer Lanergan went behind the last building on Saville Avenue and Officer DesRoche approached from the other side and was able to apprehend the suspect as he attempted to hide while throwing a pack of "Spice" in the bushes.

After being placed under arrest, Officer Goldrick then transported the suspect, a 46 year old homeless male, to the station for booking, on charges of "Attempt to Commit a Crime: Larceny and Wanton Destruction of Property." Photos of the Schwinn Gateway bicycle were taken along with the boulder used to commit the crime. The suspect also had two default warrants out of Quincy District Court. Nice Work!

Quincy Police Adult Self Defense Program: This free program will be offered Tuesday and Wednesday, June 14th and 15th, a 2 night course, from 6:00 p.m. to approximately 8:30 p.m. It will be held outside at Merymount Park, near the water fountain on Hancock Street across from Central Middle School. This program is open to females aged 18 and up, 16 if with a parent/guardian. Attendance is required both nights because this is a progressive learning program. There is no exam and no one is required to do anything that they do not feel comfortable with. The first night involves learning strikes, blocks and blows and the second night provides an opportunity to test your skills against an "attacker." Bring water, bug spray and wear comfortable clothing. In the event that it rains the first night, the program would be pushed back one night. Check twitter @quincymapolice or Facebook "QuincyPoliceDepartment" for scheduling updates. Bring a friend! It's more fun! To sign up or to get more information, contact

Holy Spirit Novena

Holy Spirit. You who solve all Problems, light all roads so I can obtain my goal; You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life You are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank You for all things as You confirm once again that I never want to be separated from You, even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with You in eternal glory. Thank You for your mercy toward me and mine. Say this prayer for three consecutive days, the favor will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Prayer must be published immediately without mentioning the favor. JO

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by midweek. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there, waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity in order to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

Veterans Remembered, Bricks Dedicated At SAL Memorial Day Ceremony

6th Annual Observance At Flags For Veterans Island

By TOM GORMAN

As 400 flags fluttered in the breeze, the sacrifices of the city's veterans were remembered during the 6th annual Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, Morrisette American Legion Post Memorial Day observance at the Flags for Veterans Island at Fort Square on Sunday.

Flanked by color guards and standing in front of the flags, Squadron 294 Commander Paul Moody noted that Memorial Day had its founding at Arlington National Cemetery in 1868 by a declaration of President James Garfield.

"Memorial Day originally was a day of remembrance for veterans who died in service for the United States of America," Moody said. "We decorated this island at Fort Square with 400 flags for those who served, continue to serve, and who died to keep this country free. Were it not for the veterans, there would be no America."

During the ceremony, 291 engraved bricks that line the cement walkway leading to the island's main flagpole, were dedicated. The bricks that bear inscriptions of the names of veterans along with their branch of service and rank were installed over the past several weeks.

"Today, we see the addition of engraved bricks that add beauty to the island," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "On each brick is a name, and with the name comes a story of those who participated in the preservation of this nation. They stepped up to the call of duty. Some didn't come home. On behalf of our city, we say thank-you to our veterans."

Councillor Kirsten Hughes looked around and pointed out the children in attendance at the ceremony.

"Were it not for our veterans, it would be a different country for our kids," she said.

After the invocation by Squadron Chaplain Joe McDonald, fellow member Bill Daley sang the National Anthem as veterans raised the flag on the island.

Guest speaker, retired Air Force Master Sergeant and North Quincy High School Junior Air Force ROTC director John DeLorenzo, recalled his childhood on the North Shore and his family telling him stories about the Civil War, the conflict between the north and the south. He initially thought his parents were talking about the North Shore and South Shore of Massachusetts.

"Now that I'm older and my parents have passed, I had no idea what they were talking about until I started working in Quincy 15 years ago," he said. "You folks really aren't as bad as my parents said. In fact, I have met some of the nicest and most patriotic people right here in Quincy, Mass. Let me tell you, when I see my parents again, I'll let them know the Civil War is over."

DeLorenzo paid tribute to North Quincy High ROTC cadets Sammy Szeto and Michael Nguyen who enlisted in the Marine Corps and are training at Fort Devens. He also noted cadets Michael Truong and Dan Reilly who were part of the color guard at the ceremony who will be entering the National Guard and the Navy respectively.

He told the gathering that he was honored to be speaking at the ceremony.

"As an American citizen and a 21 year military veteran, it is an honor for me to stand in front of you to respect not just these men and women that each flag and brick represents, but to respect this nation and all the men and women who have served this great nation of ours."

"Behind me, we see a field covered with the symbol of our nation, the American Flag," DeLorenzo said, explaining the stars and stripes along with the red, white and blue colors each has significant symbolism. "But for all those who have served and are still serving our country, whether military or civilian, we see much, much more. When we stop and look at our American flag, we reflect back on our missions, loyalty and commitment we have for our fellow soldiers and friends and the sacrifice-es we all share to make this nation great."

He concluded, "For those individuals who put so much time and effort into this beautiful ceremony, it truly shows the commitment and compassion you have for your friends, your city and your country. May we never forget our loved ones and those who have served our country."

Wreaths were placed at the walkway and at the flagpole. The Morrisette Post's flags were placed on the island followed by a volley by a firing squad and Taps by Post Commander Robert LeFleur.

Squadron 294 Senior Vice Commander Guy Ferris said that each of the 400 flags has a sponsor and a nametag.

"There is one flag with no name," he said. "It symbolizes those prisoners of war yet to return home."

Ferris said the Bricks for Veterans Program is continuing and there is still time to purchase a brick for the island. He said the bricks were created and engraved by the Monti Granite Company of Quincy.

Flag Day Parade, Celebration June 11

Retired City Clerk Joseph Shea will be the grand marshal for the 65th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration, the longest running parade of its kind in the nation, scheduled for Saturday, June 11, Mayor Thomas Koch announces.

Shea retired as clerk in April after 25 years in the position and more than 30 years of service to the City. His years as clerk were typified by an overarching desire to help people, whether it was assisting people starting businesses, couples getting married, or simply helping anyone who walked into his office, said Mayor Koch.

"Joe is one-of-a-kind — and his service to our community will leave a tremendous and long-lasting legacy," said Koch, who is also chairman of the Flag Day Committee started by his father, the late Richard J. Koch, more than six decades ago. "He truly lived his great love of this City, and

Memorial Day Message: WWII Generation

'Connect' With Family

By SCOTT JACKSON

Rain cancelled the city's Memorial Day parade Monday but did not dampen the moving and solemn service inside Quincy High School as hundreds filled the gymnasium in tribute to fallen heroes who died serving to protect this nation's freedom.

Eric Vandiver, the keynote speaker at the city's Memorial Day ceremony Monday in QHS's Munroe MacLean gymnasium, encouraged members of the Greatest Generation to connect with family members and talk about their service in World War II before it's too late.

Vandiver, a U.S. Navy commander, has served as the officer in charge of the Naval Operational Support Center Quincy since June 2014. Previously, he served on the staff of the commander of the Naval Surface Forces Atlantic and in the office of the chief of the naval reserve.

As color guards lined up along two sides of the gymnasium and residents, veterans and others filled the stands, Vandiver noted NOSC Quincy performs more than 1,000 honor details at funerals for Navy veterans statewide annually, a number that continues to increase.

The parade consists of specialty units ranging from fire units, Army National Guard vehicles, and community organizations. Some of the best marching bands throughout the state march the parade route playing everyone's favorite patriot songs as impressive floats carrying very special guests follow the sound of music.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade has devoted itself to instilling patriotism and pride in our youth. Each year, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters highlight the event as they march down Hancock Street side by side with their youth organizations.

The 1.5 mile parade steps off at 7 p.m. at the intersection of Coddington and Hancock Streets and proceeds north on Hancock Street to Merrymount Parkway, disbanding at Pageant Field.

The celebration portion of the evening held at Pageant Field following the parade consists of the flag raising of an impressive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory, a patriotic medley, and presentation of awards to the parade grand marshal and the recipient of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service award.

The evening is capped off by a dazzling 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek - known as among the largest and most extensive shows outside of Boston's July 4th display.

For more information regarding the Flag Day Parade, contact Christopher Rooney at 617-376-1251 or by email at crooney@quincyma.gov.

FinCom To Review Appropriations June 13

Koch Seeks $19M

For Capital Projects

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee will meet June 13 to review the first portion of Mayor Thomas Koch's five-year capital plan, which includes money for new technology in the city's schools, road repairs and traffic signal improvements among other items.

The mayor is asking the council to allow the city to borrow $19.33 million for the first phase of his capital plan, which was unveiled May 2. Koch did not provide a price tag for the plan at the time, saying he would take a "more careful and detailed approach" than in 2011 when the council approved the most recent five-year plan, which included $25 million worth of projects, all at once.

The new capital plan will be presented in stages as work on each project advances.

The first portion of the plan includes 10 items that will be vetted at the June 13 meeting, which will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Great Hall of the McIntyre Govern-

The largest item Koch is seeking is $5.33 million for the purchase of new equipment and vehicles.

The mayor is seeking $5 million for road repaving and reconstruction of roads and sidewalks.

Repairs and improvements to city buildings and land are also being proposed, at a cost of $3 million.

The Quincy Public Schools system would receive $1.3 million for the purchase of computers, smartboards, and related technologies. An additional $700,000 would be spent on software upgrades and the study and design of technology upgrades through the city's IT Department.

The city would also purchase two properties in the vicinity of the William B. Rice Eventide Home at 215 Adams St. to keep them as open space. The mayor is seeking $1.4 million to acquire 205 and 191 Adams St., and pay for related site work.

Koch is proposing to spend $1 million on traffic signal improvements at major and secondary intersections and in school zones; that money would also pay for costs related to the issuance of a request for proposal for a citywide traffic, parking and pedestrian study.

Four different bonds for $500,000 each are being sought for the study, design and engineering of several projects, including: sea wall repair and drainage projects; a new animal shelter and improvements to Mound Street Beach and the Kennedy Center; a new public safety headquarters for the Police and Fire Departments; and the Merrymount Park master plan.

The final item is $100,000 for test borings and hazardous materials testing at Sterling Middle School to determine foundation design and demolition costs related to construction of a new school at the same location.

CROWNING GLORY

Down through history, tiaras (also known as diadems) have been worn as a mark of nobility or royalty. Even though we pride ourselves as a democracy, young girls on this side of the pond have looked at monarchies on the other side of the Atlantic and dreamed of wearing dazzling tiaras. When England's Duchess of Cambridge appeared at a state banquet at Buckingham Palace wearing a regal tiara, it seemed to fully awaken the dreams of young fashionistas on venues ranging from red carpets to Main Street. No longer necessarily associated with the elite, tiaras are now worn by anyone, anytime. When included as part of a dressed down look, tiaras make an undeniable fashion statement.

Miles: One Of A Kind

There are dogs.

And then there was Miles.

The Irish Jack Russell terrier owned by Mark Linnane of Quincy was more than a pet. He was a beloved member of the family who lived a special life touching the hearts of everyone who knew him.

It's a life that had its ups and downs but this beloved canine always persevered.

Miles was a rescue dog. He was adopted by Mark, his wife Carol and sons Patrick and Tom after Hurricane Katrina. Miles belonged to another family in New Orleans who had been displaced by that devastating hurricane in the fall of 2005. When Katrina hit, the family lost everything.

The family left Louisiana and lived in a car while trying to find housing. Miles was boarded in November of 2005. Then, in January 2006, the family was forced to surrender Miles. They had found a place to live but couldn't take Miles with them because no pets were allowed.

Miles was taken in by Angell Memorial Animal Medical Center in Jamaica Plain. Soon, the dog that lost his home in the Bayou was about to set down roots in the City of Presidents.

It was the winter of 2006 and one day one of Mark's sons told his father he'd like a dog for his birthday.

"He wants to go to the mall and I said no. We're going to go and adopt a dog," Mark says recounting the story of Miles arrival to the Linnane family. "We go over to the Angell Memorial where we had adopted a few cats from there."

There are two dogs in the shelter — one was Miles.

"Angell tries to find the right owner for the right dog," Mark continues. "They don't put the people or the dog in a position to fail. Miles was walking with two guys over there and I said to them 'how do you like the dog?' They said, 'we think he's too small.'"

Miles, sensing his may have found another suitor, quickly put on the canine charm.

"We started patting him and he's all over us. The next thing we know he's home with us. That night, when we went to bed he jumped up and burrowed under the covers. That was that."

Miles had tunneled his way into their hearts and soon transitioned very well to the Linnane household and his new neighborhood.

"He adapted very well. He got along with some dogs whose owners said 'my dog doesn't get along with anyone.' But he got along with them. Some other dogs," Mark admits, "he didn't want to deal with."

They are small in size but Irish Jack Russells are big personality dogs. They were used to hunt foxes in barns. Although he was miniature in stature, he had a presence at the park and soon became a neighborhood legend.

One neighbor dubbed Mark and Miles "Abbott and Costello" because they seemed like a six-legged comedy act.

Miles had a knack of running into neighbor's houses. He'd run right up the front door and if the door wasn't closed he'd go right into the house.

What more personality?

Mark says Miles was a big Boston Bruins fan. After the team clinched the Stanley Cup in 2011, the dog drank from a homemade Stanley Cup.

He had a keen interest in music, too. Among his personal favorites was listening to Bruce Springsteen songs. Mark says Miles's favorite tune was "Thunder Road."

"He didn't howl when that song came on . . . he'd just stand back and let the wind blow back his hair," Mark says with a big laugh, borrowing a line from that romantic ballad.

Miles also had some rough days. After his adoption, Miles was twice attacked by larger dogs. One caused a major gash on his neck requiring several surgeries.

But the larger-than-life pooch always bounced back and garnered a slew of nicknames. Some called him Walter Matthau from "Grumpy Old Men." Others dubbed him Muggah from Dick Tracy.

"We also called him 'Doggy Dentures' because I could get him to growl showing his full set of teeth," Mark says with a laugh.

Miles also seemed to have as many nicknames as adventures.

"About eight weeks ago, I got a call from my son," Mark says. "He told me he let Miles out into the backyard but he got out. I told him to go look for him. All of a sudden one of the neighbors calls me."

"I got Miles down here at the Wollaston T station," he tells Mark.

"Miles walked down from Grandview Avenue, crossed Beale Street and made it all the way to the platform at the T Station which is about 200 yards from our house. The neighbor saw the starter (MBTA worker) with Miles on the platform. She told him she was a neighbor and would take him back home."

"The starter told her he couldn't release the dog. The starter's probably making $60,000 and he has to call his supervisor who's probably making $90,000. Now we've got $150,000 of public payroll trying to decide what to do with the dog. They don't know what to do," Mark says.

"So they call the Quincy dog officer. His assistant comes down and he knows Miles because he's wandered and gotten picked up a few times. He said, 'I have a call into Mark and Mark is coming down.' They finally released him."

This wasn't the only time Miles impersonated a Red Line commuter.

Miles got out of the house while the Linnanes were

Adams Historic Park Visitors Up 25.6%

The Adams National Historic Park welcomed 25.6% more visitors during the start of this tourist season compared to the same period last year.

Through the end of April, 4,005 individuals had visited the Adams site that includes the Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., the Adams Mansion on Adams St. and the United First Parish Church - "Church of the Presidents."

Caroline Keinath of the National Park Service expects that the projected goal of 60,000 visitors could be reached. This would be an increase of 20,000 over last year.

Mayor James A. Sheets noted that the National Park Service Visitors Center will be vital in making "tourism a larger slice of Quincy's economic pie."

Food Allergy Legislation Has Potential To Save Lives

Every day, it seems, we hear about the problem of food allergies. For many, this sounds like the latest issue brought up by overly concerned helicopter parents.

The reality, however, is quite the opposite.

For 15 million Americans - including 270,000 Massachusetts residents, 100,000 of whom are our children - food allergies are incredibly dangerous and potentially life threatening.

My wife and I have five wonderful children, three of whom happen to have severe food allergies. To live with food allergies is to be constantly on guard for potential exposure to your allergen, be it peanuts, dairy, wheat, soy, or even obscure allergens like chocolate, garlic, basil, or peppers.

The greatest fear is that exposure will lead to anaphylaxis, a deadly response in which an individual's airways constrict, potentially closing altogether within minutes. It's terrifying to watch.

Fortunately, there is a medication that can slow the effects of anaphylaxis called epinephrine, allowing time for medical treatment to arrive. Most individuals with food allergies know that they need to keep two epinephrine auto-injectors with them at all times, regardless of the situation, in order to save their own lives should an unexpected anaphylactic event occur. Unfortunately, regardless of how diligent one is, mistakes happen and

That's why it's critical that a bill pending at the State House (SB 1220) be passed immediately. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Karen Spilka, would allow - but not require - public locations like sports arenas, malls, theme parks, restaurants, and other businesses to carry epinephrine in case of an emergency. And so long as individuals administering the epinephrine have been trained, the bill specifies that they will not be held liable for their actions, regardless of the outcome. This is a win-win situation - a potential lifeline for food-allergic individuals with no undue burden on our businesses.

It's true that the onus to carry epinephrine is squarely on the food-allergic individual and family, but there are other reasons we should all support this bill. It's estimated that 20%-25% of reactions in schools happen to children previously undiagnosed.

Many schools carry epinephrine as a precaution, but that same danger exists for children in public places. In addition, while food allergies in children get most of the attention, there is also a surge in "adult onset" food allergies taking place. In these situations, individuals such as you or I suddenly develop an anaphylactic reaction to a food we've eaten our whole lives! In fact, one seafood restaurant owner told me about 10 cases that occurred in his restaurant alone last year - all to long-time regular customers.

The bottom line is that, while we don't know the cause of food allergies, anaphylaxis has become prevalent across the country (one ER visit every 6 minutes due to anaphylaxis) and the prudent action is to allow public locations to carry the relatively benign medication that can stop anaphylaxis before it becomes deadly.

More than half the states in our country - yes, 29 - have passed laws similar to SB 1220, with our neighbor, New Hampshire, being the latest. Ten states this year alone have passed laws.

Massachusetts has proven their commitment to those with food allergies in the past and should do so again with this bill that gives businesses an opportunity to provide a safety net to their customers without the burden of a mandate.

SB 1220 has the potential to save lives and I look forward to that acknowledgment by our lawmakers.

'Why Not Quincy?'

Rutland, Vermont has a plan to resettle 100 Syrians who are living now in refugee camps in Jordan. These men, women, and children, and thousands of others, have suffered enough, dealing with their own sadistic, arrogant leader in Assad; facing inhuman, cruel treatment from the Islamic State; and now living in squalid refugee camps.

Why doesn't Quincy do the same as Rutland is proposing? As we all know, we are a nation of immigrants. Generations of our families came to the States for a better, safer life. The mayor is German heritage; I'm Chinese heritage. We all have a lot to be thankful for, and now is a necessary time to give back and help others, no matter what color or religion.

Is it right to ignore their pleas of help? Is it right to think that they don't deserve to be here? Is it right, because they are Muslims, they should be banned from coming here? Are we so desensitized to their plight that we see it as "normal" or that the Middle East is so far away, that "it's not our problem," or that "they deserve it"?

I hope Quincy stands up and welcomes Syrian refugees. Quincy is named "The Most Patriotic City." Now is the time for Quincy to be known also as "The Most Patriotic and Most Welcoming City."

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open For Tours Saturday

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours Saturday, June 4 and Saturday, June 18, between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 11 a.m. The last tour starts at 2:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Dating from 1686, the house is 325 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The homestead is operated by The National Society of The Colonial Dames of America in The Commonwealth of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Groups may request a private tour by phoning 617-742-3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org.

For more information, visit the homestead's website: www.nscdama.org.

Josiah Quincy House Open Saturday

Historic New England's Josiah Quincy House in Wollaston will open for the season with free tours on Saturday, June 4, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard. Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family was documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

The Quincy House recently underwent a three-year focus that included the repainting of several rooms based on the scientific analysis of the original paint colors. In addition, curators reinstalled rooms based on Eliza Susan Quincy's journal and photographs taken in the 1880s.

The Quincy House will be open from June to October on the first and third Saturdays of the month. The house, located at 20 Muirhead Street in Wollaston, also offers school programs, and tours by appointment.

WHAT'S COOKING

with
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Corn Flake Macaroon Cookies

By MARIE

Any time I find a recipe with Corn Flakes as an ingredient I can't wait to try it. And that is exactly what I did recently and made these delicious cookies.

I think that this is a recipe that my mother used to make when I was growing up and I think the recipe was on the Kellogg Corn Flakes box.

RECIPE

The whites from 4 large eggs
3 cups of Corn Flakes
1 teaspoon of vanilla extract
1/3 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 and 1/2 cups of sugar

1 cup of chopped walnuts or pecans
1 cup of sweetened flaked coconut

Preheat oven to 325 degrees

Cover two cookie sheets with parchment paper - Or you can slightly grease the sheets if you don't have parchment paper.

In a large bowl beat the egg whites on high speed until foamy. Add the vanilla and cream of tartar. Gradually add the sugar until stiff and glossy peaks form. Fold in the chopped nuts, the coconut and Corn flakes.

Drop by tablespoons about two inches apart and bake for 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Transfer to wire racks to cool.

Edamame Hummus

By SUZIE

This is a delicious recipe made with edamame. Edamame is versatile and very mild tasting. It is packed with protein and fiber as well. Make sure you purchase the 12 oz frozen bag of the organic variety. This is a great appetizer to bring to a spring/summer shindig!

INGREDIENTS

1 12 Oz bag of edamame, cooked and cooled according to package directions.
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 garlic clove minced

1/2 cup parsley chopped
1 tablespoon sweet white miso (available everywhere now, in refrigerated section of supermarket next to tofu)
1 tsp red chili paste
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 tsp sea salt
1/4 tsp pepper
5 tablespoons olive oil

Simply mix all in a high speed blender, vitamix, or ninja until creamy and smooth. That's it! Serve with crackers, chips, or vegetables.

Rigatoni Sausage, Pepper Combo

By MARIE

Over the years my family has enjoyed all kinds of pasta made in various ways. So last week when some of them were able to come over for dinner I made a plate of Rigatoni with sausage and peppers that got raves. The nice part is that other than the pasta this dish is made all in one pan.

RECIPE

1 pound of Italian sausage cut in pieces
1 red pepper, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
1 small onion, chopped

1 garlic clove, minced
1 cup of light cream (or half and half)
2 tablespoons of fresh parsley
Salt and pepper to taste.
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
One half pound of Rigatoni (OR a favorite pasta can also be used)

Cook pasta according to directions. In a large skillet cook the sausages, peppers, onion and garlic until the meat is browned and peppers are tender. Stir in the cream, parsley, salt and pepper and cook for 6 or 8 minutes until sauce is thickened. Toss pasta and Parmesan cheese into the sauce and serve immediately.

Authors At Barnes & Noble For Teen Book Festival June 10-12

Local authors Casey Sherman, Dave Wedge, Emily Ross and Jennie Wood, and storyteller Andrea Lovett will be making in-store appearances at Barnes & Noble, Braintree, June 10-12, as part of the "B-Fest Teen Book Festival," a three-day weekend event devoted to celebrating young adult literature.

On Friday, June 10, at 7 p.m., Casey Sherman and Dave Wedge, authors of The Finest Hours, will signing copies of Boston Strong: A City's Triumph Over Tragedy, an account of the Boston Marathon bombings, now being adapted as a screenplay for the upcoming Patriots Day movie. Sherman is also the co-author with Michael J. Tougas, of The Finest Hours, that was adapted for the recently released movie.

Wedge is a reporter for the Boston Herald, and has also contributed to Esquire, DigBoston and Newsweek magazines.

On Saturday, June 11 at 4 p.m., professional storyteller Andrea Lovett will lead a one-hour workshop on the art of storytelling.

Lovett is a co-founder of massmouth, a locally based organization promoting the art and craft of storytelling. Seating for this workshop is limited, and reservations are suggested.

On Sunday, June 12 at 2:00 p.m., authors Emily Ross and Jennie Wood will sign copies of their books and lead a workshop, "B-Creative!" on the craft of writing YA fiction.

Ross, a Quincy resident, received a 2014 Massachusetts Cultural Council finalist award in fiction for Half in Love With Death. Her fiction and non-fiction has appeared in Boston Magazine and other national publications.

Wood is the author of A Boy Like Me, a Next Generation Indie Book Award finalist, an INDIEFAB Book of the Year finalist, and one of Foreword Reviews 10 Best Indie YA novels for 2014. She is also the creator of Flutter, a graphic novel series, named one of the best LGBT graphic novels of 2013 by The Advocate Magazine. She is an ongoing contributor to the award-winning, New York Times best-selling FUBAR comic anthologies.

Barnes & Noble, Braintree, is located at 150 Granite St., Braintree.

Food Trucks, Beer Garden On Tap For Flag Day

By SCOTT JACKSON

Attendees of Quincy's 65th annual Flag Day Parade on June 11 will have the chance to visit food trucks and a beer garden that will set up shop in Quincy Center that afternoon.

The Board of License Commissioners on May 24 voted unanimously in favor of granting a one-day special use permit to Redbones BBQ. The restaurant, which is located in Somerville's Davis Square, plans to bring its food truck to the McIntyre Mall between 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. the day of the parade along with a beer and wine garden. Two or three other local food trucks could also take part in the event.

"On Flag Day, what we want to do is set up an outdoor beer and wine garden and have our food truck along with other Quincy food trucks for the general public to enjoy the parade, relax, and have a nice day," Redbones manager Robert Gregory said.

"On top of the event itself, we think it's a good publicity opportunity for the community—another avenue to talk about America's oldest Flag Day parade and putting top-notch hospitality as another amenity for a great event in the city of Quincy," added Kerry Byrne, who was recently hired by the city as a consultant to help market the downtown.

"It's something, I believe, people will talk about beyond just the borders of Quincy."

Gregory said all patrons purchasing alcohol would need to obtain a bracelet indicating they are of legal drinking age; bartenders will not serve any patron without proper identification. Portable toilets and wash stations will be available for patrons, and Gregory said he would enclose the food truck and beer garden area to help ensure no one with an open container leaves the designated space.

Inspectional Services Director Jay Duca asked that Gregory put together a schematic showing how the designated area would be laid out for the Flag Day parade. Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, who is the chairman license board, had expressed concern about whether or not the McIntyre Mall could accommodate multiple food trucks, the beer and wine garden, and other amenities.

"I don't have an issue with Redbones going in - I think that will be great. I am concerned with having three additional trucks, just because I'm not sure how big the space is out there," Scheele said.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron said the other two or three food trucks that would take part in the event would need to be inspected, or a fire detail would be have to posted at the scene during the parade. Redbones' truck has been inspected by fire officials in both Somerville and Boston, Gregory said.

As an alternative to the food trucks, Byrne said local restaurants could set up outdoor cooking spaces - grills, for example - in the designated area.

In addition to the food trucks and beer and wine garden at the McIntyre Mall, The Townshend, a restaurant located within Presidents Place on the opposite side of Hancock Street, will set up a hot dog and hamburger cart from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. the day of the parade for the public. The cart will be located in front of Presidents Place at 1205 Hancock St.

In other business May 24, the Board of License Commissioners:

- Approved a request for an extension of premise for Cagney's, 214 Washington St., for July 15, 16 and 17. The Quincy Point pub will celebrate its 25th anniversary that weekend, and manager Mark DiBona said the festivities could include live entertainment. Live entertainment or other music outdoors will be permitted until 11 p.m. those three nights and alcohol service allowed outside until 1 a.m. each night.

Spirit Of Boston Day Trip July 27

The Quincy Council on Aging will depart from the Kennedy Center for a cruise on the Spirit of Boston on Wednesday, July 27th at 8:30 a.m.

A Silver Fox Motor Coach will transport day trippers to the Boston cruise ship. Dine on a buffet of - Approved special use permits for Discover Quincy's planned Art Walk Fridays. The events will be held June 17 in Quincy Center, June 24 in Wollaston, July 8 in North Quincy, July 15 in West Quincy, July 22 in Quincy Point, and again in Quincy Center on July 29. Amy Huber, vice president of Discover Quincy's executive board, said neighborhood businesses will open up their doors to local artists those evenings.

- Approved an extension of premise for the Common Market, 97 Willard St., for 5 to 10 p.m. on July 15. Owner Greg McDonald said he plans to hold an outdoor event, including live music, to coincide with the Discover Quincy Art Walk Friday scheduled in the area that night.

- Approved a junk wagon license for David Sugarman, 269 Centre St. Sugarman told the board he planned to purchase scrap metal from local craftsmen and then sells them in Chelsea. No scrap metal will be stored at the Centre Street location, and Sugarman said he would not drive around the city and collect metal left out for curbside collection.

- Approved a common victualler license for Soul Ninja, 1247 Hancock St. Soul Ninja will take over the dessert store previously known as Kozy Dessert.

- Approved a common victualler license for Wendy's Tea House, 305 Newport Ave. It will open in a space previously home to a restaurant supply store.

- Continued to June 28 a hearing on the status of the motor II and garage repair license held by K&R Auto, 1200 Sea St. Owner Brandon Bergstrom is seeking increase the number of cars permitted on site from 15 to 25 by renovating his property to allow for additional vehicles. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest will host a community meeting on the plan June 15 at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center.

Men's Discussion Group

Polio Virus To Treat Brain Tumors

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

An innovative experiment to kill a vicious cancer has won breakthrough status from the Food and Drug Administration. It uses the polio virus to attack a virulent brain cancer called glioblastoma, which is a diagnosis that traditionally leaves patients with only months to live.

According to the American

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

Brain Tumor Association median survival for patients with glioblastoma who are treated with traditional chemotherapy is only about 14 months and the two-year survival rate is approximately 30%. This lethal disease claims 12,000 people per year in the U.S. The therapy, developed at Duke University, aspires to use the polio virus' debilitating properties to help combat cancer instead of harming its host. Early tests at Duke University have been so successful that the FDA plans to fast track this treatment to hundreds of patients while it's still being evaluated for final approval.

The virus is the conception of molecular biologist Matthias Gromeier, who has been working on this for more than 25 years, the last 15 at Duke University. Other researchers are also experimenting with cancer treatments using viruses including HIV, smallpox, and measles. Dr. Gromeier chose polio virus because it seeks out and attaches to a receptor that is found on the surface of the cells that make up virtually every kind of solid tumor.

Gromeier re-engineered the virus, removing a crucial genetic sequence. The virus would be unable to survive this way so he replaced the missing sequence with a harmless bit of common cold virus. This new modified poliovirus cannot cause paralysis or death because it can't reproduce in normal cells. However, the altered version of polio could still replicate in cancer cells, therefore making the cancer susceptible to a patients' immune systems.

All human cancers acquire a shield of protective measures that make them obscure to this immune system. By infecting the tumor with polio virus, they are actually eliminating this protective shield and enabling the immune system to attack. While the altered polio virus initiates the fight against the cancer cells, its ability to alert the immune system to the problem is what often destroys the virus. These findings were initially what they'd observed in the laboratory and eventually what they had to attempt to replicate in human beings.

The university in Phase I of the study, reported some success in this method, with early-stage results reported in March 2015 showing that while 11 of the 22 patients treated by that point had died, the other 11 saw their tumors shrink, with three being at the time free of cancer. This treatment appears to succeed with just one dose and is designed to continue attacking cancerous cells until they are destroyed. However, this is early-stage research that still requires many more years, and numerous more patients before efficacy can truly be obtained and proven.

A breakthrough status from the FDA greatly speeds up the development process and will be an advantage for both the researcher and the university. In more practical terms, it will also likely ascertain a greater interest from investors to help push studies into the arduous, more costly realms of mid-to late-stage research studies. The FDA's decision to grant Duke this status means the second phase of the trial will be expanded to about 40 institutions with hundreds of patients. If that is successful, Duke will be allowed to skip the third phase of the trial and make polio therapy for glioblastoma available to all.

The route to this accomplishment has not been without difficulty. The initial volunteers saw their tumors disappear, but later on some patients suffered crippling setbacks. Researchers persisted forward but found themselves on a course they had not anticipated. Astonishingly, chemotherapy in patients who had previously failed it, once they've had the poliovirus therapy, now seem to have a new boosted, response to the chemotherapy as if the poliovirus had set up the tumor to be more receptive to the chemotherapy.

That was not an anticipated outcome, and is actually the platform for a future study that will involve chemotherapy and the poliovirus. Subsequently, in recent developments, this science may be utilized for an entire range of cancers. In the laboratory, Duke has used polio virus to kill cancer cells of the skin, pancreas, stomach, lung, colon and prostate. The question still to be answered is, once immune cells are programmed to recognize a cancer, will they remember and assault that cancer everywhere in the body for a lifetime? This leads to a remarkable realm of prospects that still remain to be perceived.

The key to superior cancer care is an enhanced understanding of the disease and the mechanisms that may work to fight it. The development of engineered viruses, or "oncolytic viruses," to treat cancer is one type of immunotherapy that's generating enthusiasm in the oncology field, however the Duke studies are still in their early stages and it is imperative to remember that presently it may be too early to judge how the virus will perform in a larger patient population. For more information on the Duke University study visit their website at www.cancer.duke.edu.

Help Our Children Read- PASS Decoding: Dyslexia Legislation SB312 And HB463

By AMY VALLELI
and KATHY O'BRIEN

As my 10-year-old old daughter approached the end of 3rd grade, I couldn't understand why my once easy-going, happy girl had suddenly changed into an ill-tempered creature with homework meltdowns, daily stomach complaints, reading refusal and ugly remarks like, "I'm stupid!" and "I hate school."

So, like any concerned mom, I investigated. Her teacher did not seem too worried, but politely agreed she required more assistance with directions on work, especially with a recent book report they did in class. When I asked my daughter to tell me how she felt about school, her response broke my heart. "I try really hard mom...but I get nervous when everyone gets the answers so quick and the teacher smiles at them and not at me, so I just feel so dumb, I wish you didn't make me so dumb." I knew it was time to request an academic evaluation.

Now reaching the end of 4th grade, my daughter's tests revealed she has, "Dyslexia," a neurologically based reading disability that the International Dyslexia Association (IDA) characterizes as "difficulties with accurate fluent word recognition and poor spelling and decoding abilities" which can affect your overall reading and comprehension abilities. I once believed having dyslexia meant individuals just reversed their letters, but I now understand this can be just one of many symptoms of this complicated condition. Science has identified "Dyslexia" to be neurobiological, meaning children are born with "different brain structures and processing" that can impact how they learn to read (DD-MA website.) Furthermore, there is new knowledge identifying specific genes associated to its development, indications to its high inheritability and the IDA reports up to 20% of our learning population may be affected by this condition.

Yet, despite all of this scientific evidence, many special education departments in the state of Massachusetts do not provide early screening for reading disabilities, and do not have an effective approach to appropriately recognize when to assess and provide interventions. If a child demonstrates the need for further evaluation, parents are required to attain neuro-psych testing outside of the school. However, many special education programs offer to reimburse when parents take kids to the test sites shared within a district agreement. When I called to make an appointment at Children's Hospital and the LEAP program-Mass General, both places QPS recommended, the wait period was over 6 months. Both hospitals maintained cancellation lists and QPS offered another option, but we decided to self-pay with a private educational evaluator, we used to help us understand our son's language-based learning disabilities. However, many families do not have this option to self-pay because it can be very costly.

One of the concerns, here in Massachusetts, as well as other states, are the implications for children when evaluators give a child the diagnosis of "Dyslexia," and special education departments categorize it differently in their Individual Education Plan (IEP) and instead utilizing a broad term, "Specific Learning Disability" (SLD). To begin to rectify this, on October 27, 2015, the US Department of Education sent school districts letters, encouraging them to use the terms "Dyslexia" "Dysgraphia" and "Dyscalculia" in IEP's and asked states to review their policies, procedures and practices to ensure that they do not prohibit the use of these terms. Many concerned parents, educators, pediatricians, and other professions believe this label disregards scientific research acknowledging the neurobiological differences associated with this reading learning disability and leaves children vulnerable to missed access to effective treatment and evidence based interventions due to possible misinterpretation of the diagnosis.

Three years ago, Ms. Nancy Duggan, Nicole Mitsakis and Lisa Wilson co-founded Decoding Dyslexia-Massachusetts (DD-MA), part of a national grassroots coalition formed by parents, students, professors, pediatricians, speech and language pathologists, psychiatry, and many other professions to legislate for children with reading disabilities. Their tenacious campaign gained supporters Senator Barbara L'Italien, Representative Chris Walsh and Representative Alice Peisch who co-authored the Dyslexia Legislation consisting of SB 312 and HB 463. Governor Baker, has also supported this legislation, executing Senators Bill Cassidy and Barbara Mikulski's Senate Resolution 275, with his beautiful proclamation encouraging school districts to support dyslexia recognition, during "National Dyslexia Awareness Month," in October 2015.

Meanwhile, on the South Shore, two local Quincy mothers Kathy O'Brien, a pediatric nurse, advocating for two daughters with double-deficit dyslexia and Katie Ollman, an educational advocate, supporting her son receiving dyslexia services in the QPS middle school systems were feverishly calling, showing up on door steps, and dodging any hurdle that stood in their way to grab the attention of local politicians and school committee members to back their endeavor. During this important time, they were invited to attend DD-MA's Zakim Bridge event for Dyslexia Awareness, illuminating it red one evening. Kathy O'Brien and Katie Ollman, coordinated both, with DD-MA advocates and QPS's Special Education Director, Judy Todd, to gather approximately 40 parents, children and school personal to stand across the harbor on the Squantum seawall, holding red balloons and red carnations in unison with the participants under the red bridge. The coordination and quick collaboration was successful. More importantly, the attending families holding red balloons or viewing the illuminating lights, for just a few moments, felt respected, validated and part of a community that mattered. Covered by the local Quincy Sun, it kept the momentum to keep pressing forward.

Kathy met with Sen. Keenan three times. Soon after, Kathy, Katie and Do-reen Douglas, a mother of a child who struggles with reading, decided to approach Senator Keenan and request him and other local politicians to have a formal meeting, with the understanding, they would need to be creative. Reading is a task most people take for granted, especially by those who have acquired the skill. However, Kathy thought, maybe if we can explain the science behind "dyslexia" and then give someone the experience of having it, they might consider how it truly affects our struggling children.

In January 2016, Mrs. O'Brien and Ms. Ollman requested a private meeting with Sen. Keenan, Rep. Ayers, Rep. Chan and Mayor Koch, however, Larry Liuzzo sat in for Mayor Koch, who had a prior engagement. She purchased a kit from the IDA which gives people the experience of what it feels like to read and write from the perspective of child with dyslexia in a regular class room.

Mrs. O'Brien played teacher, instructing everyone in the room to perform a simple exercise which everyone's amazement evoked empathy for children with dyslexia. It was another step in the right direction. Kathy had experienced it herself.

The next month, Kathy O'Brien and Quincy Public School Committee member, Emily Lebo attended DD-MA's, "Day on the Hill" informational colloquium at the State House. Presenters included Rep. Alice Peisch, Sen. L'Italien, Rep. Chris Walsh, and Dr. Gaab from Boston Children's Hospital Labs for Neuroscience and Cognitive Development, who through controlled research studies demonstrated dyslexia's neurobiological components and evidence for the need for early screening to reduce failure rates for those with reading disabilities.

Additionally, Dr. Roberto Olivardia, Ph.D, a psychologist and parent of a child with dyslexia, discussed the range of the social and emotional problems. They met with Ms. Duggan, Nicole Mistakis, Rep. Bruce Ayers' Aid, Marshfield School Committee Member Sean Costello to share ideas on how to expand on the South Shore and Kathy invited Ms. Duggan to present in Quincy. And in March 2016, Ms. Duggan invited Kathy O'Brien's daughter Shannon, 15, Nicole and Zac Mistakis and Samantha and Lisa Wilson, three classmates from the Landmark, a private school in Beverly, Massachusetts, specializing in educating kids with dyslexia and language based learning disorders to the State House. Part of the continued efforts for expanding awareness, WCVB Chronicle Boston filmed the event and aired the piece on April 5, 2016.

Ms. Lebo and other School Committee Members Anne Mahoney and James De Amicis have worked diligently with the QPS Special Education Department to support Mrs. O'Brien, Ms. Ollman and the community of concerned parents. Providing educational forums through the City Wide PTO, and extending an invitation for the women, and other families to hold a meeting between parents, educators, Special Education members, and School Committee members to share an open dialogue about parents' experiences and gather support for the proposed Decoding Dyslexia legislation. Instituting a community approach to increase communication to understand the issues, the Quincy Public School Special Education Subcommittee Meeting, held on Wednesday, April 6, 2016 also highlighted QPS Education Department's dedication to its concerned parents. This well attended meeting included QPS School Committee members Ms. Lebo, Ms. Mahoney, Mr. De Amicis, Ms. Isola, Special Education Director, Judith Todd, and members Erin Perkins, Julie Graham, Rick Kelly, Donna Cunningham, Catherine Carey, QPS Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Special Education teachers, Broad Meadows Middle School Principal, Mr. Gilbert, QPAC leaders, Cassandra Beck and Deb Nabstedt and City Wide PTO leader, Scott Alessandro, and many parents. This meeting was so successful that a task force of interested people, including the Quincy Parents Advisory Council to Special Education will be meeting to plan future Subcommittee meetings where information, ideas, and aspirations can be shared.

Police, School Budgets Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee approved the two largest department budgets – the Quincy Public Schools and Quincy Police Department – during its most recent series of budget hearings.

The school and police budgets were among several approved May 25 without any changes made. The May 25 session was to be the third and final committee meeting to vet Mayor Thomas Koch's budget for fiscal year 2017, but a fourth session has been scheduled for June 8. The budgets for the Fire Department, Department of Public Works and the proposed new department that would handle traffic and parking, fire alarms, and street lights are on the agenda for that night after being put on hold May 16.

Koch proposed giving the Police Department $26.99 million in the new fiscal year, a $1 million increase over the current budget of $25.99 million.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said the staffing levels would remain the same; the budget provides for one chief, four captains, 14 lieutenants, 30 sergeants and 161 patrol officers.

The department currently has 159 patrol officers on staff, Keenan said. The department had 160 patrol officers, but a recent hire dropped out of the police academy. Another slot is being held for an active duty member of the military.

A pair of openings are anticipated in the next fiscal year because two lieutenants are expected to retire. One will reach the mandatory retirement age of 65, and the second has said he could retire in December.

The chief said the new budget includes more money for training; an additional $238,000 was provided in the overtime line item – increases it from $459,000 to $697,000 – and the training time line item will increase from $250,000 to $332,000.

Keenan said every officer – from patrol officers to the chief – is required to undergo 40 hours of training annually under state law. Training topics include legal updates, mental health, firearms, first aid and CPR among others.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest asked Keenan if he was comfortable with the current staffing level in the department. Keenan said the department is in good shape, and noted the number of patrol officers has increased from 142 over the eight years he has been chief. More officers may be needed in the future, however, as development in Quincy continues.

"As the city grows, we may have to look at potentially expanding the size of the Quincy Police Department. We have a number of new developments as you can see – there isn't a corner where there isn't some development," Keenan said. "But I do feel comfortable with what we have today. We're in decent shape."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked about the implementation of new regulations regarding details worked by officers.

Keenan said the department is in the process of implementing new Jivasoft software, which the city spent $38,922 to purchase earlier this year. The software is meant to catch any issues in the hours officers put in for, including regular time, overtime and details.

The first portion of that software, which covers officers scheduling, was implemented just over a month ago, the chief stated. The next phase, which tracks details and overtime, should be online shortly. The final phase, allowing officers to check schedules on smartphones and their personal computers and request time off, is set to be up and running in a couple of months.

Keenan added that he has been meeting with representatives from the two police unions on regulations for working details.

"We all seem to be on the same page as far as what we want to accomplish. It's how we get to that point that we're still discussing," he said.

The Quincy Public Schools budget for the upcoming fiscal year will increase 3.4 percent over the current fiscal year.

Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro has proposed a $102.6 million budget for the new fiscal year, up from $99.26 million this

Chan Bill Seeks Full Dental Coverage For Senior Citizens

State Rep. Tackey Chan (D-Quincy) has filed legislation that would expand current Medicare coverage to include comprehensive dental benefits.

"Dental care is very expensive and essential to promoting good health and longevity," Chan said. "Many senior citizens are on fixed incomes and because of the high cost of dental care are forced to sacrifice getting proper dental care in favor of basic needs."

The proposed bill entitled "An Act Relative to Providing Dental Care to Senior Citizens," would expand Medicaid to provide necessary dental care for seniors, and prohibit the elimination of such care.

"We should not have our seniors choosing between which health care issue they need to address nor should they need to choose between paying for bare essentials and proper medical care,"

Chan said.

"This is important as poor oral health results in nutritional and psychosocial compromises. This reality affects poor seniors disproportionately. Many with chronic illnesses are more likely to suffer poorer outcomes requiring expensive and long-term medical care," Chan added.

"Oral Health America" conducted a poll which reveals such inadequacies, the Quincy legislator noted. They found that despite older adults believing oral health to be an integral part of health, 40 percent of seniors with household incomes of $50,000 or less were having trouble chewing foods and 59 percent were without dental insurance.

"The grassroots efforts in putting together this bill has so far been fruitful. It has received bipartisan support through 28 co-sponsors," Chan said.

Scavenger Hunt June 17 At Kennedy Center

The Quincy Council on Aging will host a Scavenger Hunt on Friday, June 17th at 10 a.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St. in Quincy.

They are looking for 6-8 teams of 4-5 seniors (including one driver per team) who will participate in a community treasure hunt that promises to be an exciting event. The team that collects the most items from the list first will win a prize.

To register for this event call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

'Educators Green' Dedication June 7 Granite Tribute Outside QHS

A granite tribute to the legacy of all of the city's educators will be unveiled as part of the dedication of the new "Educators Green" outside of Quincy High School at 3 p.m. on June 7.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the educators' monument, fabricated by Monti Granite using the same granite used on the fountain at Merrymount Park, will be a centerpiece to the new green built following the demolition of the old Quincy High School.

"John Adams said 'Let us tenderly and kindly cherish the means of knowledge,' and this permanent tribute to all of the men and women who have spent their life's work educating our children is a great testament to those words," Koch said.

The concept developed several years ago from an idea broached by School Committee member Emily Lebo to honor long-time Quincy High School teacher Bruce McDonald, who was chairperson of the school's English Department for 30 and one of Quincy Public Schools' most well-liked and respected teachers, in some way in the new park.

The Committee decided to honor McDonald and then decided to expand the concept to include a tribute to all educators.

The ceremony will include reflections on McDonald from Lebo and current QHS English Department Chairman Michael Ellis, and the monument will be unveiled by Mayor Koch and Allison Cox, President of the Quincy Education Association.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony.

Council Cuts $60K From Health Dept. Budget

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors voted to cut $60,000 from the personal service line item in the Health Department budget after voicing concern over the addition of a director of public health nurses position in the spending plan for the next fiscal year.

The council's finance committee made the cut to the Health Department's budget during its meeting May 25. The Health Department's budget had been reviewed by the committee previously on May 9, but no vote was taken at that time because Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain placed the departmental budget on hold so that additional information about the director of public health nurses position could be provided.

Under Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed budget, the director of public health nurses would have been paid $85,912 in fiscal year 2017, which starts July 1. The department currently has two nurses on staff, whose salaries were budgeted at a combined $129,958 in the current fiscal year budget; the proposed budget for FY17 would have maintained two nurses positions, at a budget of $138,017 combined.

Health Commissioner

Drew Scheele on May 9 said the addition of a director of public health nurses position would allow for the creation of an internship program. Working with local colleges, he said the department could bring on 10 or 12 unpaid interns each year that would handle a variety of different functions.

The director of public health nurses position had existed previously in the department, but was cut in 2003 because of budgetary constraints.

"I've been short-handed for 12 years," Scheele said May 25. "I think it's one of the most important positions in the budget."

Scheele said the department has received a grant from the state Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund, a condition of which is that funding for items covered by the grant be maintained after it expires. The new position, he explained, would be responsible for taking over the training currently funded through the grant. Scheele said the Health Department offers training in a number of different areas, including food safety for restaurant workers, blood borne pathogens for DPW and other city workers, and AED and CPR training, among others.

Cain proposed the $60,000 cut to the personal service budget during the May 25 meeting. Under the city's budgetary rules, the council can only cut the bottom line for personal services, and the mayor determines which specific positions that money would be taken from. The council also cannot add money to the budget.

Cain said the intent was for the money to come from the salary of the nurses on staff, essentially cutting the number of nurses from two to one, plus the new director of public health nurses.

"I'm still just having a bit of trouble with this, because I still don't think it's getting to the need," he stated.

Earlier, Cain said the job description for the director of nurses position did not address certain needs of the city, including the opiate crisis. Scheele said he is a member of the mayor's drug task force and meets with both the Police Department and other members of the task force to address the issue.

The $60,000 cut was approved in a 6-2 vote. Councillors Brad Croall, Noel DiBona, Joseph Finn, Nina Liang and Brian Palmucci joined Cain in favor of it, with William Harris and Margaret Laforest opposed. Council President Kirsten Hughes was not in attendance May 25.

Harris said the addition of the 10 or 12 interns to the department would make strides in the opiate crisis, as well as outreach in the community.

"This is not only about the [opiate] problem, we reach out to our seniors. We reach out to young women who have children to make sure immunization takes place. We hear every year of different strains of flu, different strains of diseases that are out there that we're going to be able to educate our folks [on]," Harris said.

"Quite frankly, the way this city is booming, we've got to put it in our budget, because if we wait for the boom it may be too late and we'll be behind the eight ball."

Palmucci said the money could be better spent elsewhere, by giving the Police Department more funds to hire drug officers, for example.

"I don't see this as boots on the ground. I see this as putting more people behind a desk, and I think what we need in a time of crisis is more boots on the ground, more people doing triage rather than oversight," Palmucci said.

"I would gladly support $60,000 going from this budget to the drug unit, and I think that would have a real impact. That would really make a difference on the street, make a difference in our neighborhoods."

Koch proposed giving the Health Department a total budget of $800,005 in FY17, up from $684,743 in the current fiscal year. The council's cut brings the FY17 number down to $740,005.

With the $60,000 cut made to the Health Department budget May 25, the finance committee has now cut $376,268 from Koch's proposed FY17 spending plan. The committee made $316,268 worth of cuts to the budget May 9. Finn proposed each of those cuts, targeting line items that have ended recent fiscal years with surpluses.

year. The majority of that money — $98.75 million — would come from the city's general fund, with the remaining $3.85 million from state circuit breaker funds.

In the current fiscal year, $95.59 million from the city's general fund went toward the school system.

James Mullaney, the school system's director of business affairs, said the system will hire one full-time elementary school teacher and a new foreign language teacher at Quincy High School.

Part-time positions will be added for two new programs at North Quincy High — broadcasting and visual design — as well as English language learners at Quincy High, elementary literacy programs, and special needs. Combined, those positions are equivalent to 4.8 full-time employees.

While the City Council's finance committee approved next year's bottom line school budget, the School Committee has final say on how that money is allocated. The school board was set to hold a public hearing on the budget yesterday (Wednesday) at 6 p.m. in the Codrington Building, and will vote on the budget later this month.

Also approved May 25 was the $637,370 budget for the Planning Department. The department's budget is increasing from $488,724 in the current fiscal year, in part because two jobs previously paid for outside the budget will now be paid for by the general fund. One position was paid using the $40 million in district improvement financing bonds the city issued for the downtown redevelopment, and the other from federal grants.

The budgets falling under the purview of City Clerk Nicole Crispo were also approved, including $376,809 for the clerk's office, $817,953 for elections, $70,730 for the Board of License Commissioners, and $25,000 for the city census.

The $781,546 budget for the mayor's office was also approved, including a $2,000 raise in Koch's salary, which will be $153,215 in the new fiscal year.

The $127,500 city celebrations budget, which goes to events such as the Flag Day and Christmas Parades, was likewise approved.

The animal control budget of $121,688 was also approved. Laforest voted against the department's budget after criticizing it for poor performance.

Quincycles Receives Grant From Save the Harbor/Save the Bay

Quincycles has received a grant from Save the Harbor/Save the Bay to improve upon their already popular annual Beaches of Quincy Ride.

The event on June 11 will include two rides for cyclists of various skill levels and experience. A longer more strenuous 23-mile ride will start at 7:15 a.m. from Anderson Bicycle, 380 Washington St., Quincy.

This ride will encompass almost the entirety of Quincy's coastline via Quincy Point, Adams Shore, Germantown, Houghs Neck and Merrymount communities and then along Wollaston Beach.

Riders will then join a second group for the shorter ride that begins at 9:30 a.m. from the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St. This 8-mile portion of the ride will tour the coast of Squantum.

The event will conclude with a lunch for up to 75 registered riders provided by Gaveston's Deli courtesy of Save the Harbor/Save the Bay.

A free t-shirt will be given to the first 75 registered participants.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents advocating for bicycle infrastructure on our city streets and promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise in Quincy.

More information about these events and the group can be found on their website at www.Quincycles.org or by email quincycles@gmail.com.

Wollaston/Montclair Neighborhood Assn. Scholarships, Ice Cream Social Tonight

The Wollaston/Montclair Neighborhood Association will present scholarship awards to three North Quincy High School students at its meeting tonight (Thursday).

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church at 308 West Squantum St.

Each of the three students grew up in the community and demonstrates an impressive history of civic engagement. Each scholarship is made in honor of individuals who have made the community a better place to live.

The Association will also host its annual ice cream social at the meeting, and will discuss plans to host a fall

MWNA social in September.

On Saturday, June 18th, Walter Hubley, president of the Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association and Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain will host PorchFest Quincy, a free music festival where Wollaston Hill neighbors will host bands who will perform on various neighborhood porches.

$4.2M Sought For Woodward Settlement

By SCOTT JACKSON
Mayor Thomas Koch is seeking to borrow $4.24 million to pay damages and post-judgment interest related to the city's decade-long legal dispute with the Woodward School.

The request to borrow $4.24 million – the amount a judge ordered the city to pay the school last year – was introduced at Monday night's City Council meeting. It was referred to the finance committee, which will meet to review the proposal June 13.

Koch, in a phone interview, said the $4.2 million he is seeking would cover the entire amount Quincy owes the Woodward School as a result of the case, including both the judgment itself and post judgment interest.

"It puts an end to it and closes the whole case," he said. "We're glad to get it finished and move on."

The dispute between Quincy and the Woodward School began in 2005, when the chair of the school's board of trustees sought a full accounting of two trust funds that benefited the school beginning in 1953 – the Adams Temple and School Fund, established by John Adams in 1822, and the Charles Francis Adams Fund, established in 1886. The Woodward School requested the full accounting because it received lower than anticipated payments from the funds the previous two years.

In July 2007, the school filed a complaint with a member of the state's Supreme Judicial Court after not receiving the information it sought from the city. The dispute was transferred to Probate Court, and a special master was appointed to gather pertinent documents regarding the funds' assets filed since the Woodward School was named the beneficiary in 1953.

A 13-day bench trial followed the special master's report. At the end of the trial in February 2011, the judge ruled Quincy failed to keep accurate records of its stewardship of the funds; failed to obtain appraisals for real estate in the trusts and sold property at less than fair market value; failed to act on professional investment advice; and failed to comport with its duty of loyalty to the funds.

The judge in that case ordered the city to pay nearly $3 million to the school, and the city appealed. The SJC upheld the judge's ruling but set aside the award in a 2014 decision, remanding that matter back to the lower court. The final cash award was determined in Probate Court last year.

Memorial Day 2016: A Reflection

It was great to see so many veterans come to pay respect to their fellow servicemen and servicewomen and for the debt that they paid for our country at Monday's Memorial Day ceremony.

Remembering those who have served and given the ultimate sacrifice for our country is an honor and a privilege that is well deserved. During the ceremony, there were a couple of great speeches given but there was one that really hit home and I would like to share why.

It was the speech by the guest speaker, Commander Vandiver of the NOSC-Quincy. His "park bench speech" was about respecting and just spending time talking to our veterans. He urged veterans to share their experiences so that this and future generations will not forget what they sacrificed.

It was a moving speech and I ask that you please read on as you will understand why this speech meant so much to me.

During the ceremony, there was one man, a veteran, who really stood out to me. He was a member of one of the color guards and had to be well over 70 years old and looked like he could barely stand. As he stood during the entire ceremony, I could see that he struggled at times to hold that flag but when he was asked to present arms and during the reciting of the Pledge Of Allegiance and the singing of the

"Star Spangled Banner," I watched him as he stood tall and proud, holding that flag high and showing his respect for our flag and country.

I could not be more proud of him and all veterans as that was a moving experience for me because, at least in my eyes, he showed that he is still a true patriot.

After the ceremony, I sought him out, shook his hand, and thanked him for his service to our country. I told him that I was impressed with his strength and his duty to our flag and his simple reply was (I am paraphrasing as I could not understand every word) "Thank you and remember the names that were read of those who could not be here with us anymore."

I could see tears welling in his eyes as he turned away and it dawned on me that the roll call of the members that were "absent" (the veterans who have passed away this past year) that they must have read the name of one of his close friends.

I stood there for a moment, dumbfounded as I realized that the speech given by CDR Vandiver could not have resonated so much more than right then.

I then turned to my son and told him to look around as some of these faces will not be here next year and be sure to thank and pay your respect to everyone that you see and talk to.

Again I would like to say "thank you to all that have served and God Bless!"

Thanks for reading.

Adams/Hancock Green & Downtown Construction Activities

Proposed work activities for the week of: May 29, 2016

- Starting May 31st, Temple Street will be closed 24/7 for approximately 7 to 10 days so that construction of the future alignment can take place. Ross Way will change in direction and head north to south to alleviate some of the traffic congestion.
- Work will continue for the new Adams/Hancock Green Park in front of City Hall.
- Conduit work in front of City Hall will take place during the day and night. This work will improve the aging infrastructure.
- Demolition of the Ross Garage is scheduled to begin on June 6th.
- The façade work on the West of Chestnut Project will continue to take place as they work towards a September 1st opening of that building.

Wollaston Theatre Slated For Demolition

By SCOTT JACKSON

The historic Wollaston Theatre won't be spared from the wrecking ball after city officials decided the cost of purchasing and renovating the structure would be too expensive.

Mayor Thomas Koch said his administration had been in talks with building owner Miao Kun "Michael" Fang about the city purchasing the 90-year-old Wollaston Theatre, but ultimately it was determined to be too costly to acquire and restore it. The mayor had spoken about the possibility of preserving the building, affectionately known as 'The Wolly' to many residents, and using it as a center for the performing arts in his January inaugural address.

"We looked closely at it, the numbers and the structure...The numbers quite frankly are very, very high. I couldn't justify using taxpayers' money for it when we have other needs, such as a roads and schools," Koch said.

"It would take $2 million to get in the door and millions more to bring it up to even minimum standards," he added, let alone restore it to the condition it was once in.

Stephen Crawford, Fang's spokesman, said the theater owner would continue to work with the city on the future of the site.

"We weren't able to reach an agreement on a purchase price," he said. "We continue to work to determine the best use for the Wollaston Theatre site in the future."

Fang had previously applied for a demolition permit from the city, which was not granted while the negotiations were ongoing. Crawford said there is no timeline yet for demolition.

"There is no timeline yet. There is a demolition permit pending," he stated. "We are working with the administration on the appropriate timing for the demolition and the appropriate future use of the site that works with their vision for the future of the area."

Crawford said possible uses for the site had yet to be determined. The Wollaston Theatre, located at 14 Beale St., is located in a Business C zoning district on an 18,790 square foot parcel of land.

When asked about the future of the site, Koch said his administration has focused on the redevelopment of Wollaston Center, pointing to a study undertaken by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council in 2013 on that very topic as well as meetings he has held with area property owners.

"We're very concerned - in a good way - about redeveloping Wollaston Center," the mayor said. "We want to see it fit the area."

Koch said Fang had yet to submit plans for future development for the Wollaston Theatre site. He said a mixed-use development - with ground floor retail and residential housing above - is one possible future use.

Fang is also the owner of the C-Mart chain of supermarkets. In January, a Land Court judge sided with Fang and reversed the City Council's 2013 rejection of a special permit that would have allowed a C-Mart to open on Hayward Street in North Quincy at the site of a former Boston Gear Works building. The council was ordered to grant the permit, subject to reasonable mitigation measures.

Koch said the talks with Fang over C-Mart took place separate from those regarding the Wollaston Theatre. City Solicitor Jim Timmins and traffic engineer Deborah Finnegan have been meeting with Fang's representatives concerning the grocery store, the mayor said, and are closing in on an agreement on mitigation measures.

"They've gone through a number of items," Koch said. "We're pretty much there and in agreement on most things."

Crawford said he could not comment on the C-Mart negotiations.

Koch said a full package of mitigation measures could be submitted to the council for approval before the body takes its summer recess at the end of June. Fang, he stated, has agreed to reduce the square footage of the proposed grocery store. In 2013, he had proposed opening a supermarket with 25,000 square feet of retail space on site, in addition to a warehouse and offices.

Koch had opposed the plans to locate the C-Mart on Hayward Street, and said he was disappointed by the judge's decision but is abiding by it.

The Wollaston Theatre first opened in 1926 as a vaudeville theatre and was repurposed to a movie house in the 1930s. It has remained closed since 2003.

Fang purchased the property for $600,000 in 2012 from Yvonne Chandler. Chandler and her late husband, Arthur, had owned the Wollaston Theatre since 1979.

Before selling to Fang, Chandler had reached an agreement in 2009 to sell the building to Street-Works, the city's previous master developer for Quincy Center. The New York-based company exercised an option to opt out of that agreement after it was estimated that renovating the building would cost upwards of $7 million.

The Wollaston Theatre was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1989. Owners of properties on that list are allowed to demolish or alter those buildings if no federal, state or local funds have gone towards the building.

Medical marijuana is rolling out into local communities that are not always well prepared to handle its impact on public health and safety. A question on the fall state ballot would make the drug ubiquitous.

Quincy Partnership for Success' director was among 200 local health, school, police and drug abuse prevention leaders who attended a half-day seminar recently called The Impacts of Marijuana: Strategies to address related health, social and legal issues. The event was presented by Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey in partnership with the substance abuse prevention coalitions of Avon, Needham, Stoughton and Weymouth, Walpole Police Chief John Carmichael and Attorney John Scheft.

"Colorado's legalization of marijuana has been a disaster for the people of that state, and it is important that Massachusetts communities be prepared for what is coming," District Attorney Morrissey said after the event. "Pueblo County Hospitals are working to repeal legalization there. Meanwhile, we have to prepare, at the very least, for broad use under the guise of medicine."

Quincy Partnership for Success' Director Barbara Edmondson attended the event along with ten Norfolk County police chiefs and scores of school and health leaders.

"Instead of decreasing underage use, now Colorado has about twice the national rate of users in every age range. The number of black-market seizures has gone up instead of down, the promised tax revenues have been cut by black market sales and disproportionate use of low-tax medical dispensaries instead of taxed retail," Morrissey said. "It has unfolded as the opponents feared and not as the proponents promised. And one way or the other, it's coming."

The May 13 seminar, held in donated space at the Bank of Canton, included model health regulations for dispensaries, K2, Spice and drug paraphernalia, checklists for local boards of health to correctly implement the law and information on home cultivation and how to prevent illegal diversion to children.

Registry Of Deeds Offers On-Line Consumer Notification Services

To Help Protect Property Owners Against Fraud

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds residents about the availability of a free on-line Consumer Notification Service offered by the Registry to protect Norfolk County property owners against fraud.

"The F.B.I. has reported that property and mortgage fraud is one of the fastest growing white collar crimes in the United States. Multiple jurisdictions across the country have reported individuals recording fraudulent documents and making it appear like they own another person's home or property. While we have been fortunate that this problem has not revealed itself here in Norfolk County, I want to make sure my office is proactively and vigorously protecting consumers,"

O'Donnell said.

Any owner of real property in the 28 communities comprising Norfolk County can sign-up for the Consumer Notification Service free of charge by doing the following: Go to the Registry's website, www.norfolkdeeds.org, and click on the Consumer Notification Service Get Consumer Alerts button to complete the initial registration. From there, follow the remaining sign-up instructions.

Once you have signed up for the service, each subscriber will be able to input two names, individual or business, and the corresponding city or town in Norfolk County for monitoring. They can monitor their real estate for such activities as changes in deeds, mortgages, non-mortgage liens, Homesteads or other land documents that might be recorded against the property.

If a document is recorded against one of the names inputted for monitoring, the subscriber will be alerted via email, usually within 24 hours.

The person can check the Registry's on-line land research records at www.norfolkresearch.org as an option.

QCAP Homebuyers Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., 1509 Hancock St., Quincy, will host a first-time homebuyers workshop Thursday, June 16 and Saturday, June 18.

The two sessions will take place in QCAP's fourth floor conference room. Times are 6 to 9 p.m. June 16 and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. June 18.

Attendance at both sessions is required. Fee to register is $30 per person.

If a subscriber believes a fraudulent land record has been recorded against their property, they should then immediately contact the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101. The subscriber would also be given a list of public safety referrals by the Registry.

"As your Norfolk County Register of Deeds, I take

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

First-Time Homebuyers Workshop June 18, 25

NeighborWorks South-eastern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers, to be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, June 18 and Saturday, June 25 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

The workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, insurance agents, attorneys and loan originators.

Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about the South Shore Home Consortium's down payment assistance programs, which may provide qualified buyers with up to 9 percent of the purchase price toward their down payment and up to an additional 1 percent toward closing costs on homes purchased in Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Holbrook or Milton.

Workshop participants will also be able to speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshops is $20 per person.

State To Replace Robertson Street Bridge

By SCOTT JACKSON

The replacement of the 58-year-old Robertson Street bridge that crosses over I-93 is expected to begin in 2018 and could take two years to complete, state transportation officials said during a recent public hearing on the $3.35 million project.

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation project official met with residents May 18 at the James R. McIntyre Government Center to discuss plans to replace the bridge. Designs for the new bridge are at the 25 percent stage, according to MassDOT project manager Robert Antico. The designs should be finalized in the summer of 2017, with the project going out to bid that fall.

The bridge replacement is expected to cost $3.35 million, with the federal government footing 80 percent of the bill and the state picking up the rest of the tab.

The current bridge, which carries two lanes of traffic eastbound over I-93, was built in 1958. Paul Berthiaume, an engineer with Greenman-Pedersen, Inc., said the bridge is in poor condition — rebar has been left exposed on the underside of the deck, and the bridge has been shielded to keep pieces of concrete from falling onto the interstate below. The abutments and piers that support the bridge, which will be retained, are also in need of repairs.

"The bridge deck is in poor condition," Berthiaume said. "The structural steel beams are obsolete. The bridge abutments and piers require repairs. The bridge railing has deterioration and is obsolete. The existing bridge is not striped for bicycle accommodations. The existing sidewalks and wheelchair ramps don't meet today's current standards."

The new bridge would be the same width as the current bridge. Both travel lanes on the new span would be 12 feet wide, with a seven-foot shoulder for bicyclists and 5.5-foot wide sidewalks on each side. The present bridge has no marked travel lanes and five-foot wide sidewalks.

Nostreetreconfigurations are anticipated presently, Berthiaume said. The traffic island in the intersection of Robertson Street, Upton Street and Bryant Avenue will be removed during construction of the new bridge, however, and replaced once the project is complete. A temporary traffic signal may also be installed at the intersection during the build out period.

Berthiaume said construction should begin in the spring of 2018 and take 24 months to complete. The current plan is to complete the project in two phases — the north side of the deck would be demolished and replaced first, with the south side remaining open, followed by demolition and rebuilding of the south side.

One lane and one sidewalk on the bridge would remain open to traffic at all times, except for four weekends when the steel beams are removed and replaced.

Barry Steinberg, a Unity Street resident, suggested the project could be completed sooner and for less money if the bridge were closed entirely and then demolished and rebuilt as a whole.

"One would think if you didn't have to keep it open, it would be cheaper and you could get it done a lot faster," Steinberg said.

He said traffic on the Stedman Street bridge — one block to the north — could flow in two directions while the Robertson Street bridge is closed; traffic on the Stedman Street bridge currently travels westbound only. The portion of Bryant Avenue between the two bridges could also be made into a two-road during the build out of the new bridge, Steinberg added.

Frank Tramontozzi, an engineer with the city, said Quincy officials preferred to keep one lane of the Robertson Street bridge open during construction because of concerns over traffic and the ability of emergency vehicles to access the neighborhood west of the expressway.

Antico said the matter could be revisited as the design process advances.

"We appreciate the input and we'll take a strong look at that," he stated.

Tom Galvin, an area resident, asked if MassDOT had considered widening the bridge to make up for the seven feet of space that would be dedicated for the bike lane.

"It's a very, very busy bridge at commuter hours at night," Galvin said. "It's a turkey shoot trying to get through there."

Berthiaume said 12 feet is the standard width for a travel lane. If the bridge were widened, he added, the abutments and retaining walls below the deck would need to be replaced as well.

"That would make the bridge project much, much longer if we widened the bridge," Berthiaume said. "You're talking about major excavation right next to I-93."

Milton resident Lee Toma asked if something could be done at the intersection of Bryant Avenue and Robertson Street to slow down traffic coming off I-93 and turning onto the bridge.

"People do come flying off the expressway there," he said. "Is there something we can do to slow down the cars so that they take that turn a little more safely?"

Mark Elder, an engineer with Greenman-Pedersen, Inc., said the new traffic island that will replace the one currently at the intersection could possibly be reconfigured or made larger to help calm traffic down.

Galvin expressed a similar concern about cars heading northbound on Bryant Avenue and taking a left at the intersection onto Upton Street. Anthony Christakis, a MassDOT engineer, said options for that side of the intersection could be considered as well, including prohibiting turns from Bryant Avenue to Upton Street and adding a small traffic island at that corner.

Jim O'Leary of Bates Avenue was concerned about traffic on his street during construction, particularly vehicles that exited the expressway at the Bryant Avenue off-ramp.

"Every single night there are hundreds of cars that come up Bryant Ave. to Grove Street and take a left turn onto Bates Ave.," he stated. "With two lanes (on the bridge) that's the way it is. What's going to happen when there is one lane there? There will be thousands of cars coming up Bryant Ave. to Grove Street to take a left turn onto Bates Ave."

Antico said traffic issues are currently being evaluated as part of the design process for the new bridge.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior'

What is the difference between modern and contemporary design? Are they interchangeable in definition? Madeleine

There is often much confusion surrounding these two different styles. Modern is a distinct style from the 1920's to 50's and therefore doesn't change. It is characterized by clean, unadorned spaces using materials such as wood, leather, teak, or molded plywood and plastic. Modern interiors typically have white walls, bare floors, and open furniture raised off the floor.

Contemporary style is ever changing, what we call "of the moment." In other words, a decade from now this style will have new elements that make it contemporary. Today, contemporary interior design includes low-cushioned furniture, stainless steel appliances and kitchen islands, spa-like bathrooms, all tints and shades of the color gray and saturated solid brights like orange and turquoise, lighting with smoky glass, natural stone walls, and the use of geometric patterns in fabrics, rugs, and shapes of artwork, lighting, and coffee tables.

It can be confusing because many of the features in the previous paragraph can also be used in traditional interior design and, at times, modern elements can be in-vogue contemporary choices. I find most folks have an eclectic palate when it comes to interior design and it's perfectly fine to mix and match. Remember, op-

I love baskets. Please give me some ideas how to decorate with them. Stephanie

This is an easy one — especially since they can serve functional uses as well. For décor, hang flat baskets on a wall in a grouping or add attractive and unusual round baskets to shelves or bookcases as display art. For functional use, the sky's the limit. In the kitchen, use them to corral spices, dish-towels, snacks, and more. In the living room, they can hold magazines and craft projects. In bedrooms, they can store anything from shoes to toys. In the bath, they serve double duty as attractive containers for rolled towels, cosmetics, ... anything you need to organize.

South Shore Mental Health Honors 'Partners In Caring'

South Shore Mental Health recently presented Partner in Caring Awards to journalist Bree Sison, recently retired news editor Chazy Dowaliby, and corporate partner and champion event sponsor Eastern Bank.

Given during the organization's annual Building Hope, Changing Lives fundraiser at Lombardo's in Randolph, the awards recognized the contributions of each to the Quincy-based non-profit. "By shining a light on our programs and the clients we serve, Bree and Chazy have helped spark the conversation about mental illnesses as treatable physiological conditions," said Harry Shulman, President and CEO of South Shore Mental Health. "With their support and the support of key partners like Eastern Bank, we are able to make a difference for a growing number of children, teens, and adults each year."

The event, which featured guest speaker comedian and mental health advocate Amy Tee, celebrated the success of South Shore Mental Health's clients and raised funds to support the organization's programs for early intervention, mental health treatment, and recovery.

DA Morrissey Teams With CVS Pharmacy On Opiate Safety Project

Too many opiate addictions are still starting with legitimate, necessary prescriptions, and one leading drug store has joined. Norfolk Dist. Atty. Michael W. Morrissey in a new effort to prevent that.

"Although only a small proportion of prescriptions ever lead to misuse of any kind, we are tracing a good number of addictions back to pills obtained through a necessary physician's prescription," Morrissey said.

"When we investigate the circumstances and back-story of fatal overdoses, we often find that the deceased got started with a prescription after an orthopedic injury or surgery," Morrissey said. "Researchers also tell us that the majority of first-time opiate use involves a pill secreted from the medicine cabinet of friends or family."

In the new project, every time a prescription for a controlled substance is filled at a Norfolk County CVS Pharmacy, the consumer will walk out with safe use, storage and disposal information included with the prescription bag. CVS Pharmacy locations are also posting similar information at pharmacy counters county-wide.

"Our CVS pharmacists are dedicated to helping the communities we serve address and prevent prescription drug abuse," said Tom Davis, RPh, Vice President of Pharmacy Professional Practices at CVS Pharmacy. "Ensuring our patients have the information they need to properly use and dispose of their medication can make a real difference and we are proud to partner with DA Morrissey on this important patient education project."

The project has been rolling out store-by-store over the past few weeks and should be fully implemented county-wide as of this week.

"We know that no one who blows out their knee or shoulder on the job site, in a car crash or on the sports field, plans to get addicted when they fill their first prescription for pain killers — or plans for the pills end up in someone else's hands," Morrissey said.

"This is a simple, effective way to put safe storage, safe disposal and safe use at the forefront for everyone accessing these pills through CVS Pharmacy — even before that consumer opens the pill bottle," Morrissey said. "The addiction epidemic is a complex and multi-tiered problem. We need creative solutions and corporate and community partners if we are going to stop this rising tide."

As of May 26, detectives from Morrissey's office had responded to 62 fatal opiate overdoses since Jan. 1, 2016. That is roughly on pace with 2015, when the office responded to a total of 153 overdoses in 27 communities.

Quincy Rallies In Memorable Win Over North

By BILL GRIFFIN

Watch rivalry games in many sports for many passings of the sun, and there will not be a better one than the softball game Quincy and North Quincy played last week.

It was day of drama and memories. Quincy rallied from a four-run hole with six runs in the sixth inning and defeated North, 8-6 on Senior Night before a large crowd at Mitchell-McCoy Field who walked away with one thought: When these two play, anything is possible.

"We didn't do anything wrong. They did everything right," said North coach Jim Connor. "We played well. We hit the ball. But give them credit. They never gave up and in that sixth inning, they made solid contact."

The list of players who earned a spot on the day's honor roll is a long one.

Sophia Baldino (Quincy) — The sophomore outfielder stepped to the plate with the bases loaded, two outs and her team trailing, 6-4 in the bottom of the sixth. It was her second rivalry game. It was her moment. It was a situation every athlete plays out in her mind and in her imagination. Bases loaded. Two out. Game is there to be won or lost. It's all on me. Here comes the pitch...

Baldino drilled a bases-clearing triple to center. Three runs scored. Quincy was up, 7-6. A game which was surely lost just minutes earlier had changed and changed completely.

"I just tried to keep a clear head and see the ball.

I think I hit a pitch that was up a bit. It sure is a great feeling," she said.

"I liked her up there in that situation. She's cool in tough situations for a sophomore, and she had a good, confident swing," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers.

Sarah Franklin (North Quincy) — She was the best player in the field. She had two doubles, a single and three RBI. The only out she made was the hardest-hit ball of the game: A laser shot to center field with a runner on in the seventh which Kate McGahey hauled in somewhere past the Braintree town line.

"Sarah just crushed the ball. I knew she would come up big today. It's who she is," said Connor.

Franklin is a four-year starter and a three-year Patriot League All Star. She was hitting near .500 for the season. She has been through great change at North. The Red Raiders didn't win a game her sophomore year. They won two when she was a junior. They won four this year entering the final week of the season, including a win over Quincy in their first meeting which was North's first victory in the rivalry game in 10 years.

"We're young this year and I've had to lean on Sarah. She's has an alpha personality. Sometimes she corrects me. I call her Coach Franklin," said Connor.

Lucia Buzzell (Quincy) — She is a junior, and for the past two years Sommers has used her for her speed, hustle, and defense on two tournament teams. This year, she was a starter. In the sixth inning when Quincy sent 11 batters to the plate, Buzzell was on twice with a walk and a single. Her single drove home an insurance run and made the final, 8-6. She made an excellent catch

"I think we've been the underdogs in this game because we lost so many players from last year. It feels good to come back and get one from them, especially after we lost the first game," said Buzzell.

Samantha Smith (North Quincy) — Before moving on, remember one thing: She is a freshman. In three at-bats, she had a single, a walk, and scored two runs. She made the play of the game, and, maybe, the play of the season in center field.

With a runner on second and no out in the fifth, Shauna McColgan sent a soft liner which looked to be a certain hit. Smith broke the instant the ball hit the bat, took the best line to the ball, dove fully outstretched, arms and hands extended, and made the catch in the webbing of the glove. It saved a run. It was a catch one normally sees on television.

"She's a great athlete and she has unbelievable instincts. That's as good a catch as I've seen in a long time," said Connor.

Madison Synan (Quincy) — Watching her and Franklin catch in the same game is a treat. Synan had two doubles, a walk, and threw out two base-stealers. In Quincy's previous game against Whitman-Hanson, the Presidents rallied from a 6-2 deficit — life is indeed strange — for a victory. Synan won it with a walk-off home run in extra innings and quite possibly laid the emotional ground-work for the Presidents' winning rally against North. They knew they could come back from four runs down because they had just done it.

"I never thought we were out of it especially after the Whitman game. Madison has swung the bat well in the middle of the lineup for us all year," said Sommers.

There were many more players who richly deserve mention. McGahey had a single, two RBI, a run scored, two walks, a sacrifice fly and played a brilliant center field. Freshman Cam Burgio worked a tough complete game and earned her first rivalry win.

Captain Alicia Walker, who meant so much to Quincy this season as the only returning starter on the team, finished her varsity career with another solid game: A hit, a run scored, an RBI, and a fine game at second base. Sophomore

STUDENT ATHLETES OF THE MONTH

Jason Truong

Tennis - Quincy H.S.

"Jason Truong is the senior co-captain of the QHS Boys Tennis Team. He has worked this season to become a more patient player. He uses an effective top-spin forehand, then wins points with a flat, inside out crosscourt shot. This strategy helped Jason win several important matches during the season."

-Elliott Columb

Jason is a member of the Varsity Boys Tennis Team. He held the position of 3rd singles for the last two years at the Varsity level. His favorite match was a victory over the 3rd singles player for Plymouth North. He is currently ranked 42 in his class, with a 4.0 GPA. He is attending the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on a full academic scholarship, with plans to major in Engineering.

Marissa McGue

Soccer, Basketball, Lacrosse - North Quincy H.S.

"Marissa epitomizes the student-athlete. Her positive attitude in the classroom and athletics is second to none. She is a true leader and always puts her team first. This recognition as student-athlete of the month is truly well deserved."

-Greg Lannon

Marissa is a 3-sport athlete at North Quincy High. She was named Captain of the Varsity Girls' Soccer, Basketball, and Lacrosse teams. She is a 3-time Patriot League All-Star in Soccer as well as a member of the Eastern Mass All-Star Soccer Team this past season. She received the Individual Sportsmanship Award this past year in Basketball. She will be attending Westfield State to play Varsity Soccer and Lacrosse.

Quincy Downs Durfee For First Tournament Win

Boys Volleyball Team Advances To Second Round

By BILL GRIFFIN

Begin our story three years in the past.

Quincy's boys volleyball team is 1-19. Jacqui Niosi takes over as coach. She teaches the game. She works tirelessly on conditioning. She talks about mental toughness in close matches. Quincy may lose, but the Presidents will not lose because of fatigue. In her quiet, unassuming way, she reaches the players, she builds a team, and this year she leads her seniors to their first win over North and their first trip to the tournament.

And last week, in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals, her team made a bit of history. Xhuljo Zyba ruled the court with his all-around brilliance, Chris Situ set with touch and poise, and Christ Pham bounced off the floor digging out hard slams to lead the No. 5-seeded Presidents past No. 12-seed Durfee, 3-1 (23-25, 25-20, 25-21, 25-15) in an exciting, well-played match at Quincy High's Munroe MacLean gymnasium.

"This is the first tournament game the boys volleyball team has won at Quincy. We've made the tourney before, but this is our first win," said Niosi. "It was a super-competitive match. Durfee did not play like a 12th seed. We had played them in the regular season, and we knew they were good."

Quincy (15-4) faced No. 4 seed Randolph (14-4) in the second round of the sectionals at Randolph High School Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Quincy had beaten Durfee twice during the season. The scores were 3-2 and 3-0. Durfee was missing its best player for the second match. Niosi said before the tourney match that it would be close and fast. Durfee proved her correct by using its quickness and the big hitting of Sakai Howard and Ibrahim Na-Aata to grab the first game.

"I think they caught us off guard with their speed in that first game," said Niosi. "We talked about it during a time-out. We knew we had to be more aggressive. We were just tipping the ball at net. We had to go up, block and with more authority."

The first three games were uncommonly close. The largest margin for either team was five points. In the three games, there were an astonishing 25 ties and 18 lead changes. The Presidents won because they won the big points. They were fresh and they were tough. They had listened to their coach.

"I think adrenaline probably kicked in as well," smiled Niosi.

The second game was tied at 19-19. Stiven Cyfeku (13 blocks, eight kills) swung for a clear winner. Pham (eight kills, 24 digs) skidded off the floor to save a certain Durfee winner, and Zyba turned it into a Quincy point with a rocket of a slam. Zyba and Cyfeku rose above the net and sent back a finishing block for game point to tie the match at 1-1.

Quincy trailed 21-20 in the third game. The Presidents ran five straight points on Vince Cristiani's serve. Cristiani (six kills) fired well-placed serves, mixing speeds, and forcing weak returns. Zyba had a power kill, and Cyfeku came up huge with three blocks for winners in the run. Quincy had the game, and the 2-1 lead.

The match had turned to Quincy and would not turn back again to the Hilltoppers. Quincy had won the big points. Pick out ten points from a match that had 179 points in four games. Those ten points decided the match. Quincy won them.

"I think the key in those points were our blocking and defense," said Niosi. "Christ and Kenny Chan (12 digs) did a great job returning shots, and our front line went up and blocked with authority."

Zyba was terrific. He not only had overpowering hits at the net. He sent angled placements cross-court and spot-on touch volleys over Durfee's blockers. He saved a fistful of points with pure reflex, flicking out an arm or a hand to deflect a Durfee kill and keep alive a point.

"Xhuljo is fantastic volleyball player," said Niosi. "He loves to compete, and he's a leader for us. He has a lot of talent, and this year he has become more disciplined."

Situ, a junior setter, stayed calm in the middle of the storm. He had 35 assists. No matter how close the game, no matter how long or thrilling the point, Situ was a rock on the front line, consistently sending up high sets for Zyba, Cristiani and Cyfeku. While all around him were flying about, he remained steady and solid.

"He is a quiet, modest, even-keeled boy. He doesn't get too high or too low. That's the personality that is perfect for a setter," said Niosi.

Pham, a sophomore, sent back everything. Everything. If Zyba was overpowering and Situ was consistent, Pham was the acrobatic, playing out several full-extension saves which deserved to be preserved on a DVD of highlights.

"Chris is so solid on defense. He's a good athlete who can get to a lot of shots, and he's a good hitter for us as well," said Niosi.

With the third game won, the front line of Zyba, Cristiani, Cyfeku took over the final game with support from Situ's soft, accurate sets to close out the match.

QUINCY'S STIVEN CYFEKU (right) had a strong game at the net for Quincy with 13 blocks and eight kills.

QUINCY'S CHRIS SITU - who had 35 assists in the Presidents tournament win over Durfee - sets up a Quincy scoring opportunity.

Red Raiders Roll Past Boxers In First Round

By TOM JOYCE

It was their most important game so far this season and they did exactly what they needed to do.

The North Quincy High School boys volleyball team had topped Brockton High School earlier in the season. But it was a close match and both teams were tournament caliber. So it makes sense that they met up in the first round of the MIAA Division 1 South playoffs.

And with the Red Raiders being the 6-seed and the Boxers being the 11-seed, the Red Raiders were the favorites. They did not disappoint. They topped the Boxers, 3-1, at home last Friday.

The Red Raiders fell in the first set, 25-15, as their own mistakes proved costly. But in the three sets that followed, they had a clear edge, taking 25-17, 25-23 and 25-22 wins over the Boxers.

To start the contest, the Red Raiders were on the defensive — evident by the score of their first set. But towards the end of the first set, they began to put up points at about the same clip as the Boxers. And it was when they had a new start, in the second set, that they finally garnered an edge.

By their fourth set, the Red Raiders looked to have an easy win on hand as they went up, 20-15. But the Boxers would not quit and they tied the set up at 22 apiece. From there, the Red Raiders put up three unanswered points, in part due to mistakes by the Boxers.

One of the keys for the Red Raiders thus far has been limiting mistakes. And they are able to do so by keeping in constant communication on the court.

North Quincy coach Jason Cai noted one of his senior captains, Shiggy Zhang, is an excellent communicator on the court.

ERIC HUANG bumps the ball to set up a North Quincy scoring chance against Brockton. The junior setter had 20 assists in the Red Raiders 3-1 win over the Boxers in the first round of the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament.

"He commands the back row," Cai said of Zhang. "He's telling them what to look for, what's wrong and how he's going to fix it. He's a great leader, a great captain."

Zhang had a team-leading 15 digs while fellow senior captain Anxhelo Taho, a middle hitter, led the team with 16 kills. Sophomore outside hitter Chris Nguyen stood out with his 10 digs and 13 kill while junior setter Eric Huang had three aces.

Cai said his sophomore outside hitter Jimmy Huynh was his team's "x-factor" in the win. By that he meant while Huynh might not have stood out statistically, he was doing exactly what he was asked. And he had three blocks en route to the win.

Of course, being the favorites in the first round, the Red Raiders were expecting a win. But they knew it would not be easy.

"It was a hard-fought match," said Cai. "The kids played great. I have a lot of young players. We started off slow. We started off scared. You saw for the first five points, both teams were a little nervous. But after that, they got out on their own and played better."

Having the win over the Boxers earlier this season helped the Red Raiders' confidence approaching their tournament match-up. But they were not arrogant headed in based off a prior success.

"I knew they were going to be just as good — if not better than last time," said Cai. "I thought they were better today than they were the last few times we played them. The last few times, they were missing guys and today, I knew they would come in with their full roster — 100 percent."

"I know they're a tall team," he added. "So we had to work around their blocks. And were barely did this time. Just barely."

Like basketball, height gives teams an advantage on the volleyball court. The Boxers had a particularly tall team whereas the Red Raiders, on the other hand, are not gifted with much height. Even with their height, or the lack of it, the Red Raiders are finding ways to succeed. It might not be the most traditional style. But it is working for them.

"They're big," Cai said of the Boxers. "They can block. We're shorter. We're smaller. We're lower to the ground. We just have to beat them on speed and defense. That was the key to our success."

"We just needed to pass some of those balls and make it a little bit more difficult for them," he added. "We were trying to frustrate them and were hoping for a bad pass. If they had a bad pass, we'd get one back."

While they may be on the smaller side, Cai truly believes he has a strong team.

"They know how to play," he said. "They practice over and over again. The captains lead the way and we're getting those key blocks, key passes and stuff."

The Red Raiders traveled to Newton North to play the 3-seed Tigers Wednesday at 6 p.m.

YMCA Summer Programs Registration

The South Shore YMCA announces registration for summer programs at its Quincy and Emilson branches begins June 7th at 8:30 a.m. for full members and June 10th at 8:30 a.m. for non-members.

Registration will continue to be open to full members Wednesday, June 8th and Thursday, June 9th. The summer program session runs from June 19th to Aug. 27th and is 10 weeks.

The South Shore YMCA's Quincy and Emilson branches offer a wide range of programs for all ages this summer. From swim lessons and recreational sports to inclusion and family programs, the Y's Quincy and Emilson branches have programs available that meet the needs of all children, teens, adults and seniors.

The South Shore YMCA encourages children and parents throughout the South Shore to explore the many benefits of swimming, while also keeping safety top of mind. The Y's swim programs give participants the opportunity to learn crucial water safety skills that can save lives, enhance or learn new techniques, enjoy water sports, meet new friends and develop confidence and their physical ability. Branches offer a wide variety of swim programs, including family swim, youth competitive swim team, water babies and adult swim clinics.

Branch specific Summer Program Guides, which contain a full listing of all programs available to register for at the Y's Quincy and Emilson branches, are located on the YMCA's website, ssymca.org.

Rosheline Molina played well at shortstop.

For North, sophomore Johanna Douglas had two walks, a single, and two runs scored in three at-bats. Sophomore Jessie Caldwell had a double and an RBI. Sophomore Kristen Thornton threw 5 1/3 innings and gave just five hits while striking out six. Three sophomores and Smith who is a freshman: The future is bright.

Sammie Caldwell had a single, an RBI, and scalded a shot which was ticketed for center field before Burgo snared it for the game-ending double play. Senior Nancy Aimola finished a terrific varsity career with a single, an RBI and a strong game in left field. Brianna Sullivan had a hit while Maeve Keane scored two runs.

"The two teams are so close that we are almost clones of each other," said Connor. "Sarah and Sammie hit the ball hard in the seventh inning, but that's the way it goes in rivalry games: Anything can happen. These are two well-matched teams."

This is true. In two games against North, Quincy scored 12 runs. In two games against Quincy, North scored 12 runs. Enough said.

Aimola, Franklin, Emily Anglehart, Olivia Limoncelli and Jen Luo from North were introduced as seniors before the game along with Walker, Eliane Cabral, Jessica Ball and Vanessa Demore from Quincy.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

WHAT WORKS FOR YOU?

One of the first things that those unfamiliar with chiropractic treatment want to know is: Will it work? The fact is that spinal manipulation involving the application of force to move joints to relieve pain provides immediate benefits for most patients with low-back pain, but not for all. As is the case with cancer, glaucoma, and a host of other diseases and conditions, back pain is a collection of different kinds of problems. Thus, no single treatment can be expected to be as successful in one back-pain sufferer as the next. Of course, the chiropractor tailors treatment in accordance with specific causes of each patient's condition. This approach is usually successful, but patients must find out for themselves.

A continuing schedule of regular chiropractic checkups can help detect, correct, and maintain optimum spinal and nervous system function. Find out how chiropractic care, combined with proper diet, exercise, and other aspects of good health and personal hygiene, can enhance your well-being and help you enjoy life to the fullest. Call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. Because back pain may arise from a strained muscle, a "slipped" disc, abnormal body mechanics, and many other conditions, the source of the pain must be clearly identified before it can be treated with the most suitable and effective therapy.

Memories Abound For Q-NQ Girls Lacrosse Players

By BILL GRIFFIN

The captain knows best.

After North Quincy defeated Quincy, 15-2 on Senior Night last week at Veterans Memorial Stadium to finish its season at 11-9, captain Charlotte Chretien talked about the experience of growing with a team, of what it felt like freshman year when she picked up a lacrosse stick for the first time, and the wonderful ride which resulted in two tournament bids after the Red Raiders went eight years without making the play-offs.

"The first time I touched a lacrosse stick was freshman year. I think that was true for all of us except Marissa (McGue)," said Chretien. "All credit to our coaches (Meg Therrien and Jill Benn). They taught us, they inspired us. Everything was positive. We all have great respect for them, and they're the reason why we are here."

Chretien also spoke about her favorite memory from her time at North. It was not a victory, a trophy, a highlight play, or an individual honor. It was the final goal against Quincy and the girl who scored it, Jamie Meade, a goal in the final seconds long after the match had been won, a goal which brought forth an explosion of noise from the North bench.

"Jamie Meade's goal is my favorite memory," said Chretien. "Jamie has played deep defense for her whole career. She plays defense because that's where we need her. I don't think she has come close to a scoring chance. That was her first goal ever on varsity. She was so happy, she was crying. We all felt the same way."

This is not a collection of individuals who happen to wear the same colors. This is a team. They play for each other, not for themselves. Against Quincy, 12 different players scored. They shared the ball, they shared the chances. There was not a hint of selfishness in this final rivalry game for the seniors.

Lifeguard Training Course Registration Begins June 15

The City of Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an American Red Cross Lifeguard Training Course at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool this summer, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The course is open to participants who are at least 15 years of age and capable of passing a pre-requisite water skills test. The pre-requisite swim test will be given to all candidates on Tuesday, June 28 at 7 p.m. at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool.

Class will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, June 28, June 30, July 5, July 7, July 12, July 14, July 19, July 21, July 26, July 28, Aug. 2, Aug. 4, Aug. 9, and Aug. 11 at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool from 6 to 8 p.m.

Registration for the course is limited. Registration begins on Wednesday, June 15 in person at the Quincy Recreation office, One Merrymount Parkway, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and will continue as openings exist.

The cost of the program is $140, which includes all books, supplies, and Red Cross fees.

Upon successful completion of the course, an American Red Cross Lifeguard Training Certificate, CPR for the Professional Rescuer and First Aid Skills will be issued.

Sisters Nicole, Taylor Parry College Softball Champs

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is a story about a lifetime of memories crammed into seven days. It is about league titles and trips to the NCAAs and graduation and trophies and dances and the sweet melancholy good-byes of the final passing of senior year in college.

But more than anything, it is a story about two sisters.

Former Quincy High star Nicole Parry, a senior, stood directly under the spotlight on the center of the stage. She finished a wonderful career at Salve Regina College by pitching the Seahawks to the Commonwealth Coast Conference softball championship and the school's first trip to the NCAA Regionals. She strung together three shutout offerings in the league tournament and earned the win in her team's only victory in the regionals.

Taylor Parry, a sophomore, played her role off the stage behind the curtain and did the work that few notice and fewer appreciate. She missed the entire season with a back injury. She did not dwell on herself or her bad fortune. She sang and cheered and chanted and she helped make her team a team.

The magical week will always remain with them not because of trophies or victories, but because they had each other to share the ride.

"When I first found out that I would miss the season, what bothered me most was this was my last season of softball with Nicole," said Taylor. "Nicole and the other captains talked to me. They talked to me about staying part of the team, about contributing any way I could. I tried to turn it into positive energy and I felt better."

Her sister noticed.

"Taylor became the heart and soul of the bench," said Nicole. "It was like having another manager. She was always up, always cheering, always encouraging. She didn't think about herself. She thought about all of us. She made us a better, closer team."

After a short time, it stopped being something Taylor should do. It became something she wanted to do. It was not a chore. It was fun.

"I sang the school song and did all the chants on the bench. I thought my job was making sure everyone was happy. We had a motto: 17 sisters playing together. I just played a small part," said Taylor.

In the end, it was about a rare moment in the life of a family.

"Think about how many players win a league title and play in the NCAAs," said Nicole. "There aren't many. How many sisters are able to do it together? Not many. This is special. This is something that we will always have."

Nicole Parry had a remarkable career at Salve Regina. She was a two-year captain. In three seasons, she went 35-25 with a 2.58 ERA. She struck out 384 and walked only 93. That is better than a 4-1 strikeout-to-walk ratio. That is elite.

This season, she was 12-8 with 17 complete games in 23 starts. She struck out 132 and had an ERA of 2.90, but as good as these numbers are, Parry is a pitcher whose value far exceeds her stats.

"Nicole's biggest strength is the way she commands the field," said coach Jessica DePolito. "She matured over three years and as a senior, she added a change-up and a drop which made her better. That was important, but a pitcher in softball needs to take command. Nicole has a presence when she pitches."

Parry and DePolito began together. DePolito took over Parry's sophomore year. DePolito wanted to change the program. She needed a pitcher. Parry had not pitched an inning as a freshman. She told her new coach that she could pitch. DePolito took a chance. They set a goal of winning the conference championship. They took the trip together, pitcher and coach, and the bond made the final crazy week more rich and satisfying.

"A league title and the NCAAs are special moments for an athlete. I'm just glad that Nicole and the seniors had a chance to experience them. They bought in and did everything I asked for the program. They transformed it," said DePolito.

Parry flourished under the bright lights of the playoffs. In the league tournament, she threw three innings of shutout ball against Roger Williams, Brandeis and Western New England. She combined with Kelsey Boarman for wins in each game. She fired five strong, tough innings in a win over Endicott. In the NCAA's, she threw two-hit, shutout softball over four innings while striking out five for a 5-0 decision over Becker. She was at her best against

"Nicole is a gamer. She pitched her best under pressure. You can't coach that. An athlete has it or she doesn't," said DePolito.

"I tried to embrace the moment, enjoy the opportunity to pitch in important games," said Parry.

The final week was something out of a screenplay. On Sunday, Salve defeated Roger Williams for the league championship. It was graduation week. There were senior parties, senior events, the beginning of saying good-bye to friendships that grew strong and firm over four years.

On Thursday, the team drove to Boston to practice at Tufts. Thursday night, Parry drove to Newport for the commencement ball. Friday morning, she drove back to Boston. Friday, WPI edged the Seahawks, 4-3 in a nine-inning heart-breaker. Saturday morning, Parry led her team past Becker. Saturday afternoon, Tufts eliminated the Seahawks, 4-1.

Sunday, she graduated. Monday, she moved out her house. Tuesday, she rested.

"Not enough hours in the day, not enough days in the week," she smiled. "I'm just grateful I had a chance to experience it all. I'll never forget raising the trophy with Genevieve (Benoit) and Melissa (Figueiredo). The NCAA's were great, and I also had all my senior moments. I went to the ball, I graduated with my class, I had a chance to say good-bye to my friends. It was a week that I will never forget."

Taylor Parry saw varsity action as a freshman. Her back is much better. Her coach is confident about Parry's ability. This year, she did the hardest thing an athlete can do. She sat and watched. Next year, she will play.

"She has the talent to be a good varsity player. She'll play for us next year," said DePolito. "I cannot say enough about what Taylor did this year. She had a tough break. She could have quit and felt sorry for herself. Instead, she made herself a huge part of the team. She made us better."

For one championship season, the two sisters had different parts to play. One had the lead role. One was the supporting player. The ending was something out of a story-book.

"Taylor and I played volleyball and basketball together in high school," said Nicole. "We've been playing sports together for a long time. To have it end like this, winning a league title and playing in the NCAAs is unbelievable. It means so much because we did it together."

"It's our whole family as well. Everyone in our family gets so involved in our sports. They have always supported us," said Taylor. "The hardest thing this year was missing Nicole's final year. Next year will be hard as well. She won't be on my team. Nicole's nickname on the team is 'Mom' because she takes care of everybody. I'll miss that."

More than anything, it was a story of two sisters.

Recreation Department Learn To Swim Classes

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch announces that for the 41st year the department will offer American Red Cross certified learn to swim classes at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool.

There will be two sessions offered during the summer vacation period.

In addition to learning important water safety skills, learning to swim opens a life time of recreational opportunities such as boating and sailing and other aquatic activities.

Classes are offered from beginner to advanced levels supervised by water safety instructors on the Recreation Department staff.

Registration is done by swim level and the Recreation Department will conduct a night of in pool testing in preparation for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have improved with additional instruction or swim time during the winter.

The schedule for this testing is Friday, June 10th from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The Boating and Sailing prerequisite swim test will also be given at this time for residents age 8 or older who are planning on participating in the departments rowing, sailing, canoe and kayak program this summer.

Past boating participants do not need to be retested.

The normal recreational swimming schedule will be canceled during hours of testing.

There will be two summer sessions. Session One begins Monday, June 27th and ends Tuesday, July 19th. Session Two begins Thursday, July 21st and ends Thursday, Aug. 11th. Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merry-mount Parkway.

The following classes are offered for both sessions and are conducted in accordance with the standards of the American Red Cross: Level I/II Water Exploration and Primary Skills; Level III Stroke Readiness; Level IV Stroke Development; Level V/VI Stroke Refinement and Proficiency.

The department will also offer Lifeguard Training that will begin Tuesday, June 28th and will run through August. Contact the Recreation Department for details regarding this course, 617-376-1394.

Instructions are for children who are age six and over and are Quincy residents. Lifeguard Training candidates must be 15 years of age and must pass a prerequisite swim test.

Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merry-mount Parkway, according to the following schedule.

Session 1: Class dates are June 27th - July 19th and REGISTRATION will be Thursday, June 16 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Session 2: Class dates are July 21st to Aug. 11th and REGISTRATION will be Wednesday, June 15 from 9 a.m. to noon. Lifeguard Training REGISTRATION will be Wednesday, June 15 from 9 a.m. to noon.

All participants must be Quincy residents and the Quincy Recreation Department will not accept pre-registration or phone registrations. Assured placement in the class, day and times of choice should be done at the above dates and times. Post-registration is accepted on a space available basis.

For more information call 617-376-1394, or go to www.QuincyRec.com.

Correction: Consalvi QHS Shot Put Record Holder

Because of inaccurate information provided to The Quincy Sun, a story in last week's Sun erroneously stated that Quincy High's Mike Munroe had set a new school record in the shot put at a recent track and field meet against North Quincy.

Munroe won the shot put event at the meet with a toss of 58 feet but that distance is not a school record as it was reported.

The QHS record is 58 feet, 5 1/2 inches set in 1964 by Quincy High School's John (Jake) Consalvi. Consalvi, who graduated QHS in 1964, set the mark at the New England Interscholastic Track meet held that spring at Brown University in Providence.

Consalvi's record toss was an upset at the meet. He defeated defending state champion Jon Fairfield of Wilmington who threw for 58 feet, one quarter inch at the meet.

Consalvi also competed in the shot put twice at nationals during his high school career, finishing second at one meet with a toss of 56 feet, 5 and 1/2 inches.

It is a story about a lifetime of memories crammed into seven days. It is about league titles and trips to the NCAAs and graduation and trophies and dances and the sweet melancholy good-byes of the final passing of senior year in college.

But more than anything, it is a story about two sisters.

Former Quincy High star Nicole Parry, a senior, stood directly under the spotlight on the center of the stage. She finished a wonderful career at Salve Regina College by pitching the Seahawks to the Commonwealth Coast Conference softball championship and the school's first trip to the NCAA Regionals. She strung together three shutout offerings in the league tournament and earned the win in her team's only victory in the regionals.

Taylor Parry, a sophomore, played her role off the stage behind the curtain and did the work that few notice and fewer appreciate. She missed the entire season with a back injury. She did not dwell on herself or her bad fortune. She sang and cheered and chanted and she helped make her team a team.

The magical week will always remain with them not because of trophies or victories, but because they had each other to share the ride.

"When I first found out that I would miss the season, what bothered me most was this was my last season of softball with Nicole," said Taylor. "Nicole and the other captains talked to me. They talked to me about staying part of the team, about contributing any way I could. I tried to turn it into positive energy and I felt better."

Her sister noticed.

"Taylor became the heart and soul of the bench," said Nicole. "It was like having another manager. She was always up, always cheering, always encouraging. She didn't think about herself. She thought about all of us. She made us a better, closer team."

After a short time, it stopped being something Taylor should do. It became something she wanted to do. It was not a chore. It was fun.

"I sang the school song and did all the chants on the bench. I thought my job was making sure everyone was happy. We had a motto: 17 sisters playing together. I just played a small part," said Taylor.

In the end, it was about a rare moment in the life of a family.

"Think about how many players win a league title and play in the NCAAs," said Nicole. "There aren't many. How many sisters are able to do it together? Not many. This is special. This is something that we will always have."

Nicole Parry had a remarkable career at Salve Regina. She was a two-year captain. In three seasons, she went 35-25 with a 2.58 ERA. She struck out 384 and walked only 93. That is better than a 4-1 strikeout-to-walk ratio. That is elite.

This season, she was 12-8 with 17 complete games in 23 starts. She struck out 132 and had an ERA of 2.90, but as good as these numbers are, Parry is a pitcher whose value far exceeds her stats.

"Nicole's biggest strength is the way she commands the field," said coach Jessica DePolito. "She matured over three years and as a senior, she added a change-up and a drop which made her better. That was important, but a pitcher in softball needs to take command. Nicole has a presence when she pitches."

Parry and DePolito began together. DePolito took over Parry's sophomore year. DePolito wanted to change the program. She needed a pitcher. Parry had not pitched an inning as a freshman. She told her new coach that she could pitch. DePolito took a chance. They set a goal of winning the conference championship. They took the trip together, pitcher and coach, and the bond made the final crazy week more rich and satisfying.

"A league title and the NCAAs are special moments for an athlete. I'm just glad that Nicole and the seniors had a chance to experience them. They bought in and did everything I asked for the program. They transformed it," said DePolito.

Parry flourished under the bright lights of the playoffs. In the league tournament, she threw three innings of shutout ball against Roger Williams, Brandeis and Western New England. She combined with Kelsey Boarman for wins in each game. She fired five strong, tough innings in a win over Endicott. In the NCAA's, she threw two-hit, shutout softball over four innings while striking out five for a 5-0 decision over Becker. She was at her best against the best.

"Nicole is a gamer. She pitched her best under pressure. You can't coach that. An athlete has it or she doesn't," said DePolito.

"I tried to embrace the moment, enjoy the opportunity to pitch in important games," said Parry.

The final week was something out of a screenplay. On Sunday, Salve defeated Roger Williams for the league championship. It was graduation week. There were senior parties, senior events, the beginning of saying good-bye to friendships that grew strong and firm over four years.

On Thursday, the team drove to Boston to practice at Tufts. Thursday night, Parry drove to Newport for the commencement ball. Friday morning, she drove back to Boston. Friday, WPI edged the Seahawks, 4-3 in a nine-inning heart-breaker. Saturday morning, Parry led her team past Becker. Saturday afternoon, Tufts eliminated the Seahawks, 4-1.

Sunday, she graduated. Monday, she moved out her house. Tuesday, she rested.

"Not enough hours in the day, not enough days in the week," she smiled. "I'm just grateful I had a chance to experience it all. I'll never forget raising the trophy with Genevieve (Benoit) and Melissa (Figueiredo). The NCAA's were great, and I also had all my senior moments. I went to the ball, I graduated with my class, I had a chance to say good-bye to my friends. It was a week that I will never forget."

Taylor Parry saw varsity action as a freshman. Her back is much better. Her coach is confident about Parry's ability. This year, she did the hardest thing an athlete can do. She sat and watched. Next year, she will play.

"She has the talent to be a good varsity player. She'll play for us next year," said DePolito. "I cannot say enough about what Taylor did this year. She had a tough break. She could have quit and felt sorry for herself. Instead, she made herself a huge part of the team. She made us better."

For one championship season, the two sisters had different parts to play. One had the lead role. One was the supporting player. The ending was something out of a story-book.

"Taylor and I played volleyball and basketball together in high school," said Nicole. "We've been playing sports together for a long time. To have it end like this, winning a league title and playing in the NCAAs is unbelievable. It means so much because we did it together."

"It's our whole family as well. Everyone in our family gets so involved in our sports. They have always supported us," said Taylor. "The hardest thing this year was missing Nicole's final year. Next year will be hard as well. She won't be on my team. Nicole's nickname on the team is 'Mom' because she takes care of everybody. I'll miss that."

More than anything, it was a story of two sisters.

Correction: Consalvi QHS Shot Put Record Holder

Because of inaccurate information provided to The Quincy Sun, a story in last week's Sun erroneously stated that Quincy High's Mike Munroe had set a new school record in the shot put at a recent track and field meet against North Quincy. Munroe won the shot put event at the meet with a toss of 58 feet but that distance is not a school record as it was reported.

The QHS record is 58 feet, 5 1/2 inches set in 1964 by Quincy High School's John (Jake) Consalvi. Con-

salvi, who graduated QHS in 1964, set the mark at the New England Interscholastic Track meet held that spring at Brown University in Providence.

Consalvi's record toss was an upset at the meet. He defeated defending state champion Jon Fairfield of Wilmington who threw for 58 feet, one quarter inch at the meet.

Consalvi also competed in the shot put twice at nationals during his high school career, finishing second at one meet with a toss of 56 feet, 5 and 1/2 inches.

Recreation Department Learn To Swim Classes

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch announces that for the 41st year the department will offer American Red Cross certified learn to swim classes at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool.

There will be two sessions offered during the summer vacation period.

In addition to learning important water safety skills, learning to swim opens a life time of recreational opportunities such as boating and sailing and other aquatic activities.

Classes are offered from beginner to advanced levels supervised by water safety instructors on the Recreation Department staff.

Registration is done by swim level and the Recreation Department will conduct a night of in pool testing in preparation for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have improved with additional instruction or swim time during the winter.

The schedule for this testing is Friday, June 10th from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The Boating and Sailing prerequisite swim test will also be given at this time for residents age 8 or older who are planning on participating in the departments rowing, sailing, canoe and kayak program this summer.

Past boating participants do not need to be retested.

The normal recreational swimming schedule will be canceled during hours of testing.

There will be two summer sessions. Session One begins Monday, June 27th and ends Tuesday, July 19th. Session Two begins Thursday, July 21st and ends Thursday, Aug. 11th. Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merry-mount Parkway.

The following classes are offered for both sessions and are conducted in accordance with the standards of the American Red Cross: Level I/II Water Exploration and Primary Skills; Level III Stroke Readiness; Level IV Stroke Development; Level V/VI Stroke Refinement and Proficiency.

The department will also offer Lifeguard Training that will begin Tuesday, June 28th and will run through August. Contact the Recreation Department for details regarding this course, 617-376-1394.

Instructions are for children who are age six and over and are Quincy residents. Lifeguard Training candidates must be 15 years of age and must pass a prerequisite swim test.

Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merry-mount Parkway, according to the following schedule.

Session 1: Class dates are June 27th - July 19th and REGISTRATION will be Thursday, June 16 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Session 2: Class dates are July 21st to Aug. 11th and REGISTRATION will be Wednesday, June 15 from 9 a.m. to noon. Lifeguard Training REGISTRATION will be Wednesday, June 15 from 9 a.m. to noon.

All participants must be Quincy residents and the Quincy Recreation Department will not accept pre-registration or phone registrations. Assured placement in the class, day and times of choice should be done at the above dates and times. Post-registration is accepted on a space available basis.

For more information call 617-376-1394, or go to www.QuincyRec.com.

Q-NQ Girls Lacrosse

The Red Raiders played the passing and transition game Chretien. Molly Kate Cannon, Savannah Flynn, Kerin Coleman, Sarah Tasan, and Makeiyah Dambreville cycled the ball and slipped one-touch passes though tiny cracks to the open shooter.

McGue and Hailey Houlihan started the transition passes, the passes which caught runners in full stride, and moved the ball from defense to attack. This is the passing that Therrien loves. They worked the give-and-go, they lofted long floaters down the wings, and they moved and passed in patterns, almost sensing where a mate would be without looking.

"I think the most important step forward we've taken this year is our passing, especially moving the ball quickly in transition," said Therrien.

McGue dominated the game in the early minutes, controlling the middle of the field, the faceoffs, and possession for North. The Red Raiders jumped to a 6-0 lead and were up, 8-2 at the half. Senior Savannah Flynn used her superior speed to lead the scoring with three goals.

The scoring sheet is a testament to unselfishness. McGue had two goals and an assist. Chretien added a goal and two assists. Celia Hussey had a goal and an assist. Single goals went to Cannon, Coleman, Tsan, Meade, Katie Sautter, Kara Carchedi, Leona Tu, and Karyn McEvoy. Houlihan had an assist. Gabby Doody played a fine game in goal. A team effort.

"I liked the way we shared the ball, and I liked the fact we were able to play our whole roster and let them experience a rivalry game," said Therrien.

The best player for Quincy, and the best player on the field, was junior keeper Julia Silverman who had 22 saves. None of them were easy. She stopped direct shots, point-blank drives, clean breakaways and rebounds. She was brilliant. She was not only athletic and smart, she was calm and poised in the face of North's constant attack.

"She is very athletic. I thought she was amazing. She deserves all credit for the way she played," said Therrien.

"She was great today, and her save percentage is off the charts," said Quincy coach Alisa Arakelian. "Her save percentage is over 70 per cent. Anything over 50 per cent in lacrosse is good. Over 70 per cent is mind-blowing."

After North's initial run, Quincy settled down and began to attack late in the first half. Patriot League All Star McKenna Kiley moved the ball well from defense to offense. Lucy Zhang and Gabby Jerahian scored. Lauren Gardiner, Taylor Routhier, Maggie Tierney and Jerahian put steady pressure on the North net.

"We called timeout after they scored the first six goals and changed our strategy. It helped," Arakelian. "McKenna Kiley is a lacrosse player. She's smart, she knows how to play the game, and she is a great leader."

It was the 24th and final rivalry game for McGue and Jerahian. Each started in soccer, basketball and lacrosse for four years. McGue, once again, directed the pace and flow of the game. She finished the regular season with 56 goals and 16 assists. She scored two against Quincy and would have had six were it not for the work of Silverman in net.

"Marissa is an athlete. Sports come naturally to her. She'll will have a lot of fun playing lacrosse and soccer in college," said Therrien.

The play which best showed Jerahian's speed and skills came early in the second half. She took a short pass near her own goal, simply outraced the defense for the length of the field, circled the North net and put herself in scoring position. She fired a hard, low drive, but Doody made an excellent save. It was one of many times when Jerahian was simply faster than everyone else.

"She's my highlight player, the one whose going to make the play that shows up in a photo in the newspaper," smiled Arakelian. Jerahian led her team in scoring with 34 goals and 15 assists.

The final words are best left to the captain. The captain knows best.

"I remember when I was a sophomore, the captains said to enjoy it all because it goes by fast," she said. "Half the girls on the lacrosse team are on the soccer team, so I've played with my teammates in two sports for three years. It makes this a little bittersweet. I'm not going going to play sports in college. This and the tournament will be my last games. The captains were right. It does go by too fast."

Chretien, Flynn, Cannon, McGue, Tsan, Sautter, Carchedi, Tu, Houlihan, Meade, Doody, Maeve Rioridan, and Rachel Gillespie were introduced with their families before the match. Quincy's Jerahian, Kiley, Zhang, Sarah Clancy, Jayda Chase, Kylie Whalen, and Anxhela Hoti were also honored.

North Quincy (13th seed) visited Wellesley (4th seed) Tuesday in the first round of the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament. The game was played after The Sun went to press Tuesday afternoon.

Kelsey Fisher On Spring All-Academic Team

Kelsey Fischer, a junior at Connecticut College, has been named to the 2016 NESCAC Spring All-Academic Team by the New England Small College Athletic Conference.

Fischer is a graduate of Quincy High School and is the daughter of Carol and Martin Fischer. She is on Connecticut College's Women's Rowing team.

Fischer is one of 69 Connecticut College student athletes selected by the conference.

Boys Tennis Teams Courting Success

By TOM JOYCE

Their records might not show it, but the North Quincy High School and Quincy High School boys tennis teams have reason to consider their teams' seasons a success.

In their recent final matchup against one another, the Red Raiders (2-16) topped the Presidents (3-15), 3-2. It was the second time the teams had met one another this spring.

Of course, with five combined wins between the two teams, they might not have had the best season. But both coaches felt as though it was a worthwhile experience.

"It's been a very positive year referring to the kids," said Red Raiders head coach Matt Ramponi. "Their attitudes and their work ethic. Unfortunately, a lot of us are still new to the game and we play in an extremely competitive league."

"We've had some very close matches," he added. "We're definitely competing and improving. So we have a lot of positives for years to come."

"We've had a lot of fun," said Presidents head coach Elliot Columb. "We've made a lot of progress as players both in singles and in doubles. If we're going to mark anything down, I'd say it's our progress."

Both sides would consider themselves in a rebuilding phase because while they did have some upper classmen, they do have a number of returnees — partly because the participation rates are high. And of course, the coaches are happy to see many young athletes going out for the sport.

"When you're trying to develop any program in high school, having young kids that are involved means everything to a program," said Ramponi. "You know they'll put the time in, they'll learn from the seniors in front of them. And it's a trickle-down effect."

It helps their cases that both sides have a strong JV program to go along with the varsity players they have returning. The Presidents are graduating a number of their top contributors. But a quick glance at the roster indicates they had a well-balanced mix of youth and seniority.

For the Presidents, senior captains Genderson Lai and Jason Troung were among the team's top contributors.

"They're leading the team in wins," said Columb. "But on top of that, they're here every day and they run practices; they get things set up for practice before it even starts."

"We've got a nice group of up-and-coming kids," he added. "They seem like they're going to play tennis all summer long. We haven't won every game and we haven't won all of the games we should have. But I think we'll come back stronger next year."

On the Red Raiders' side, junior Brigham McKee has been the top singles player this season while senior Justin Wang led the team's performance in doubles. But Ramponi said he was happy with the effort he received from all of his players.

Ramponi, who is in just his second year as the Red Raiders head coach, said he was asked to become the team's head coach last season. And while did not have any experience playing or watching the sport (he is also a basketball coach), he has quickly taken a liking to the sport and is learning as much as he can alongside the players he is teaching.

Ramponi said he is especially happy with the leadership and initiative he has seen from his kids. He said on the team's off days, the seniors organized essentially captains practices to help themselves and the younger players continue to improve. And Ramponi admitted these extra practices were not his doing; they were all player-run.

"They've got outstanding leadership," he explained. "Very high academic team as well. No issues on and off the courts. It's been a great experience."

Leadership seems to be similar for both teams because Columb was also happy with the way his seniors led his team.

"They're good role models," he explained. "And they show these younger kids what it's like to be part of a team."

By that, he explained that not only do his seniors help the younger kids learn the technique, but they help their teammates prepare on game day as well.

Of course, the Presidents and Red Raiders relationship can vary from sport-to-sport. In football, they are each other's biggest rivals. But in girls hockey and boys lacrosse, co-op programs, they are close with one another. So where do they stand on the tennis courts?

"They all know each other," said Columb. "They have played with each other in the summer and what not. They know each other very well."

Columb added that it is nice to see the kids having a good time with one another. And he stressed that unlike other sports, tennis is one people can play for the rest of their lives.

Girl Scout Volunteers Awarded for Service

Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts (GSEM) recently recognized Quincy Girl Scout volunteers for exceptional service at the annual Volunteer Recognition Ceremony held at the Sheraton Hotel and Conference Center, Framingham.

Approximately 65 volunteers and six Service Units (a group of volunteers supporting a city, town, or group of towns) from across eastern Massachusetts were recognized for their service.

Quincy Service Unit team received the Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts President Award. Gail Spring also individually received the prestigious Girl Scouts of the USA Honor Pin.

Service Unit members are: Martine Assaf, Service Unit Co-Coordinator; Lisa Patacchiola, Service Unit Co-Coordinator; Gail Spring, Service Unit Organizer and Registrar; Cindy Trillcott, Service Unit Treasurer; Courtney Joyce, Fall Product Sale Manager and Service Unit Cookie Manager; Donna Yang, Service Unit Events Coordinator; and Jennifer Davis, Service Unit Media Coordinator.

"We are deeply grateful to our Quincy volunteers whose commitment to enriching girls lives which enables them to thrive and become the leaders of tomorrow," said Patricia A. Parcellin, Chief Executive Officer, Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts.

The President Award recognizes a GSEM geographic area, service unit, service-delivery team or committee whose exemplary delivery of the Girl Scout Leadership Experience surpassed team goals and resulted in significant, measurable impact for the council. The team must practice the values of inclusive behavior and reflect the diversity of the geographic area it serves.

The Girl Scouts of the USA Honor Pin recognizes volunteers actively giving outstanding service in support of the Girl Scout Leadership Experience in two or more geographic areas or program delivery audiences.

Recipients must be registered Girl Scout adults who actively recognize, understand and practice the values of inclusive behavior. They must have significantly contributed to meeting one or more council goals in membership growth and retention, fund development and increased community visibility in two or more geographic areas.

Nominated by their peers and council staff, these individuals have been recogbrief Dyslexia informational session at the Thomas Crane Library in Quincy on April 25th. Approximately, 70 attendants including Mayor Koch's wife, Christine Koch, Senator Keenan's aide, QPS Supt. Additionally, the US Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor & Pension held a hearing on, "Understanding Dyslexia: The Intersection of Scientific Research & Education on May 10th. The featured panelists included Dr. Sally Shaywitz, the co-director at Yale's Center for Dyslexia and Creativity located at Yale University in New Haven, CT, Ameer Baraka, Author/Actor, Terrytown, LA., Dr. Guinevere Eden, Director of the Center for the Study of Learning at Georgetown University Medical Center, Washington DC, David Boies, Chairman of Boies, Schiller, & Flexner, LLP in Armonk, NY, Dr. Mark Mahone, the Director of the Department of Neuropsychology at the Kennedy Krieger Institute in Baltimore, MD. And Ms. April Hanrath, parent and advocate. Senator Warren, actively attended and participated in this hearing which can be viewed <https://www.help/senate/gov/hearings/understanding-dyslexia-the-intersection-of-scientific-research-and-education>.

How will passing SB 312 and HB 463 help?

These bills will standardize care in Massachusetts Department of Education and maintain our children's reading health based on scientific research and brain imaging technology, formalizing a protocol for the identification, screening, and education for teachers, and the best practice for the intervention of dyslexia. There will be a legal definition based on scientific evidence for dyslexia, stating it is a "specific learning disability that is neurological in origin." It will ensure early screening for kids before the end of first grade.

Utilizing research from Dr. Gaab (Boston Children's Hospital) that illustrates a paradox in our current reading education with higher costs and increased negative consequences without early screening and interventions. There is also a proposal to establish a Dyslexia Task force to continue to research and connect science with our educational system to ensure best practices are implemented for these children. Furthermore, identifying those at risk for developing dyslexia and providing early interventions promotes positive social health when we recognize the actual cost of "low health literacy," to the U.S. is "more than $58 billion annually," (NPSF). These numbers cannot be ignored, when we understand, children with reading learning disabilities are at a greater risk to use substances and the IDA reports over "80% of Juveniles have reading disabilities."

On May 2016, the Dyslexia legislation passed through the House and Senate in the state of New Hampshire. Massachusetts, maintains some of the most prestigious research institutes and educational landmarks in the U.S., it is time to use this scientific knowledge and address the civil rights of this disability group who deserve Free Appropriate Education (FAPE). However, just imagine, how much we can accomplish, if our great City of President's QPS Education Members, School Committee Members and families continue with their positive collaborative efforts to ensure all of our children with disabilities succeed.

Children of the Commonwealth need your help. So, you may be reading this and ask, if all of these important people are supporting SB 312 and HB 463, why do you need me to help? These bills are currently in the Education Committee and need to be requested to be sent out of this Committee in early June 2016 or it will die.

Please consider calling, emailing or writing your local senator or representative. Ask them to send SB 312 and HB 463 out of the Education Committee. For more information www.Decodingdyslexia.org. And sincerely, thank you for helping, from all the parents advocating for their children with reading learning disabilities.

Boston Artist To Create Art Installation At West Of Chestnut Lobby

Gate Residential announces Boston artist Yu-Wen Wu has been selected to create a unique multi-channel video installation to be featured in the lobby space at West of Chestnut in Quincy.

Gate Residential, Duffy Design Group and Alter Projects selected Wu after three finalists presented their concept designs earlier this month for artwork that will be featured in the lobby of West of Chestnut – the 169-unit luxury apartment community located in downtown Quincy.

Wu is an interdisciplinary artist living and working in Boston whose work has most recently been featured at the Weissman Art Museum in Minneapolis, MN and Montserrat Galleries in Beverly, Mass. Her work is known for its ability to bridge cultures, art and science, and poetry. She graduated from the School of Museum of Fine Arts, Boston and is represented by Miller Yezerksi Gallery, Boston.

Wu proposed a video concept featuring natural phenomena, the environment and climate that will work as separate and coordinated projections featured on three screens. She will be awarded a $5,000 stipend that will include production-related expenses for the artwork that is expected to be installed by early July.

"We're excited to announce that Yu-Wen has been chosen to create a unique art installation for West of Chestnut – one that not only fits with the character and history of Quincy, but a work that adds a vibrant and engaging dimension to the lobby space," said Kyle Warwick, a principal at Gate Residential – developer of West of Chestnut. "Working with our partners at Alter Projects, we're fortunate to be able to offer this opportunity to local artists, and we're thrilled with the great response. We reviewed design concepts from three finalists – each incredibly talented artists – and Yuwen was our unanimous choice."

In addition to Wu, the other two finalists were Corey Corcoran, an artist and illustrator who lives in Boston; and Liz Nofziger, an artist who resides in East Boston. Corcoran presented Long Story Short, a series of short, unique animated loops that would project on the West of Chestnut wall and tell a story over time. Nofziger proposed a three-channel HD video installation that would feature a variety of images from the land and the sea and incorporate local history and contemporary life. Each of the three finalists' projects featured elements of Quincy's history and imagery to help strengthen the relationship between West of Chestnut residents and the city of Quincy.

Earlier this year, Duffy Design Group and Alter Projects issued a call for artists interested in developing art graphics to be projected onto three lobby walls at West of Chestnut. Alter Projects is a Boston-based platform offering custom arts programming with and for artists, organizations and enterprise.

Eleven artists from the Boston area responded. The three finalists, who each received a $500 prize, have national and international experience developing artwork installations, including work featured at the Institute of Contemporary Art, Boston and the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

West of Chestnut also recently announced a series of retail and restaurant partners that will be a part of the development adding to Quincy Center's Hancock District, including Orangetheory Fitness, KKatie's Burger Bar and Japanese fusion restaurant Fuji at West of Chestnut.

The new restaurants and fitness studio – all opening later this year – are key components of Gate Residential's overall strategy to bring a premier mix of retail, dining and lifestyle amenities to the West of Chestnut community they are creating in downtown Quincy.

West of Chestnut features 169 highly-amenitized residential units in two six-story urban midrise buildings – including approximately 12,400 square feet of commercial and retail space on the street level. Other features include a cross-training studio, a club suite with a lounge and media room, a dog-wash room, and an outdoor kitchen, fireplace and courtyard.

Gate Residential began construction on West of Chestnut last year following the 2014 announcement of a new joint venture with landowner Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Quincy Mutual, which has been in continuous operation in Quincy since it was founded in 1851, is a major investor in the downtown redevelopment.

West of Chestnut is one of many new developments set for Quincy Center, which will include the renovated Quincy Center MBTA station, the newly-remodeled City Hall, and the expected Adams Green urban park. A second phase of West of Chestnut, called East of Chestnut – featuring 220 units with additional amenity and retail space, is also planned.

MARK LINNANE holds his beloved dog, Miles, an Irish Jack Russell Terrier. Mark and his family adopted Miles from a shelter after he was surrendered by his first family following Hurricane Katrina in 2005. After more than 10 years of love and adventures, Miles was recently put down due to failing health. Photo Courtesy Mark Linnane cleaning their house. They thought he was just in a neighbor's yard but he's nowhere to be seen.

"I start walking around the neighborhood looking for him," Mark says. The phone rings. Another neighbor tells him he think he sees Miles.

"Where is he?" Mark asks.

"The neighbor replies, 'The starter has him in his arms.'

"Tell him I'll be right down."

Mark heads to the T station and there's Miles with the starter.

"That's twice he made it to the T platform. Once he got out of the backyard, another time he gets out of the house."

The antics are part of Miles legend. On Mark's Facebook page he recently posted that "Miles was fond of riding the T."

The post, sadly, announced his beloved dog's passing.

The 15-year-and-a-half year old Miles had to be put down because of canine Alzheimer's coupled with Sundowner's Syndrome. Miles began staying up all night barking and losing control of his internal organs.

Miles also lost some mobility. His health deteriorated.

The family decided to put him to sleep.

"Putting Miles down was a gut-wrenching decision," Mark says. "We had to make the decision to put him to sleep. He looked vibrant but his condition would have continued to spiral downward."

Mark cried for hours after Miles was gone. Anyone who's been confronted with this kind of decision understands the pain and anguish that goes with it.

"Everyone I've talked to who's been put in this position has the same reaction," Mark says. "Pets are part of our regular routines for years and years. When they are sleeping in bed and jumping on the couch and everyone at the park knows his name he's more than just a pet."

"He's family."

Miles enjoyed more than 10 years of unconditional love with the Linnanes after he was rescued.

For Mark, the experience of adopting a dog reaffirmed his belief that shelters – for most animal lovers – are the best places to find pets.

"Unless you're married to an actual breed, going for rescue dogs is the most important thing. It's a new lease on life for them. They are great acquaintances. Dogs run in a pack mentality. If you treat them well they'll be your best friend."

"And if they've been in a shelter, they've been living in a cage."

"Individual love in a household for a dog is the ultimate experience and I think everybody should adopt a dog from a shelter. They have all their shots. They're spayed or neutered. It's the best way to get a dog."

This interview with Mark takes place only a few days after Miles has passed away.

Mark's asked what's the one thing he'll always remember about his buddy.

"His personality. He had his own personality and a ton of energy. He had three tones of bark, too: whining, irritated and his alerting bark. When he was in my car he used to bark quite a bit. Someone once heard the barking and asked if I had four dogs in the car."

"I said, 'no. Only one.'"

Miles Linnane.

He was one of a kind.

MILES, an Irish Jack Russell Terrier, was a neighborhood legend in the Wollaston Hill section of Quincy capturing the hearts of dog lovers and neighbors with his adventures and antics.

On Tuesday, May 24, 2016, at approximately 10:00 p.m., a citizen notified the Quincy Police Department of a vehicle operating erratically on Granite Street near Hancock Street. Officers Jeffrey Bossart and Paul Foley informed Communications that they were in the area looking for the vehicle. A few minutes later Officer Foley radioed that he had stopped the vehicle on Burgin Parkway near the Quincy Adams MBTA Station.

Upon arrival, Officer Bossart was met by Officers Foley, Fitzgerald, and Dabilis. The female operator and sole occupant appeared to be under the influence of something. Officer Foley stated that as he came southbound on Burgin Parkway he pulled up behind the vehicle which was stopped in the second lane at the red light by Lowe's and Quincy Adams MBTA Station. The lane to the left of the vehicle is a dedicated and marked left turn only lane and the lane in which the operator was in is intended to go straight only.

Officer Foley said that when the light turned green he activated his emergency lights and siren but the vehicle did not move at first. After a moment the vehicle then made an improper U-Turn from the middle lane and then proceeded northbound on Burgin Parkway at a slow rate of speed as Officer Foley followed behind with his lights and siren still activated. Eventually the operator came to a stop but instead of pulling to the side of the road, she stopped directly in the middle of the travel lane. After being briefed by Officers Foley and Fitzgerald, Officer Bossart proceeded to the passenger side window to speak with the operator. When asked where she was coming from, she replied that she was trying to go to Boston to pick up her friend. After being told that another motorist reported that she was driving erratically and possibly under the influence, the operator said she was not.

A Job Well Done

The operator was requested to perform field sobriety testing to ensure that she was capable of safely operating her vehicle. She said she would and then exited her vehicle. She told the Officers that although she is prescribed several medications, she hadn't taken them in two days. The first test was the Horizontal Gaze Nystagmus test which she stated she understood. Officer Bossart used his right index finger and held it approximately 12 inches in front of the operator's face and slightly above eye level while instructing her not to move her head and follow the tip of the finger with her eyes only. The Officer noted a lack of smooth motion as the operator's eyes jumped ahead of the Officer's finger. The operator was reminded twice to focus on the finger, but she stopped following it mid-test and looked directly at the Officer, resulting in the conclusion that the operator had failed this test.

The next test was the One Leg Stand Test. The operator immediately exhibited a significant side to side sway. She then restarted the test correctly and said "one thousand and one" and then placed her foot back down on the ground. She attempted again, hopped briefly with her left foot to maintain balance but then placed her foot immediately back down again. She complained that it was cold out but stated she would attempt again. She lifted her foot again but did not make it past "one thousand one." She tried one more time, making it to "one thousand and three" before she put her foot down again. Officer Bossart concluded that she had failed this test.

The next test was the Nine Step Walk and Turn. Officer Bossart attempted to place the operator into the instructional position (right foot directly in front of left foot, touching heel-to-toe with your arms at your side), but she had great difficulty in getting into this position. She went from standing normally to trying to walk the line and counting out loud. The Officer corrected her and explained 3 times that she needed to place her right foot heel-to-toe in front of her left foot while also demonstrating it for her. She was unsteady on her feet, had great difficulty putting her feet heel-to-toe, and once finally in the correct position only stood like that momentarily before going back to standing normally. She then began the test but did not walk heel-to-toe on several of the steps, stepped off line on the third, fifth, and eighth steps, made an incorrect turn, and then stepped off line and two steps on her return. Throughout the test she was very unsteady on her feet and raised her arms approximately 6 inches to help keep her balance. The operator failed this test.

Give Social Security Your New Name

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Every year, June marks the beginning of two busy seasons: summer and "wedding season." With joyful expectation, many of us have already marked our calendars and started wrapping up our plans for the vacations, ceremonies, and honeymoons. While the betrothed work out the details, Social Security wants to remind them about one detail that's extremely important: the "record" Social Security keeps of your life's earnings.

For many people, a wedding often means a name change is in order. If you are legally changing your name, you need to apply for a replacement Social Security card reflecting your new name. If you're working, also tell your employer. That way, Social Security can keep track of your earnings history as you go about living your wonderful new life.

If you have reported income under your former or maiden name, and didn't inform us of a change, we might not have received an accurate W-2 and your earnings may have been recorded incorrectly. This is easier to fix now — when you first change your name — than years from now when you retire, when it may cause delays in receiving your benefits. This is important because we base your future benefits on your earnings record. So, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber, or call us at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778), to find out what specific documents you need to change your name and to apply for a replacement card.

Last year, the Supreme Court issued a decision in Obergefell v. Hodges, holding that same-sex couples have a constitutional right to marry regardless of where they live within the United States. As a result, Social Security recognizes more same-sex couples as married for purposes of determining entitlement to Social Security benefits or eligibility for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. We recently updated instructions for employees to process claims and appeals when a determination of marital status is necessary.

With these changing rules, we encourage anyone who believes they may be eligible for benefits to apply now. You can learn more about our policies for same-sex couples at www.ssa.gov/people/same-sex-couples.

After the honeymoon, you can focus on your career or starting a family, moving to a new home, and securing a well-deserved retirement. Now, you're all set. Let the celebrations begin.

Ann C. O'Connor, 97

A funeral Mass for Ann C. (Forge) O'Connor, 97, of Quincy and formerly South Boston was celebrated May 28 in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. O'Connor died peacefully May 25 at Hancock Park Skilled Nursing Facility in Quincy.

In her early years, she was a registered medical secretary and certified medical assistant. Mrs. O'Connor worked for many years for Roy J. Heffernan, M.D., and for other physicians associated with Boston hospitals before her retirement in 1984. She was a graduate of Emmanuel College and the Carnegie Institute where she received a certificate as a medical assistant.

Mrs. O'Connor lived at 1000 Southern Artery, Quincy, for more than 25 years. She was a daily communicant at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Quincy. She was a member of the BVM Sodality at St. Joseph's, Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Society, Carney Hospital Women's Auxiliary, the Massachusetts Association of Medical Assistants, the Castle Island Association and the Quincy Historical Society.

Mrs. O'Connor was the beloved wife of the late William F. O'Connor and daughter of the late Florence and Joseph Forge. She is preceded in death by her sisters and their husbands, Pauline and J. Walter Bonanno, and Edith and Philip Perry. She is survived by eight loving nieces and nephews: Suzanne Perry, Richard Bonanno and Patricia Cloonan, Donna Perry, Diane and Carl Cierpial, Theresa Bonanno, Robert Bonanno and Ann Marie Black, Robert Perry and Mary McNamara, Maria Perry and John Stock, five grandnieces and two grand nephews.

NQHS SADD Places Second Nationally

North Quincy High School's Students Against Destructive Decisions group was recently named the second place winner in the organization's National Chapter of the Year competition.

Members of the North Quincy High School SADD chapter will be honored for their achievement at the organization's national conference that will take place June 26-29 in Pittsburgh. The NQHS SADD chapter will receive a $250 check from national organization, which will be used to help defray the cost of local programming.

National SADD President and CEO Dawn Teixeira said the panel of judges that selected the NQHS chapter as the second place winner in the competition was impressed with its outreach to the community and region.

"North Quincy High School SADD exemplifies our idea of a successful SADD chapter," Teixeira said in her letter to the school. "Our panel of judges found particularly impressive your commitment to the SADD mission and principles; your varied and comprehensive schedule of activities; the creativity and enthusiasm of your members, advisors and supports; and your outreach to the community and region."

"We believe the novel approach of your county to engaging teens in positive activities has much to offer as an example to SADD chapters across the country."

Memorial Day Message: WWII Generation 'Connect' With Family

ter Quincy performs nearly 1,000 funeral honors details for Navy veterans across Massachusetts every year. That number increases a little each year," Vandiver said.

"The Navy performs something over 47,000 funeral honors details nationwide. And those are just for the Navy veterans. The other services are doing the same."

While serving at the Pentagon, Vandiver recalled parking near Arlington National Cemetery and hearing a half-dozen firing details at the interment of a veteran being laid to rest in the span of 15 minutes. Many of those, he believed, were veterans of World War II, and he said veterans of that war still alive today should pass on their stories of service while they still can.

"My previous duty station was at the Pentagon. One morning I parked my truck at the top of the hill near Henderson Hall, a Marine Corps facility on the southern side of Arlington National Cemetery, and walked down the hill, past Arlington, toward the Pentagon," Vandiver said.

"In the 15 minutes it took me to make the walk, I heard five or six funeral honors rifle salutes. It was 0730 on a typical weekday morning. While some of those funerals could also have been fallen from our most recent conflicts, there is no doubt Tom Brokaw's Greatest Generation is leaving us at a phenomenal rate.

"I didn't ask much about my papa's service. He was a Navy veteran, carpenter's mate, World War II. He did what he was supposed to, it was along time ago, and that was that. To the collective group of veterans here today, I'd ask you, before it's too late and we lose forever the personal connection to our Greatest Generation, and with it the heartfelt meaning of Memorial Day, have a conversation with your kids or grandchildren.

"Tell them about your service and the men and women you served with. Help them connect the dots so that Memorial Day will always be a special day of remembrance to them."

Vandiver concluded his remarks by reading the poem "Heroes Unaware," written in 2000 by Mark A. Wright, HMC (SS).

"I first saw him on a park bench. I've seen him every day. Sitting in a shady grove, where my children come to play. Sometimes he feeds the birds and squirrels or whittles little toys. Sometimes he just sits and smiles at the laughing girls and boys and I never paid him any mind 'till one day just this year I noticed that he wore a frown and on his cheek, a tear.

"Well I asked him why he seemed so down. He looked up, began to say, I lost half my friends 60 years ago today. He told me of the terror as he fought to reach dry land. By the time the beachhead was secure, half his friends lay in the sand.

"That was just in one long day. He fought on for four years more, and the 60 years from then to now have not dimmed his sights of war.

"He said they have reunions, just to keep in touch and share, and for each comrade who has gone on, they leave an empty chair.

"Well, his park bench has been empty now, about six months or so, and if I'd never took the time, then I never would've known that sitting on that simple bench, with bread crumbs and little toys, was a man who gave his all to guarantee my daily joys.

"So give thanks to all the men and women who're still here or have gone before, and made the highest sacrifice in both peacetime and in war. Because they bought our freedom, paid their own blood, sweat, and tears, then endured the heartache of those empty chairs for all these years.

"So please do not ignore them, or speed by without a care. 'Cause you never know when you might pass by, a hero, unaware."

The Memorial Day ceremony was marked by other speeches, tributes and song.

Among those offering remarks were Mayor Thomas Koch and City Council President Kirsten Hughes.

Two wreaths – a brightly colored yellow star-shaped arrangement representing Gold Star Mothers, and a red, white and blue wreath were placed at the speakers' podium. Among those taking part in the wreath laying was Gold Star Mother June Quinn. Quinn's brother, Norman Lancy, was among the Quincy veterans who were killed serving during World War II.

World War II veteran Robert Noble, senior vice commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, read Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and Fred McCray, commander, Quincy Legion Post, recited the poem "In Flanders Field" and George Nicholson, director, Quincy Veterans Services, read General Logan's 1868 Order proclaiming Decoration Day which eventually became known as Memorial Day.

Abigail Coughlin, a student at the Squantum Elementary School, sang a beautiful rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner;" Hughes sang a stirring rendition of "Amazing Grace" and Robert LaFleur, past commander, Morrisette American Legion Post, sounded Taps.

Others featured in the ceremony included Rev. John Carl Swanson, chaplain, Quincy Veterans Council, who gave the invocation; and Rev. Rebecca Froom, pastor, United First Parish Church, who offered the benediction.

15 Local Students Graduate B.C. High

Fifteen students from Quincy recently graduated from Boston College High School.

They are:

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. F.D. 6/2

Memorial Day Salute To Fallen Heroes

REV. REBECCA FROOM, pastor, United First Parish Church, offers the benediction at Monday's Memorial Day ceremony in the Munroe MacLean gymnasium at Quincy High School. Rain cancelled this the parade – as it did on Veterans' Day last November – and moved the ceremony indoors to the gym. At right is Officer of the Day Leo Reardon, Mayor Thomas Koch and Councillor at-large Noel DiBona.

MONDAY'S SOLEMN MEMORIAL Day ceremony began with an invocation given by Rev. John Carl Swanson, pastor, Union Congregational Church and chaplain of the Quincy Veterans Council. Standing in the background at right are Rev. Rebecca Froom, Abigail Coughlin, Squantum Elementary School student who sang the "Star Spangled Banner;" keynote speaker Eric Vandiver, commander, Naval Operational Support Center Quincy; city Grave Registration Officer George Bouchard, and Officer of the Day Leo Reardon, past commander, Quincy Veterans Council.

CROWD IN THE STANDS inside Munroe MacLean Gymnasium at Quincy High School rises to applaud after the introduction of keynote speaker Commander Eric Vandiver of the Naval Operational Support Center Quincy at Monday's Memorial Day ceremony. Vandiver, in his remarks, noted NOSC Quincy performs more than 1,000 honor details at funerals for Navy veterans statewide annually.

You Won't Believe What Was Pulled Out Of The Neponset Estuary!

Over 200 volunteers recently came out to help with the Neponset Cleanup on DCR's 10th Annual Park Serve Day, and they made a profound impact on the cleanliness of the Neponset Estuary.

Volunteers of all ages gathered along the Neponset RiverWalk and Commander Shea Boulevard in Quincy; the Granite Ave. marshes and Neponset Greenway in Dorchester; and the Baker Condos/Lower Mills area to remove debris from the estuary, marsh areas, walkways, and open spaces. Parents with young children, UMass students, and Girl Scouts worked side-by-side with corporate "green teams," state employees, and neighbors of the Neponset. The positive impact of the volunteers came swiftly, as dozens of trash bags and piles of debris began quickly accumulating throughout all of the cleanup sites.

The Department of Conservation and Recreation assisted with the cleanup, by providing bags, gloves and assorted tools, as well as trucks for trash removal. According to DCR Operations Coordinator, Chris Spillane, they counted 6 tons of debris and another 140 bags of trash - or enough trash to fill three 30-yard dumpsters.

A partial list of the trash removed from the estuary and marshes (inventoried by sites captains) included:

1 1/2 wooden docks; 40+

car tires, thousands of linear feet of boards (lumber/planks), back of a boat, hundreds of plastic bottles and cans, more bags of litter than could be counted; and dozens of hypodermic needles (estimated at 100+).

Volunteers also collected a television, safe, 55-gallon drum; two coolers, many Styrofoam pieces of docks, plastic tanks for holding up docks, several crushed lobster traps still attached to buoys; 50 shoes - no pairs, a car battery, iron re-bar, assorted metal pieces, a plastic hose, baseball hitting helmet, and a baseball bat.

The Neponset River Watershed Association relies on volunteers and sponsors to help with major events, and

New Downtown Traffic Pattern As Of June 24

Ceremony To Mark Partial Closing Of Hancock Street

By SCOTT JACKSON

The portion of Hancock Street that runs between the United First Parish Church and City Hall will close for good two weeks from Friday, prompting the beginning of a new traffic pattern in Quincy Center.

Mayor Thomas Koch, in a recent interview, said closure of that stretch of Hancock Street remains scheduled for Friday, June 24, as roadwork in Quincy Center continues. Exactly when on that day the road closes has yet to be determined.

The mayor said a public commemoration could take place to mark the closure, with a dignity chosen to make the final ceremonial drive down the street. He compared it to the October 2011 ceremony that opened the Walter J. Hannon Parkway, when the roadway's namesake was the first to drive on it.

"I probably want to do some kind of a ceremonial program here - who's going to be the last one to drive through? We did the opposite with Walter for the parkway,"

New Walk Of Names This Summer

Thousands Of Engraved Bricks - First Phase Of Adams Hancock Green - Will Be Placed At Site Of Former Walk In Front Of City Hall Glass Annex

By SCOTT JACKSON

The first phase of the new Adams Hancock Green linking the United First Parish Church and City Hall - including the new Walk of Names with thousands of engraved bricks and other features - is set for completion this summer with a dedication ceremony taking place in late August.

Construction of the entire new park, which includes among its elements statues of its namesakes, water features, and a promenade, will be completed by the fall of 2017 or the following spring, Mayor Thomas Koch said in a recent interview.

The Walk of Names will feature more than 4,000 new bricks and will be located in front of the all-glass City Hall annex building, adjacent to the McIntyre Government Center. That location is the same place where older engraved bricks were located after being purchased by residents for $50 each in the 1990s; those bricks were removed in 2013 during the

Flag Disposal Ceremony Thursday

The Quincy Veterans Council and the Quincy Lodge of Elks will conduct a flag disposal ceremony tonight (Thursday) beginning at 6 p.m. in the Elks parking lot, 254 Quarry St.

The ceremony will focus on the proper way to dispose of an American flag. It will also feature the folding of a new flag by veterans with the readings of the meaning of each fold.

The public is invited to attend and young kids are encouraged to witness the ceremony. Residents are also invited to bring a flag that needs disposal.

For more information George Bouchard at Quincy Veterans Services at 617-376-1194.

James Campbell New Fire Lieutenant

By SCOTT JACKSON

James Campbell worked part-time in Quincy's fire alarm maintenance division during his time as a student at North Quincy High School, and while working there decided he wanted to pursue a career as a firefighter.

Two decades later, Campbell, age 40, is now the Quincy Fire Department's newest lieutenant.

"Today is a very humbling day," he said after being promoted to lieutenant June 1. "It's an honor to be a lieutenant for the city of Quincy. I grew up in the city, lived here for the past 40 years, so to be given this opportunity as a fire lieutenant in the city I grew up in and love so much is truly an honor."

"It's something I'm really going to cherish and strive to do my best at every day I come into work and work for the citizens of Quincy."

Campbell was hired as a Quincy firefighter on May 1, 2011, transferring from the Marshfield Fire Department, where he served for 11 years. A 1993 graduate of North Quincy High School and member of the school's 1992 state championship football team, Campbell said his part-time job with the fire alarm division inspired him to become a firefighter.

"In my high school years was when I first saw the desire to become a firefighter," he said. "I worked part-time for the city of Quincy with the fire alarm maintenance division when I was in high school, and that's where I got to know the guys, got to work with the guys and see how they work. That was when I decided that was the career choice I was looking forward to."

About two-dozen firefighters and members of Campbell's family were in attendance for the promotion ceremony, the first of its kind for the Fire Department at the recently restored McIntyre Government Center.

Mayor Thomas Koch called Campbell a great firefighter and praised him for his leadership and skillset.

"Promotions are always a great day — obviously for the individuals, James in this case, but also for the department," the mayor said. "I love doing the promotions. I love doing the swearing-ins for the people that are coming on. It's a good time for the city, a good time for the fire service. We continue to move forward, we continue to progress and obviously with the new budget we're going to be adding some more fire personnel, which is a good thing as well."

"I know in this gentleman we have a great firefighter, a good leader, a tremendous skillset, and great qualifications. He's obviously a Quincy kid, came from another department, fit in beautifully and has added tremendously as an asset to the department. So we're very, very happy for James."

Fire Chief Joseph Barron said Campbell has done a great job during his tenure in the department.

"As the mayor said, we have a great candidate. He's done a great job," Barron said.

"I've had a couple occasions to speak to his company officer, who raves about him and all the work he does as a firefighter, and particularly using his paramedic skills; that's been a big help. He's also helped out training in fire alarm — some of the new guys going in there. He's well prepared."

The new lieutenant's initial assignment will be to Ladder 1 at the Fire Department headquarters on Quincy Avenue.

Campbell's promotion came one day after the retirement of Lt. John Carroll on May 31. Carroll retired at the age of 65 after a career of more than 40 years with the Quincy Fire Department.

EMERGENCY RING REMOVAL

It is worth noting that emergency room personnel are often faced with the task of cutting rings from the fingers of patients with swollen digits. In such cases, if the rings are not removed promptly, they can constrict blood flow that leads to tissue death. While gold and silver rings can be easily removed with ring cutters, titanium rings pose a much bigger problem. This light, very strong, extremely durable, and hypoallergenic metal has become increasingly popular in recent years. It is so strong, in fact, that titanium rings require diamond-tipped saws and dental drills to remove them. Because time is of the essence in emergency situations, physicians now rely on bolt cutters to do the job.

Titanium is a natural element which is light as aluminum, as strong as steel, and is the most hypoallergenic element known to man making it the ideal metal for jewelry. Titanium's hypoallergenic properties combined with its beautiful coloration make it ideal for making jewelry that everyone can wear. For the latest trends in jewelry, stop by Rogers Jewelry at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center or call 617-773-3636. Quincy Police Self Defense Course

Quincy Police will conduct an Adult Self Defense Course Tuesday, June 14 and Wednesday, June 15 from 6 to 8:30 p.m. at Upper Merrymount Park, near the water fountain, on Hancock Street across from Central Middle School.

The course is free and open to females aged 18 and older; 16 if with a parent/guardian.

Attendance is required both nights because this is a progressive learning program. There is no exam and no one is required to do anything that they do not feel comfortable with.

The first night involves learning strikes, blocks and blows and the second night provides an opportunity to test your skills against an "attacker."

Bring water, bug spray and wear comfortable clothing. In the event that it rains the first night, the program would be pushed back one night.

Check twitter @quincymapolice or Facebook "QuincyPoliceDepartment" for scheduling updates.

To sign up or to get more information, contact Lt. Dan Minton at 617-745-5719 or dminton@quincyma.gov.

Finally ... you get to do what you want to do

The question now - what's the best way to pay for it? Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk with, to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? Like to talk? Call Angela Blanchard, VP/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

Fireworks Spark Career For Quincy Native

If you like fireworks - especially the dazzling display set off at the annual Quincy Flag Day celebration - you're going to love this year's show.

And if Saturday night's colorful clusters of streaking light and thunderous booms leave you "oohing" and "awwing" for more you can thank the behind-the-scenes crew that includes a Quincy native who has made a career out of fireworks displays as a lead technician for the largest professional fireworks display company in New England.

Joe Vallier, a New Hampshire resident who grew up in Quincy, is returning home to help set up and set off what officials say will be an expanded show with new music to celebrate the 65th Flag Day parade in Quincy.

Joe admits fireworks brings out the "little boy" in him and is honored to have a hand in this year's display.

We recently asked Joe about his career, Saturday's Flag Day parade fireworks display and what set him off to get enter this line of work.

Quincy Sun: You are a Quincy native. How old are you, how long did you live in Quincy and what schools did you attend here?

Joe Vallier: I'm 55 this year. I lived in Quincy from birth until I moved out of the city around 1988. I attended Saint Mary's and Willard schools for grammar school, Sterling for Junior High, and graduated from Quincy Voc-Tech (Cabinet Making) in 1979. I was fortunate to have participated in Koch Club Baseball at O'Rourke Field in Quincy as a boy; and in my teens, I worked five years for Quincy Recreation at Happy Acres Day camp as a counselor. I also learned to sail at the Black's Creek sailing program run by the Quincy Recreation Department. I loved growing up in Quincy!

Where do you live now?

I live in Nashua, N.H. with my wife Dr. Susan Vonderheide.

What is your job title and the company you work for?

I'm a Lead Technician for Atlas Pyrovision Entertainment Group. I also own Domestikitchens, [sic] a Cabinet Making and Cabinet Refacing firm.

Can you describe what work you do?

I produce and promote professional fireworks displays for public and private events. Weddings, Reunions, and family focused gatherings have used Atlas for that extra "spark" that makes the event so much more entertaining. Regular HazMat and Safety training is all part of the work that goes into being a Lead Technician. Training and directing the Pyrotechnic Assistants is also a part of this work.

How are you involved in the City of Quincy Fireworks display?

I'm usually working on the City of Woburn's Kiwanis Flag Day event. I've produced that public display for over 15 years now. Their Flag Day celebration usually falls on the same date as Quincy's does. This year that event falls on June 18th, so it's a special treat for me to have the open date to come home to Quincy and participate in its celebration of Flag Day.

This year my crew and I will assist Atlas Vice President Matthew Shea who has been the Lead Technician for Quincy's Flag Day celebration in the past.

How many years/celebrations have you assisted?

I started my professional fireworks career right here in Quincy on New Year's Eve in 1990. I was an assistant back then. The "First Night" Quincy celebration had fireworks shot from the practice football field between Quincy Vo-Tech (at that time) and Mount Wollaston Cemetery. I was hooked then and there. The second professional show I did was also in Quincy at JOE VALLIER, a Quincy native, has made a career of setting off fireworks. Vallier, who now lives in New Hampshire, is employed as Lead Technician for Atlas Pyrovision Entertainment Group. He has worked on many well known firework displays including celebrations at Fenway Park. The photo above shows Vallier on the roof of Fenway Park during Major League Baseball's Opening Day in 2010. the 1991 Flag Day Celebration. The following year I assisted on more than two dozen Licensed Firework shows. I learned the craft and started doing shows as the Lead Technician in 1998. I've lost count as to how many shows I've actually done over the years.

Give us an overview of what kind of fireworks will be set off in Quincy this Saturday night? How many and the different kinds?

There will be a sample of just about every type of shell that Atlas has in stock. I don't have the exact number in front of me, but this year will be the largest show ever to be shot at Quincy's Flag Day event. Mayor Tom Koch himself selected the sound track of patriotic music that the fireworks will display in sequence to. It will run for 21 and a half minutes long with lots of special color throughout the show and quite a few of the powerful white salutes that produce that tremendous thunder at the end of the finale.

What does set up entail?

Setup actually begins months in advance of the show date. After the Mayor submitted the approved sound track, sequencing is done by Matt Shea on a computer in his Atlas office. In the weeks before Quincy's event, several workers at Atlas tag each individual fireworks shell with a placement tag. That tag tells the assistants and I exactly where in the show that shell is wired into. The day of the show will see us on site at 9 a.m. with the Quincy Fire Department there for safety. We will work throughout the day setting up and wiring the shells into their predetermined positions.

How are they set off? Is it all computerized now?

For safety, electronic firing is the law of the land in Massachusetts. Smaller shows are manually fired using individual switches to ignite the shells. Quincy's Flag Day Fireworks on the other hand is not a small show. It will be set off with the electronic sequencing software that was worked on back at the office. The ability of that software to let Matt Shea tie in a specific firework shell to individual notes in the sound track is fantastic.

How many firework displays do you do in a year and name some of the larger - or more well known - celebrations that you have assisted?

Aside from the several hundred shows that Atlas Pyrovision does every year, my crew and I shoot between 15 to 25 of those shows. The week of the 4th of July is always the busiest. That week sees my crew and I shooting four or five shows down on the Cape.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD view of Wollastoh Beach was taken just after the beach and the boulevard were opened to the public in 1908. A Mrs. Smith, who mailed this postcard to a friend in Maine, opened her message on the back with "Doesn't this look pleasant?" She apparently didn't mind the washed up mounds of dead eel grass and seaweed along the shoreline. The eel grass grew in the marshes that lined Quincy Bay along here when the boulevard was built through them. By the 1930s most of the eel grass along the entire Atlantic coast had mysteriously died out. On the corner of East

Elm Avenue, the second house from the right, became Howard Johnson's first roadside ice cream stand in 1927. The store was relocated into a new building on the corner of Sachem Street 10 years later. On the far left the temporary end of the roadway rose up onto Rye Island, a small hummock that was leveled in 1912 when the boulevard was extended to and over Black's Creek. The cottages visible there were located on The Strand. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net. From the Collection of City Historian Tom Galvin

Pops Concert Friday, Koch Flag Day Parade Saturday

A two-day "Pre-Summerfest," sponsored by the Koch Club, began Friday, June 13 with an outdoor Pops concert and concluded Saturday, June 14 with the 27th annual Koch Club Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

The weekend events were planned to commemorate the 350th anniversary of the founding of Mount Wollaston and the 200th anniversary of the nation's birth.

Major General George S. Patton, commander of the Army Readiness Region One at Fort Devens, was the grand marshal in the Flag Day Parade.

Patton was the youngest of three children of World War II General George S. Patton, "old blood and guts," as he was known to the men he commanded.

The parade will conclude at Veterans Memorial Stadium with a flag raising ceremony and brief program to end the festivities.

Play For All Playground Fundraiser June 23

Imagine if your child depended on a mobility device for their day to day activities, but was not able to enjoy things like going to the park and playing with friends.

The Play for All Playground Committee has accepted the challenge of raising funds to build Quincy's first all-inclusive playground. The space is an inviting atmosphere where children can discover elements that will accommodate their bodies, mobility devices and ways of playing. A place where thoughtful design ensures that inclusion happens effortlessly and every child is enriched in the process.

We are working on siting this playground at Fore River Field and have a $30,000 shortfall in funding that we are trying to achieve through these efforts.

Your donation will help bring us closer to our goal and help bring this much needed all-inclusive play environment to our community. As part of our efforts, we are holding a fundraising event on June 23, at the Elks Lodge, 254 Quarry St. from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. People from the local business community as well as local families will be joining us at this event.

Tickets are available at the door with a suggested donation of $20. We also have a GoFundMe page which you can find at: <https://www.gofundme.com/PlayforAll>

Thank you for taking time to read this letter. If you would like any more information, contact Cassandra Beck at 617-359-4272 or c7m7b7@aol.com.

Memorial Day Is NOT A Holiday

Memorial Day is NOT a Holiday.

It's a Remembrance Day, a Gratitude Day, a Thank You for your Sacrifice and Service Day for all of the military service, living and dead, who gave their time and/or lives so we can live freely in this country.

The Day is NOT for barbecues; going to the Cape and beaches; shopping; going to the movies. We have plenty of other days to do those things. Can't we give up one weekend to remember and honor them?

Amy Thompson On Dean's List

Amy Thompson of Quincy has been named to the Dean's List for the spring semester at Furman University in Greenville, S.C.

She is the daughter of Beth Thompson and Robert Thompson.

Travel to military areas of cemeteries and read and reflect on the inscriptions on the gravestones of the military heroes. Do you know, at the Mount Wollaston Cemetery, there's a grave for an unknown soldier?

And that a Mr. Bryant was the first Quincy native killed in World War 2, and he was not even 17 years old when he was killed?

Volunteer at a Veterans hospital. If you know neighbor or someone else who is a veteran, take him or her out for a meal. Listen or watch radio and tv programs dedicated that day in honoring and telling the stories of these military heroes. Sit down with your children and tell them about these brave women and men.

Freedom is not free.

Thank you.

Point Webster School Students Compete In Geography Bee

Mark Broderick Winner

Every spring students at Point Webster Middle School compete in the National Geographic Geography Bee.

The Bee is a school-wide event that took place in all of the Social Studies classes grades 6-8. The finals came down to the 10 contestants, three each from grades 6 and 7 and four from the 8th grade.

The temperature might have been cold outside, but the heat was definitely on in the PWMS Auditorium. Round after round the students were answering geography questions, some about the United States, others about foreign countries.

After a hotly contested finals matchup between 8th grader Mark Broderick and 6th grader Thomas Christian, Mark was crowned the school champion. All the contestants did a great job and we are already preparing for next years bee.

So Close To Home: WWII, U-Boats And Quincy

Michael J. Tougas, best-selling author and co-author of 24 books, and Ray "Sonny" Downs will present a new, dramatic presentation based on Tougas's new co-authored book So Close to Home: An American Family's World War II Story of Survival and the U-boat that Attacked Them Tuesday, June 21 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, community meeting room, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Tougas and Downs, a Quincy resident, will use slides of the attack, the survivors, and the rescue to make this "an edge-of-your seat" visual program.

On May 19, 1942, a German U-boat in the Gulf of Mexico stalked its prey 40 miles off New Orleans. Captained by 29-year-old Erich Wurdemann, the submarine commander had his sights set on the freighter Heredia with 62 souls on board.

Most of the crew were merchant seamen, but there were also a handful of civilians including the Downs family. The family was comprised of the parents, Ray Sr. and Ina, along with their two children, eight-year-old Ray Jr., nick-named "Sonny", and an 11-year-old.

Fast asleep in their berth the Downs family had no warning that two torpedoes were heading their way. When the ship exploded, all four members of the family were separated in the chaotic 2 a.m. event.

More than half the crew and passengers aboard the Heredia perished, but incredibly, after 15 hours in the ocean – facing sharks, hypothermia, drowning, and dehydration – all of the Downs family survived and were reunited.

Ray Downs Jr. aka "Sonny," is now 82 years old but remembers every detail of the voyage, the attack, and his family's miraculous survival. The captain and senior crew members of the Heredia were all Massachusetts natives.

Tougas also had access to the U-boat commander Erich Wurdemann's War Diary, and the presentation will include a discussion of the challenges faced aboard the sub, and some of the daring raids the commander made off the coast of America.

A book signing will follow the program, and the presentation is suitable for all ages.

The evening is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library

Squantum School Introduces 'Plantmobile' At Outdoor Classroom

Squantum Elementary School recently introduced Massachusetts Horticultural Society's "Plantmobile," a traveling plant science program, to students at their new outdoor classroom.

The outdoor classroom was built as a multi-use learning space and officially opened in May 2015. It's the first of its kind in Quincy and serves as a model for other schools.

Principal Stephen Sylvia said the Plantmobile was a great way to incorporate Mass Hort's hands-on education program designed to provide a rewarding horticultural experience into this new classroom.

"There are so many valuable lessons to learn with the outdoor classroom and our students are eager to learn more about planting and maintaining their new flowers and plants. The Plantmobile offers so many great programs that clearly support our science curriculum at the school," Sylvia said.

Katie Folts, education coordinator for Mass Hort, said she enjoys working with the children and seeing the look of wonder when they dissect a seed for the first time or discover the different life cycles of fruits, plants and flowers.

"When we're able to bring programming directly to the classrooms, it helps to connect young people with plants and the natural environment," Folts said. "Gardening also helps to rekindle interest in the foods we eat and show young people how to cultivate, care for, and prepare nutritious foods from the garden."

Mass Hort's Plantmobile educational programs are available for students in Pre-K to Grade 8 and are offered on a variety of age-appropriate topics and activities.

For more information on the Plantmobile and to schedule a school visit, contact Katie Folts at 617-933-4973 or kfolts@masshort.org.

Rachel Squires Bloom, teacher and assistant principal at Squantum School, has written a history called A Great Place to Start: History of the Squantum School.

Bloom is the parent of a former Squantum student, and is herself an alumnus.

The book, which includes photos, describes life at the school from the 19th century through the present. Organized by decade, the history is anchored within the development of Squantum and in the educational philosophies of Quincy.

ports and other documents. First-hand accounts of those who attended and taught at the school were gathered through surveys and interviews. Former principals Fatima Allie and Donald Houghton, and current principal Stephen Sylvia, shared insights as well.

With the school's centennial coming in 2019, and news that a new school will eventually replace the current one, the book is timely.

"People kept saying that someone should write a history of the school, and I kept agreeing with them," Bloom said. "At some point, I realized that that person should be me."

Bloom, who has also published poetry and educational articles, was born and raised in Squantum. She holds Master's degrees in English Literature and

The book will be available at the Kennedy Center on Saturday, June 11 from 10 to 11:30 a.m., before the Squantum Community Association's tour of historic Squantum.

WHAT'S COOKING

with

Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Oatmeal-Chocolate Chip Cookies

By MARIE

At our family Mother's day brunch hosted at my daughter Suzie and husband Anthony's house there were many various entrees and desserts.

My daughter, Ann Marie, made wonderful, tasty oatmeal chocolate chip cookies, not at all like the norm. She added walnuts and chocolate chips to them and what a treat.

RECIPE:

- 2 sticks of unsalted butter softened
- 1 cup of granulated sugar
- 1 cup of dark brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- 2 tablespoons of milk
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups of flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon baking power
- 1/2 teaspoon of salt
- 2 and 1/2 cups oatmeal
- 12 ounces semi-sweet chocolate chips

1 and 1/2 cups chopped walnuts or pecans

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Slightly grease 2 baking sheets or cover them with parchment paper. In a large bowl cream butter with sugar and brown sugar until well blended. Add vanilla, milk and eggs.

In a small bowl combine flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt then add these to the creamed mixture. Stir in oats, chocolate chips and nuts. Scoop by tablespoons onto baking sheets about 2 inches apart and bake 10 to 12 minutes until edges are brown.

Cool slightly before putting on wire rack.

My daughter made larger cookies than usual as our family likes a larger cookie - so you can use more than a tablespoon when dropping the dough onto the cookie sheet if you like.

A Lighter Coleslaw

By SUZIE

You know, coleslaw really is a health food. Its main ingredient is cabbage, which is rich with an array of cancer fighting plant chemicals (called indoles), fiber, along with lots of other vitamins and minerals.

This dressing is light and flavorful. Adding the fresh cilantro and flaxseed oil knocks the nutritional value out of the park!

1/2 head green cabbage, halved, and sliced very thinly. (You can purchase it already chopped if you like!)

- 2 carrots, grated
- 1/2 cup chopped scallions
- 1/3 cup chopped fresh cilantro
- 2 tablespoons flax oil
- 1 1/2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar (the raw kind)
- 1 1/2 tsp raw honey
- 1/4 tsp cumin
- 1/4 tsp sea salt and pepper

Simply whisk the dressing ingredients in small bowl and toss with everything else. Chilling this dish makes it taste even better. Adjust seasonings if needed. (may need more salt and pepper)

Salmon And Potato Casserole

By MARIE

When we were kids our mother would frequently make salmon loaf with creamed peas. We enjoyed this dish back then as does my family today.

The difference in today's salmon loaf recipe is that I used mashed potatoes instead of bread crumbs and I also used fresh salmon in place of the canned salmon

RECIPE:

- 1 pound of fresh salmon (or 2 cups of canned salmon)
- 2 cups of mashed potatoes
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 small onion chopped

- 1 tablespoon fresh parsley
- 6 ounces of shredded cheddar cheese

If using fresh salmon, blanch it for a couple of minutes and let cool.

In a bowl place the cut up salmon, the onion and add the mashed potatoes mixing well. Add parsley, salt and pepper.

Place in a slightly greased casserole dish (approximately 8 x 8 size) and sprinkle cheddar cheese on top.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until browned on top and cheese is melted.

Serve with any favorite side.

QCAP Honors Award Winners; Inducts New Officers, Directors

The Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) recently held its Annual Meeting and Awards Ceremony at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks.

The Board of Directors recognized several community members with Extra Mile Awards for their dedicated support of QCAP, its clients, and the community. This year's award recipients included state Sen. John F. Keenan; Leslie Bridson; and the Law Office of Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane.

"QCAP is honored to recognize significant contributions of our Extra Mile award recipients and employees this year," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's Chief Executive Officer.

Keenan was recognized for his leadership in the Senate, particularly as a champion of improving access to quality and affordable early education and care, such as Head Start, and policies that provide opportunities to low-income families. In his remarks, he thanked QCAP for its invaluable partnership in helping to serve local families and reduce poverty.

In her role as Homeless Coordinator for the Quincy Public Schools, Bridson has helped thousands of homeless students and their families, connecting them with basic needs assistance, counseling, housing, and professional development. She spoke of the struggles that her families face every day and shared her appreciation to QCAP for helping to identify safe and affordable housing for the families and for helping to place the parents into jobs.

For more than three decades, the Law Office of Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane has supported the mission of QCAP and its clients. Founding partner, Arthur Murphy, Esq. accepted the award on behalf of the Firm. Attorney Murphy shared his appreciation for the work that QCAP does and how it makes a difference in the community.

Janet Widdop, Head Start Education Coordinator, was presented with the Lois Craig Employee Award, for her outstanding leadership and exemplary service. Twenty-year service awards were presented to Deborah Gray, Lisa Griffin, and Joanne Yung.

The Board inducted new directors and officers for the 2016-2017 year. QCAP honored Josephine Shea who completed her term as president of the Board, and who will continue to serve as the Board's vice president. Attorney Timothy McAloon was inducted as the Board's new president, Rev. Emeritus Sheldon Bennett as treasurer, Atty. Geoffrey P. Wermuth, assistant treasurer, and Kevin Matta, clerk.

QCAP honored Janet Crowley who retired after 28 years of service on QCAP's Board. Walter Hubley will represent Ward 3 City Councilor Ian Cain on the Board of Directors.

The following is the full list of the 2016-2017 Board of Directors:

Neighborhood Representatives: Maureen Ayers - Atlantic; Paul M. Connolly - Southwest Quincy; Tahlia Gunter - Head Start Policy Council; Gina Johnson - Weymouth; Kevin Matta - Germantown; Barbara

Morris - Quincy Point. Private Representatives: Rev. Emeritus Sheldon W. Bennett - United First Parish Church; Judith E. Farmer - Bank of Canton; Rosemarie McGillicuddy - South Shore Savings Bank; Douglas W. Moseley - Mayor Robert L. Hedlund, Weymouth; James B. Murdoch - The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company; Frank Poon - Quincy Asian Resources, Inc.; Geoffrey P. Wermuth - Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane. Public Representatives: Josephine Shea - Mayor Thomas P. Koch, City of Quincy; Michael J. Berry - Councilor Margaret E. Laforest; Debbie Abrahams-Alves - Councilor Brad Croall; Walter Hubley - Councilor Ian C. Cain; Linda Perry - Councilor Brian Palmucci; Timothy McAloon - Councilor Kirsten L. Hughes; Stephanie Glennon - Councilor William P. Harris.

In addition, QCAP unveiled an updated logo and released its latest Annual Report.

Established in 1965, QCAP has been the leading social service provider in the Greater Quincy region dedicated to reducing poverty. QCAP serves more than 22,000 unduplicated individuals annually from more than 80 communities. Programs and services include food and nutrition, fuel assistance and weatherization, housing, homeownership, and tenant services, affordable housing, Head Start, quality and affordable early education and care assistance, information, and referral, adult education and workforce development, job coaching and placement, free tax preparation, and financial education, money management, and credit repair.

How Does A Heat Wave Affect The Human Body?

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Some might like it hot, but extreme heat can overwhelm the human body. With more possible heat waves on the horizon, the risk of heat-related health problems will also be on the upsurge.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) extreme heat is responsible for an average of 688 deaths each year in the U.S.

Human bodies dissipate heat by varying the rate and depth of blood circulation, by losing water through the skin and sweat glands, and as a last resort by panting, when blood is heated above 98.6 degrees. The heart begins to pump more blood, blood vessels dilate to accommodate the amplified flow, and the bundles of minute capillaries threading through the upper layers of skin are put into action.

The body's blood is circulated closer to the skin's surface, and excess heat drains off into the cooler atmosphere, diffusing through the skin as perspiration. The skin handles about 90 percent of the body's heat dissipating function. Sweating, by itself, does little to cool the body, unless the water is removed by evaporation.

High relative humidity slows evaporation, so humidity affects our body's cooling mechanisms.

Heat exhaustion is a comparatively common reaction to severe heat and can include symptoms such as dizziness, headache and fainting. It can usually be remedied with rest, a cool environment and hydration, including replacement of electrolytes, which are essential for muscle and other body functions. Heat stroke is more severe and requires medical attention. It is often accompanied by dry skin, body temperature exceeding 103 degrees Fahrenheit, confusion and occasionally unconsciousness.

The impact of sustained extreme heat on the human body can be devastating. The systems in the human body that enable it to adapt to heat become overwhelmed. When a person is exposed to heat for an extended period of time, the initial body function that is affected, is the ability to sweat. Once a person stops perspiring, in a very short interval, a person can move from heat exhaustion to heat stroke.

It commences with perspiring profusely, and when that ceases, the body becomes extremely hot. Eventually that begins to affect the brain, and that's when people begin to get confused and can lose consciousness.

The analogy commonly used is if you're driving a car and you notice that the temperature light comes on when the cooling system of the car is becoming overwhelmed. If you turn off the car and let it cool, ultimately you can begin driving again. But if you continue to drive the car, the problem goes beyond the cooling system to affect the engine, and eventually the car will stop. As the body temperature increases very rapidly, the central nervous system and circulatory system are impacted, similar to that car engine.

Before someone gets total heat stroke, the person may exhibit reactions to the excessive heat. Heat rash and muscle cramps can be early signs of people being overwhelmed by heat. If those aren't treated promptly, it can lead to more severe symptoms.

Cramping of muscles can occur as a result of a number of different issues, including electrolytes not getting to the muscles. It is important that people be aware that their skin turning red and dry are indicators that heat is impacting them.

Certain people may be more vulnerable to extended high temperatures. We know the high risk factors for dying from heat are often urban dwellers who are elderly, isolated and don't have access to air conditioning.

In a study from the 1995 Chicago heat wave, it was found that certain medications put people at higher risk including diuretics for high blood pressure and beta blockers. There are also findings that have shown that certain mental health medications may impact a person's ability to deal with the heat. The risk of heat-related illness varies from person to person.

A person's general health influences how well the person adapts to heat. Those with extra weight often have trouble in hot situations as the body has difficulty maintaining a good heat balance. Age (particularly for people about 45 years and older), poor general health, and a low level of fitness will make people more susceptible to feeling the extremes of heat.

Medical conditions can also increase how susceptible the body is. People with heart disease, high blood pressure, respiratory disease and uncontrolled diabetes may need to take special precautions. In addition, people with skin diseases and rashes may be more susceptible to heat.

Other factors include circulatory system capacity, sweat production and the ability to regulate electrolyte balance. Subsequently, those who are exercising or working in the heat, but who don't meet those criteria, can also be putting themselves in jeopardy.

Heat-related illnesses are largely preventable by taking some basic precautions. The single best way to reduce your heat stress risks while working is to steadily replenish the water you lose as sweat. Drinking small amounts frequently, such as 6 to 8 ounces every 15 minutes, is more effective than large amounts less often.

Most people do not feel thirsty until their fluid loss reaches 2 percent of body weight and is already affecting them, so keep in mind relying on thirst as a signal to drink is a dangerous practice. The other leading factor that averts death from heat is access to air conditioning. Fans are not a successful tool in preventing overheating in extremely hot temperatures, and can actually worsen the situation.

Spending a day of fun in the sun with friends or family is a perfect getaway for a long weekend, but as Mother Nature turns up the heat, be aware of these predictable and preventable perils.

Ruth Jones is the Public Health Nurse Educator for the Quincy Health Department.

Crime Novelist At Library

Novelist Robert Knox will be the featured speaker at the Thomas Crane Public Library's "Crime by the Book" series Tuesday, June 14, at the main branch, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Knox will talk about his new book, Suosso's Lane. The tale begins in the early decades of the last century in Braintree, Dedham, Plymouth, and Boston and stars the infamous Bartolomeo Vanzetti. This story is tied together with a modern tale of a history teacher living in Vanzetti's old neighborhood who hears rumors that might change the way history is understood, by proving Vanzetti's innocence.

Condemned to death largely for anarchist beliefs in a trial marked by fear-mongering and prejudice toward Italian immigrants, Sacco and Vanzetti were found guilty and executed in 1927 despite worldwide protests by millions of workers and intellectuals.

In Knox's story, 70 years later a young history teacher moves to Suosso's Lane in Vanzetti's old Plymouth neighborhood and hears rumors of lost evidence that might prove his innocence. Intrigued by Vanzetti's story and the lessons it holds for our own day, young Mill Becker risks his academic career in the search for a lost letter, joining forces with a local reporter on a search of his own to clear up a policeman's suspicious death in the 1940s. A then-and-now novel, "Suosso's Lane" reconstructs the cause that captivated the world's attention and addresses the still timely issues of immigration, ethnic group prejudice, the widening gap between rich and poor, and failures in our criminal justice system.

Granite Geology, Stone Splitting At Lyons Turning Mill June 18

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will hold a geology of Quincy granite presentation and a granite splitting demonstration Saturday, June 18 at 2 p.m. at the historic Lyons Turning Mill, Quarry Hills Drive, West Quincy.

The geology presentation will be given by museum member Les Tyralla, a registered geologist who has a broad background in the science of earth geology. Tyralla will discuss what is Quincy granite, what made Quincy granite, where did Quincy granite come from, how Quincy granite got here and what uncovered Quincy granite along with many other interesting facts about the geology of Quincy granite.

After the attendees learn about the geology of Quincy granite there will be a demonstration on the splitting of granite. The demonstration will include a short presentation on the splitting of stone and a hands-on splitting of granite by the attendees.

Safety equipment will be supplied by the museum.

For weather related information or any other additional information call the museum at 617-472-1322.

Houghs Neck Garden Club Celebrating 10th Anniversary June 18

On Saturday, June 18, the Houghs Neck Garden Club will celebrate its 10th anniversary.

Friends and neighbors are invited to celebrate with club members at a free event at Nut Island from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The garden club was started by a group of neighbors who had for years been part of the Community Action Committee working with the MWRA to transform Nut Island from a blight on the community to a picturesque park that is now home to wildflowers, grasses and walking trails with spectacular 360 degree views of Boson Harbor.

In addition to refreshments, raffle and boutique the club will offer walking tours of the island with a master gardener, short talks on significant Nut Island events including the testing of ordinance in the 1860s and 1870s that was instrumental in the defense of the United States and the breaking up of large steamships from 1885-1903 that resulted in some Houghs Neck cottages being built from the parts; and internal tours of the facility (note: elevators are not working so be prepared for lots of stairs).

At HNGC meetings, members meet to exchange ideas and enhance their gardening knowledge and skills through attending workshops and talks given by visiting experts. At the same time, new friendships are born and old ones strengthened or rekindled.

The HNGC also strives to serve the community in other ways and was proud to initiate a Scholarship to be awarded to high school

On Saturday, May 14, Quincy Public Schools, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), along with families, friends, teachers and coworkers of those participating schools, participated in the seventh annual "The JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes."

Under brilliant sunny skies, a record number of walkers and sponsors turned out this year to walk for a cure, capping off more than 6 weeks of collecting pledges and donations by the students which included some innovative fundraising such as lemonade stands, videos and student presentations to their schools, as well as Type 1 Diabetic (T1D) children and their families sharing their personal experiences at each participating school.

While pledges and donations continue to be collected and counted, thus far this event has raised more than $32,000, bringing the 7 year total fundraising to over $215,000, 10 percent of which is donated back to participating schools based on fundraising totals. It also gave the children in our community an opportunity to learn about healthy living and healthy eating and living lifestyles and to share in the experiences of classmates and friends' experiences in living with Type 1 Diabetes.

This year the walk was fortunate enough to partner with and wanted to acknowledge our wonderful sponsors and supporters, including our very generous and first ever corporate sponsors, Chi Bistro/Kama Lounge and Manet Construction.

Quincy City Council President/Ward 5 Councilor Kirsten Hughes lent her enthusiasm to rally support, greet, and help kick off the start time. Others who gave much of their resources, donations and time include Coffee Break Cafe, Roche Brothers Supermarket, Patriot Cinemas, Montillios, Switch Witch, Michelle Garcia at Louis Anthony Salon, Seacoast Chic Design by Mimi Connolly, Itz a Party, Stop and Shop, and all of culinary staff at Quincy High School.

Our loyal partners who make this event such a family-fun filled day include DJ Neil McCole, Sparkles the Clown, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's dedicated staff, North Quincy ROTC, Quincy Police Department, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Waste Management, Brewster Ambulance, and QPS/Beechwood Knoll Elementary school principal Dianne O'Keefe.

Once again, a thank you to all who made this Walk such a huge success and look forward to next year which we hope will be the biggest and best!

Jennifer Golden

dues and fundraisers and in turn invested thousands of dollars in community beautification and scholarships to Houghs Neck students.

A main emphasis of the HNGC continues to be community beautification which can be seen throughout Houghs Neck. This began in 2006 when we planted flowers in front of the Houghs Neck Community Center. In 2007 the club planted flowers and shrubs at the Veteran's Memorial at Brill Field. In 2009 with a $10,000 grant from the Community Preservation Fund, the club designed Leo Kelly Park. Members continue to maintain this site and last fall planted 100 daffodil bulbs there. Also in 2009 members designed and planted the butterfly garden at the playground at Brill Field.

Food Truck Visits Manet

More than 100 people were able to shop at the Fresh Truck pop-up market at two Manet Community Health Center locations in Quincy and the Upham's Corner Health Center in Dorchester, thanks to support from BMC HealthNet Plan.

Event attendees entered a school bus-turned-market to shop from an array of fruits, vegetables, nuts, whole grains and healthy snacks for their families. BMC HealthNet Plan distributed cloth grocery bags which held giveaways and more information about the organization's health coverage.

BMC HealthNet Plan and Fresh Truck continue to visit local community centers in urban neighborhoods and rural towns that are without easy access to fresh, healthy and affordable foods. Families that reside in these areas eat, on average, fewer fruits and vegetables and have higher rates of diet-related health issues, such as diabetes and obesity.

BMC HealthNet Plan is a nonprofit health plan that serves members state-wide and is committed to the mission of supporting community health by increasing access to healthy foods and promoting nutrition education. Its sponsorship of Fresh Truck has benefitted hundreds of families across Boston by providing them with access to fresh, healthy and affordable food.

NQHS Senior Stay Out 2016 Thanks You

Each year parents, local businesses and associations give donations as well as volunteer their time and services to help ensure that our graduating seniors enjoy a fun and safe, all-night, after-prom party. This year marked the 20th year of this very special event and it was once again a huge success! The seniors and their dates enjoyed games, food, music and an incredible selection of prizes. We would like to extend our thanks to everyone who was involved and helped out... thank you so much—we couldn't have done it without your help!

Flag Day Parade, Fireworks Saturday

the Youth Soccer's board. Wood's Quincy-based company – Wood Commercial Painting – has been a regular sponsor for youth sports in Quincy for many years.

"Bruce is community personified. He has given so much of himself over the years for the benefit of our young people simply because he loves his City and cares deeply about its future. It's people like Woody who have always made Quincy such an incredibly special place," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who is chairman of the Flag Day Committee and the son of the Flag Day Parade founder and the award's namesake, Richard J. Koch.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration is the longest-running of its kind in America, and Mayor Koch noted that a fireworks display already known as one of the best outside of Boston will be "turned up even a few more notches this year."

The Parade consists of specialty units ranging from fire units, Army National Guard vehicles, and community organizations. Some of the best marching bands throughout the state march the parade route playing everyone's favorite patriot songs as impressive floats carrying very special guests follow the sound of music.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade has devoted itself to instilling patriotism and pride in our youth. Each year, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters highlight the event as they march down Hancock Street side by side with their youth organization.

The 1.5 mile parade steps-off at 7 p.m. at the intersection of Coddington and Hancock Streets and proceeds north on Hancock Street to Merrymount Parkway, disbanding at Pageant Field.

The celebration portion of the evening held at Pageant Field following the parade consists of the flag raising of an impressive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory, a patriotic medley, and presentation of awards to the parade grand marshal and the recipient of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service award.

The award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

The evening is capped off by a dazzling 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek – known as among the largest and most extensive shows outside of Boston's July 4th display.

For more information regarding the Flag Day Parade, contact Christopher Rooney at 617-376-1251 or by email at crooney@quincyma.gov.

City Hall, Cemetery, Church Tours Summer, Fall Pilot Program

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will begin offering guided tours of the James R. McIntyre Government Center and Hancock Cemetery, in conjunction with the visitation program at the United First Parish Church, as part of a pilot program this summer and into the fall.

The City Council on Monday night approved allocating $49,765 in hotel and motel tax receipts to pay for the pilot program in an 8-0 vote. Ward 1 Councilor Margaret Laforest, the director of Discover Quincy, did not vote on the appropriation.

Under the pilot program, the tours of the McIntyre Government Center and Hancock Cemetery would be coordinated with the visitation program at the United First Parish Church. Tourists will enter the McIntyre Government Center and take a 45-minute tour of the building and cemetery, guided by a historic re-enactor, before heading to the church. Volunteers from the church would continue to conduct tours of that building, including the Adams crypt.

At least five tours would be offered daily Monday to Saturday from July to November of this year as part of the pilot program. Mayor Thomas Koch said there would be no charge for the tours of City Hall or the Hancock Cemetery, though that may change in the future. The church does not charge for tours, but a donation is suggested.

Of the money allocated Monday night, $19,665 will go towards hiring the greeter at City Hall and the re-enactors who will give the tours; $26,800 will go towards marketing and advertising.

Koch, in a recent interview, said he would like to see the historic tours offered throughout the year. Quincy's historic sites, including the United First Parish Church and the Adams National Historical Park are presently only open during the tourist season – spring through late fall – the mayor noted.

"What I see – and I've been in discussions for a while with the church and others – is that Quincy right now is a seasonal tourist attraction. If somebody comes off-season, you can't see the birthplaces. You can't see the crypt," Koch said.

"The plan is that City Hall, the cemetery and the crypt could be year-round. And of course, in better weather [the Adams Hancock Green] itself is going to be a magnificent stop."

The mayor also noted that the McIntyre Government Center, also known as Old City Hall, recently underwent a $12 million, two-year restoration project. The building, which first opened in 1844, houses exhibit space on the first floor with various objects from Quincy's past.

The city has also worked to restore the Hancock Cemetery – which contains the graves of several members of the Adams family and the Rev. John Hancock, father of the signer of the Declaration of Independence of the same name – over the last several years, restoring grave markers and the burial ground's gates and fences among other work.

Additionally, the city is now designing improvements to the entrance to the Adams crypt at the United First Parish to improve its accessibility.

"All that comes together, the last few years of work, I think into a stop for people," Koch said. "You get a taste of the story of the city, you get a taste of the folks and history of the cemetery, and then you visit two presidents' graves and their wives – and of course you can spend time upstairs and see the beautiful architectural beauty of the church too."

"The second piece of the pilot program, is even though all this work is going on, we want people to know there are still things happening. We can still bring people through while this construction is happening," Koch added, referring to the construction of the new Adams Hancock Green between the church and City Hall.

Quincy, the mayor said, is also preparing for its 400th anniversary in 2025 as Plymouth prepares for its 400th anniversary in 2020. Millions of visitors are expected to pour into the area in celebration of Plymouth's quadricentennial.

"They're expecting 7 million during that year, and they're not all going to go to Plymouth – they're going to be all over the place. They can't fit them all, so we've got to be ready for them here. That's the year before, that's 2020, and then the year after – never mind us getting ready (for the Quincy 400)," Koch said. "That's why we want to get going on this pilot program."

The mayor said that while the city does a good job marketing itself to visitors and drawing them in, it could offer more once those tourists arrive.

"Look, any community would be thrilled to have the Park Service in their city and that's a tremendous asset for us, but the rest of the Quincy story that we have to offer, we haven't really got our act together in doing it," Koch said.

"We do a good job – I think Margaret (Laforest) does a good job [at] Discover Quincy selling the city, getting the brochures out and all that sort of thing – but when they (tourists) get here we're completely dependent on the Park Service doing the tours. This is a great alternative, because as the tourism stuff grows, if the Park Service is backed up and there are no more tours available at the mansion – boom – you've got an option for people for the crypt and the other parts."

'Remember The Ladies' June 17

The History and Visitors Program at United First Parish Church, Church of the Presidents will hold its annual "Remember the Ladies" ceremony commemorating the lives of First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams at 5 p.m. on Friday, June 17th in conjunction with Discover Quincy's Art Walk Friday in Quincy Center.

This year's ceremony will feature speakers Caroline Keinath, deputy superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park and Sara Martin, editor in chief of the Adams Papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society, as well as a welcome and opening remarks from from Church President Brenda Reed.

The program will culminate with a procession to the tombs of the First Ladies, led by Quincy First Lady Christine Koch.

Programmatic partners Quincy Historical Society and the Abigail Adams Historical Society will present pop-up exhibits of artifacts from their collections just outside of the Adams Crypt.

The Adams Crypt and Church Sanctuary will be open to visitors from the end of the ceremony until 8 p.m. as a part of Art Walk Friday.

Abigail Adams, courtesy of historical reenactor Pat Bridgman, will be on site for visitors to speak with throughout the evening.

Admission to the "Remember the Ladies" ceremony, the Adams Crypt and Church Sanctuary are free. Donations to support the History and Visitors Program are greatly appreciated.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

FIXING UNDERSIZED TEETH

When a permanent second tooth on either side of the upper front teeth does not fully develop, the small, pointed, cone-shaped incisor is referred to as a "peg lateral incisor." Because these underdeveloped teeth seriously detract from the attractiveness of a smile, correction is needed. In some cases, the dentist may elect to augment a pegged tooth with bonding material. While this option is relatively quick and inexpensive, the composite material used for bonding does not have the luster of natural enamel. It is also likely to become dull and more prone to staining over time. Porcelain veneers, however, may be more expensive and take longer to complete, but they look much more natural and last a great deal longer.

We can answer any questions you have about pegged teeth. Always feel free to discuss your dental concerns with us. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you can trust the health of your teeth to our extensive training and experience. Our concern is your comfort and confidence – our goal is to help you preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Some patients with peg lateral incisors have parents with the same condition.

C-Mart Wins Council Approval

Traffic Mitigation Includes Fully Actuated Traffic Signal At Hayward, Hancock Streets

By SCOTT JACKSON

The owner of the C-Mart chain of supermarkets has received permission from the City Council to open a new store in North Quincy, seven years after he first sought approval to do so.

The council on Monday approved a special permit for the Asian grocery store, which will be located at 10 Hayward St. inside a former Boston Gear Works building. As part of the permit, the council also approved several mitigation measures – including a fully actuated traffic signal at the Hayward and Hancock Streets – that C-Mart owner Miao Kun “Michael” Fang will pay for.

The mitigation measures were negotiated over the past several months by members of Mayor Thomas Koch’s administration and Fang’s representatives. David Mahoney, an attorney representing Fang, thanked the mayor, City Solicitor Jim Timmins and the council for their work following Monday’s vote.

Mahoney said no date has been set for the supermarket’s opening, but Fang is anxious to see it happen.

“He’s itching for it to open,” Mahoney said. “He wants to do everything he promised.”

Fang first sought permission to open the C-Mart store from the council in 2009. The council rejected that application in a 7-1 vote because of traffic concerns.

The 2009 decision was appealed in Land Court, and the application was remanded back to the council for a second set of hearings that took place in 2013. Brian McNamee, then the Ward 6 councillor, was forced to recuse himself from the 2013 vote. The council voted 5-3 against the supermarket the second time around, with those opposed again citing concerns over traffic.

Land Court Judge Keith C. Long, in a ruling on Jan. 7 of this year, vacated and reversed the council’s 2013 rejection, stating the council ignored his original remand order that instructed councilors to weigh the traffic impact of the proposed grocery store against by-right uses allowed on site. Long ordered the council to approve the permit and consider reasonable mitigation measures Fang could undertake.

On Monday, the council voted 5-0 in favor of the mitigation package city officials and Fang had agreed to. Only the five councilors who were on the body in 2013 – Brad Croall, Joseph Finn, Kirsten Hughes, Margaret Laforest and Brian Palmucci – were allowed to vote Monday night.

Timmins said the other four councillors were ineligible to vote because they were not at the 2013 hearings on the proposal, citing a state law that requires members of permit-granting authorities be present for all meetings on a proposed development in order to vote on the project.

Palmucci expressed concern that Ward 6 Councillor William Harris was not allowed to vote Monday – just as McNamee was not allowed to vote in 2013. The C-Mart site is located in Ward 5, which Hughes represents, but the northern side of Hayward Street is in Harris’ district.

“I feel uncomfortable proceeding without the Ward 6 representative participating,” Palmucci said. “This is a project that affects the residents of Ward 6 significantly, and the whole system here of representation is that your ward councillor is your most direct representative.”

Timmins said Harris was able to provide input as the city worked on the mitigation with Fang’s team. The solicitor said he spoke to both Harris and Hughes after the agreement was finalized.

Timmins said there were limited mitigation options available because MBTA trucks are located to the west of the project site at the end of Hayward Street.

“Because of this location, there was very little that could be done in the way of mitigation,” he stated.

The mitigation measures will be sent to Long for review, and the judge could issue a final decision by the end of June, according to Timmins.

The solicitor said there was no estimate for how much C-Mart will spend on the measures.

The mitigation package includes the installation of the fully actuated traffic signal at the intersection of Hancock and Hayward Streets, including pedestrian signals. The intersection currently has a pedestrian actuated signal, which stops traffic after pedestrians hit the button to cross.

As part of the mitigation, the new, automated traffic lights will be coordinated with the signal at the intersection of Billings Road and Hancock Street to the north and the signal at the entrance to the Hannaford supermarket to the south.

A left turn only lane will be added to the northbound side of Hancock Street leading into the intersection of Hancock and Hayward, allowing traffic to turn onto the latter road. To accommodate the new lane, the southbound lane on Hancock Street has to be narrowed. The parking spots in front of the North Quincy post office branch will not be affected by the new lane.

Vehicles traveling to the C-Mart store will be required to use the entrance to the parking lot at the far end of Hayward Street, closer to the MBTA tracks. Timmins said this was done to prevent cars from backing up on Hayward Street and would encourage the use of Holmes Street instead of Hancock Street for drivers headed to the store from West Squantum Street.

Signs prohibiting parking between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. will be installed along the north side of Hayward Street. Timmins said the council had at one point voted to prohibit parking on that side of the street. That vote was never rescinded, but signs saying parking is prohibited were removed, and the spaces on the street have been used by the condo building there. The new signs allow those residents to park on the street at night and stop C-Mart shoppers from using them during the day.

C-Mart will install a system to keep shopping carriages on site, such as wheel locks that are activated once a cart leaves the parking lot’s perimeter.

Fang has also agreed to create eight new parking spaces along the unnamed private way that runs between the C-Mart parking lot and several properties along Hancock Street. The new spaces will be added on what is now the C-Mart parking lot – the fence along the perimeter will be pulled in so those spaces abut the private way – and can be used anyone.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said she was concerned that the other landowners who abut the private way were not consulted about the plan to add the eight parking spaces. Located along that portion of Hancock Street are Jimmy’s Tire, Modern Art Sign, the Wheelhouse Diner and two residential properties.

“I have to tell you, I’m very uncomfortable,” Laforest said.

Hughes, the council president, said she disagreed with Long’s ruling in the case, but was optimistic the mitigation measures would work.

“It’s unfortunate we are in this situation – it’s more than unfortunate, it’s devastating for a lot of the folks in that area – but at this point I’m very hopeful that the mitigation that I know has been worked on for months in good faith will do just that and address those issues,” Hughes said.

“We have to go through with this mitigation this evening or we could end up with something without any mitigation.”

Accord Seen On Downtown Agreements

By SCOTT JACKSON

New language that will be incorporated into a pending rewrite of the Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center would give the City Council more oversight of agreements reached between city officials and developers of privately owned parcels.

Mayor Thomas Koch is responsible for entering into the covenants and can do so without council approval presently. The covenants allow private developers to seek a certificate of consistency from the Planning Board instead of following the traditional approval process.

Councillors Joseph Finn and Brian Palmucci had previously sought to amend the URDP to require council approval before the covenants could take effect. The agreement worked out recently would allow the council to review the covenants if public resources were to be used, Finn said Monday.

“It would define out more specifically what the role of the council is as it relates to the so-called urban redevelopment covenants,” he said. “[It] really protects, I think, our role specifically as the contracts are entered into if they require any utilization of public resources – that the council indeed does have a role in relation to those specific issues.”

Additionally, the council would be given a 30-day period to make recommendations on language in a draft covenant regarding the developer’s proposed contributions to infrastructure costs and parking costs as well as the downtown public art program. The mayor would be able to finalize the covenant after the council made its recommendations.

Councillor Nina Liang, chairwoman of the council’s downtown committee, said the agreement would benefit the public.

“We worked out a solution that is not ideal, I think, for either side, but the purpose of it, and the positive message to this, is that the language we were able to craft benefits the public and benefits the residents at the end of the day,” she said.

Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines said the administration and planning officials agreed to the change.

Land disposition agreements between the city and developers building on city-owned land already require council approval.

The City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed URDP amendment June 20. The amendment would set the stage for $128.7 million in infrastructure work and related improvements – including new pedestrian plazas – at the Hancock Lot and Ross Garage site to incentivize the revitalization of Quincy Center.

The city would pay for that work through several sources, including selling the two city-owned parking areas to developers and borrowing money with bonds that would be paid back from new property tax revenue created in Quincy Center.

The URDP provides an outline of the city’s strategy for redeveloping Quincy Center. If approved by the council, it would not authorize any new borrowing or the disposition of city-owned land for development; both would require additional council votes.

The Hancock Lot, according to the URDP, could be home to 283 residential units, 56,790 square feet of commercial/retail space, and a 125-room hotel. A parking garage with at least 600 spaces would be built on site by the city. A new pedestrian plaza would be located in the middle of the Hancock Lot site, allowing for pe-

On Sunday, May 29, 2016, at approximately 3:45 a.m., Officers Steven O'Hare and Patrick Folan were dispatched to a Germantown apartment on a complaint from a male caller reporting that he was trying to get his belongings out of the house but his girlfriend was interfering.

Upon arrival, Officer O'Hare was met by a female on her cellphone and holding her infant daughter. When asked what happened, she stated that her boyfriend has been cheating on her and she saw his car at another female's house earlier in the day. She said she woke him up this morning and tried to talk to him which resulted in a verbal argument. When asked if the argument ever became physical, the female broke down in tears and started talking of a prior incident in April that she hadn't reported to Police. She blurted out that her boyfriend put a gun to her head.

At this time her boyfriend came down the steps toward the female so Officer O'Hare led him out to Officer Folan who had just arrived on scene. Officer Folan listened as the boyfriend stated that he has a friend, who is a girl, and that his girlfriend thinks that he is cheating on her with this girl - friend. He said that he was awakened by his girlfriend which led to the argument so he tried to get some belongings together to leave the house.

As the argument escalated, he decided to call the Police because he was concerned that she wouldn't let him go without incident. Meanwhile, Officer O'Hare continued the interview of the female, who said that the gun incident occurred on April 19, 2016. She said that she was in an argument with her boyfriend in the apartment when the boyfriend pushed her onto the bed and placed a gun against the right side of her head behind her ear. The female caller/victim then picked up a doll from the couch and held down the doll's head with one hand and placed her right index finger behind the doll's right ear in a gun shape. She then pointed behind her ear and showed Officer O'Hare a small red mark that she said was left from the gun's barrel cutting her. She described the gun as a silver revolver, adding that it was "the type of gun that the side pops out and gets loaded like a gun that they use for Russian roulette." She said that her boyfriend told her the gun was loaded and then would say that it wasn't loaded. She wasn't sure if the gun was loaded but she feared that it was at the time.

When asked if her boyfriend attempted to keep her from leaving the room, she said that her boyfriend immediately left the house after this encounter. She believed that this happened around 2:00 a.m. that day. She concluded that she feared reporting this incident at the time due to retaliation and additional abuse. The victim was offered assistance in getting a restraining order but she refused any other police services. When asked where the guns came from, the victim said she believed that her boyfriend inherited two pistols after his father died and has since sold the two firearms to a local gun store. The Officers then placed the 48 year old boyfriend in handcuffs and charged him with, "Domestic Assault and Battery and Assault with a Dangerous Weapon to wit a gun." Nice Work!

FEDERAL STUDENT TAX? The FTC reports that college students have received telephone calls from people claiming to be from the Internal Revenue Service, who try to trick students into paying a federal student tax. There is no such tax! The caller often has some piece of information, such as the correct college the student is attending to help legitimize the scam. The caller is often forceful and demands that you wire money immediately or face arrest by the local Police Department. Students have reported that they have hung up on the caller and often get follow up calls with "spoofed caller - ID" which may read 911 or a U.S. government number in the caller ID window. Facts you should know:

- The IRS will never ask you to wire money or pay by sending ITUNES gift cards or reloadable prepaid cards.
- The IRS will never contact you by telephone first - they will send you a letter.
- Never wire money or give personal or financial information to these callers.
- The local Police Department will not come to your house to arrest you regarding an Internal Revenue incident.

Quincy Police Adult Self Defense Program: This free program will be offered Tuesday and Wednesday, June 14th and 15th, a 2 night course, from 6:00 p.m. to approximately 8:30 p.m. It will be held outside at Merymount Park, near the water fountain on Hancock Street across from Central Middle School. This program is open to females aged 18 and up, 16 if with a parent/guardian. Attendance is required both nights because this is a progressive learning program. There is no exam and no one is required to do anything that they do not feel comfortable with. The first night involves learning strikes, blocks and blows and the second night provides an opportunity to test your skills against an "attacker." Bring water, bug spray and wear comfortable clothing. In the event that it rains the first night, the program would be pushed back one night. Check twitter @quincymapolicy or Facebook "QuincyPoliceDepartment" for scheduling updates. Bring a friend! It's more fun! To sign up or to get more information, contact Lieutenant Dan Minton at 617 745 5719 or dminton@quincyma.gov destrian circulation, outdoor café space and seating areas, and pop-up markets, such as a farmers' market.

Two developers have previously announced plans to undertake new developments on the Hancock Lot. LBC Boston plans to build the 125-room hotel along the 1500 block of Hancock Street, with a portion of the work on the site of the parking lot, and Peter O'Connell a 15-story high-rise apartment building fronting the Dennis Ryan Parkway. Those projects are expected to go before the council for approval in the fall.

The redevelopment of the Ross Garage area is anticipated to add 327 residential units, 96,000 square feet of retail/commercial space, 300,000 square feet of office space, and 90 hotel rooms. New pedestrian space and plazas would be included there as well, though their design is not specified in the URDP amendment. One or two parking facilities – with room for over 1,000 vehicles – would be built there.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall questioned the parking plan for the Hancock Lot at Monday's meeting. He was concerned that the 600-vehicle garage, given in the URDP might not be sufficient.

"I know folks – in representing part of the periphery of the downtown – when it comes to parking, would rather have it and not need than need it and not have it," Croall said. "The worst thing you can do is build a world class destination and be over parked."

Planning Director James Fatseas said the garage would contain a minimum of 600 vehicles, and at least two of the developments in the Hancock Lot would have ample parking to cover their needs. Additionally, the plans for the garage – including its size – will be finalized before the city begins the disposition of lands in the Hancock Lot.

Finn questioned whether affordable housing is still a goal for the downtown redevelopment.

William Geary, Koch's special counsel for the downtown, said potential developments are concerned about the ability to make money back in Quincy Center. He said it is too soon to require developers to comply with the city's affordable housing requirements.

"Prospective developers who are investors in our downtown, they are nervous about the economics...in terms of what the construction prices are that they will have to pay and the payback on the investment they will make," Geary said.

"At this juncture, having seen the success of our Affordable Housing Trust city-wide, I don't know that we are in a position to make that a requirement for the first several developments we're trying to get underway."

Finn said development elsewhere in the city has not been hindered by the affordable housing requirements.

"We're kind of left here with a view that the taxpayers of Quincy – many of them who are stressed – are being asked once again to support something of which ultimately they may never have the opportunity to fully live in on their own," Finn said.

"I'm just wondering why we can't take a little more vision in terms of moving this forward and not be simply held to this idea that somehow it's going to limit development. Look at everything that's going on around us – developers have all been before the Affordable Housing Trust. It certainly hasn't deterred them any. Why is it going to so much deter what happens here?"

Koch said. "We'll figure something out."

The closure of Hancock Street in the vicinity of the two historic buildings, which will allow the completion of the Adams Hancock Green, will result in a shift in traffic patterns. Starting June 24, vehicles will travel in two directions on Temple Street and Washington Street adjacent to the church.

New traffic signals that have been installed in recent months will also come online.

Koch said the change in traffic patterns would not lead to more congestion, or alleviate congestion already seen in Quincy Center. The project is intended to make the downtown more pedestrian-friendly, he stated, and drivers headed for locations outside Quincy Center will eventually start seeking alternate routes.

"From the start of this, the engineers said and continue to say traffic won't be any better and it won't be any worse. It's going to be re-routed. You're still dealing with the same volumes," Koch said.

"The whole idea of the downtown was not to make it easier to get through for people going to Weymouth or Hingham, but to make the downtown more friendly for people that are going to be coming to the downtown to eat, to shop, or live here – make it a much more friendly environment for pedestrians and people living here. That's the goal.

"If people are trying to drive through to go somewhere else, they'll learn habits to go around. They'll go up Dimmock and go Burgin. They'll go straight down on Washington and pickup the Hannon Parkway that way or go straight down 3A to the [Fore River] bridge. We'll see how the habits change.

"There are things that will be more efficient. If you're coming from Houghs Neck and Merrymount, you're coming up Coddington. Now you're going straight across Temple Street, so it's easier for them."

Koch said he was not concerned the change in traffic patterns would have a negative impact on public safety; the area will be well illuminated and properly marked. He also noted Hancock Street as it is now can be confusing to those not familiar with the area.

"It's a mess now. When I look out the window, at least once a day there is a car going the wrong way on Hancock Street," the mayor said. "We get used to it, but you see visitors that come through here – they don't know what to do."

Once the portion of Hancock Street closes, underground infrastructure work can commence. The city will begin replacing decades-old utility lines under the road before park construction can begin. That underground work is being paid for using a $4.2 million state grant the city received in September 2015.

The $8 million roadwork project, largely funded by a federal earmark and overseen by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, began in 2014. The project includes widened sidewalks and streetscape improvements such as new trees and streetlights.

Koch said the roadwork project should wrap up this summer, though some finishing touches will take place in the fall.

Three Residents On WPI Dean's List

Three students from Quincy have been named to the Dean's List for the spring semester at Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI).

They are:

Elio Daci, member of the class of 2018, majoring in aerospace engineering.

Tiffany Leung, a member of the class of 2017 and majoring in computer science.

Jonathan Toomey, member of the class of 2019, majoring in mechanical engineering.

Sarah Gilbert Earns Chemical Engineering Degree

Sarah Gilbert of Quincy, daughter of Neal and Theresa Gilbert, recently graduated, with honors from Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J.

She majored in chemical engineering.

During her five years of school Gilbert completed 20 months of internships in her field.

She was also the vice president of Theta Phi Alpha Sorority.

Adams/Hancock Green & Downtown Construction Activities

Proposed work activities for the week of: June 5, 2016

- Hancock Street between the Church of the Presidents and Old/New City Hall will be permanently closed off from vehicular traffic toward the end of June beginning of July in preparation of the new traffic alignment in Quincy Center.
- Work is continuing for the new Adams/Hancock Green Park in front of City Hall.
- Verizon conduit work will continue in front of the Church of the Presidents to replace the existing old wooden duct bank and improve the existing infrastructure.
- Vinagro is preparing the Ross Garage for demolition. Ross Way's traffic direction has changed. It heads north to south from Granite Street towards Hannon Parkway.
- Façade work on the West of Chestnut Project is continuing to take place as they work towards a September 1st opening of that building.

Fireworks Spark Career For Quincy Native Joe Vallier

As a kid I spent some summer weekends in Mashpee with my Quincy cousins. These days I do a majority of Mashpee's multiple fireworks shows.

Some of the better known shows that I was a part of through the years include the Special Effects Pyrotechnics off the light cloud over Gillette Stadium during Patriots Games. Also, when the Boston Red Sox won the World Series in 2013, I was part of a group of Atlas's more experienced Pyrotechnicians setting the fireworks off of the roof of Fenway Park in celebration of that big win. As a Red Sox fan, you couldn't wipe the smile off of my face as those special effects pyrotechnics went up into the air.

Why did you go into this line of work?

I have to say it's the little kid in me. As a child, I remember when Queen Elizabeth II visited Boston in 1976 for the Bicentennial Celebration. I loved seeing the fireworks for that event. I may or may not have played with small consumer fireworks up in the West

Quincy Quarries back in the day . . . but when an opportunity to shoot professional Fireworks was presented to me in 1990 by Jim Feeney, a professional pyrotechnician at that time and then producer of Quincy's Fireworks shows, I went with it. Even back then, Barry Welch and Tom Koch were very influential parts of Quincy's Flag Day event.

To this day lighting professional fireworks brings out the young boy in me as I watched those fireworks over Boston Harbor so many years ago.

What is the best part of your job?

When a show ends with perfect timing and the audience erupts in applause . . . you know you did a good job. That's a satisfying feeling and one of the reasons I still do this.

Will you be able to view the fireworks yourself this year?

With electronic firing, I now get to look up and see every shell of the shows I do. Years ago when each shell was lit manually with a flare, it was a different story. Back then I had no time to even look up until the show was in the last few seconds.

This year, at Quincy's Flag Day celebration, since it's a computer fired show and I'll have several experienced Pyrotechnicians with me as part of the crew, I'll have lots of time to look around and remember my youth growing up in Quincy as the show is fired into the sky. When the Quincy crowd cheers, it will especially remind me of why I love this job.

If you'd like to inquire about adding Professional Fireworks to your upcoming event, Joe can be contacted via email at JoeVallier@gmail.com.

GENERAL JOSEPH F. DUNFORD, Jr. (right), a 1973 graduate of Boston College High School and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, congratulates James Michael Hussey of Quincy after receiving his diploma at B.C. High's recent commencement. General Dunford, who grew up in Merrymount, encouraged the 304 seniors to be good citizens and resilient as they embark on their post-high school journeys. Recalling a challenging injury his junior year at B.C. High, the U.S. Marine Corps General humbly praised the Jesuit and lay community, who came to his Merrymount residence to both inspire and enable him to complete his academics during an extensive recovery. Hussey was one of 15 students from Quincy who are members of the B.C. High School Class of 2016. The others are: Michael Coleman Devane, John Francis Foley, Corwin J. Huang, Brian Thomas Humphreys, John Edward Loughnane, James Quinlan MacDonald, Adam Francis McCormack, Brendan Dominic McDonald, Charles-Louis McElaney, Justin Patrick McGaffigan, David Paul Phelan, Joshua Edward Quinlan, Gregg Selbert and Daniel James Yameen.

22 Quincy Students Graduate AWHHS

Twenty-two students from Quincy recently graduated from Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

The Quincy students include Sarah Kaylee Golden who graduated as the class salutatorian. She will attend Boston University in the fall on a Cardinal Medeiros Scholarship which covers full tuition.

Other graduates from Quincy are:

Clarification

A caption and story in the May 26th issue of The Quincy Sun identified Steve and Donna Sullivan as the parents of the late Steven J. Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan, an assistant coach for the North Quincy High School varsity baseball team, died March 16 of cancer at the age of 28.

Steven A. Sullivan is the father of the late Steven J. Sullivan and Donna Sullivan is the wife of Steven A. Sullivan and the stepmother of Steven J. Sullivan.

Steven J. Sullivan's mother is Lorraine T. (Vellona) Sullivan. Steve's mother Lorraine also attended the pre-game ceremony retiring her son's number 26 at Adams Field.

QHS AP Government Class Visits, Registers To Vote At City Hall

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL students recently completed their Advanced Placement U.S. Government and Politics Exam. In a break from classwork, students visited the The Quincy Sun office where they were each given a copy of the paper's Historic Quincy supplement. The class then visited City Hall and had a private tour of the newly renovated James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) with staff from Mayor Koch's office. The photo above shows the students and teacher Meg McMillen gathered behind the rostrum and seated in city councillor seats in the Great Hall where the City Council meets as well as ceremonies are held. New Walk Of Names Dedication This Summer

City Hall renovation project. Residents will be given the opportunity to receive the original bricks, beginning the day of the dedication of the new Walk of Names.

Koch said the installation of the Walk of Names and other elements would take six to eight weeks to complete; work recently began on the project. The black Quincy granite ball that previously sat in the same space and was moved to accommodate the renovation project will also be featured in the area of the Walk of Names, serving as its centerpiece. Once done, the area will provide a glimpse of what is to come once the entire Adams Hancock Green is completed in late 2017 or early 2018.

"What you will see early - what we're calling the early phase of the Adams Green - is the Walk of Names going back. That's going in in the next six to eight weeks. We're probably going to have a dedication sometime in late August of the Walk of Names," Koch said.

"And the Walk of Names will not only have the bricks put back - actually new bricks back with those names - but some of the features that will be throughout the park, the elements like the granite pieces you see, the color of the brick - all of that will be in conformance with the whole park.

"People will get a taste of what the whole park will be once the Walk of Names is done."

Residents who purchased an engraved brick in the 1990s will have a chance to receive the original brick beginning at the dedication of the new Walk of Names; the bricks will be brought to City Hall for residents to pick up that day. They will continue to be available to the public after the dedication, but not indefinitely.

"Those that don't go that day, we'll keep them for a period of time for people to come and get them," Koch said. "At some point, we'll say they're going to be scrapped. We can't keep them forever. Technically, we've met the obligation - we've put a new brick back in with their name on it."

The Walk of Names and the remainder of the first phase of the Adams Hancock Green work is expected to cost $1.2 million, which will be paid for using grant money the city received from the state.

A similarly-sized statue of John Hancock will be placed at the other end of the park close to the opening near the Hancock Cemetery. The park will also feature a promenade north to south (seen on the right) approximately where Hancock Street is today and a water fountain (foreground left). Statues that are located in the area today - John Adams and Abigail Adams with a young John Quincy Adams - will also be located within the new park.

The closure of the stretch of Hancock Street between City Hall and the United First Parish Church later this month will set the stage for further work needed before the new park can begin to take shape.

Underground utility lines running under Hancock Street in the vicinity of those two buildings need to be replaced as part of the project, and subsurface components needed for the new park will also be installed. The city received a $4.2 million Gateway Cities Park Grant in September 2015 that will be used to pay for the underground work; that grant is also funding the new Walk of Names construction.

Teddy Bear Clinic At BID Hospital-Milton Community Walk, Health Fair Saturday

Children with a sick or injured Teddy Bear can have their bears evaluated by Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton's Emergency Department staff at the hospital's seventh annual Community Health Walk and Health Fair Saturday, June 11, from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the hospital, 199 Reedsdale Rd., Milton.

The family-oriented, health and wellness event starts at 9:30 a.m. with registration for a 5-kilometer (3.1 miles) or a one-mile walk which will start at 10 a.m. from the hospital's Highland Street Parking Lot.

The walks will be followed by family-oriented events including face painting, children's obstacle course, tours of several emergency response vehicles and DJ entertainment. A free barbecue lunch will be available starting at noon.

A new family feature this year will be a Teddy Bear Clinic. Hospital Emergency Department staff members Erin Ryan, CNA, and Deirdre Michalski, PA, will staff a "Teddy Bear E.D." where children can have their bears checked out and professionally treated for an assortment of common Teddy Bear illnesses and injuries.

Boston Red Sox mascot Wally the Green Monster will stop by and be available to meet and be photographed with kids of all ages from 11 a.m. to noon.

A community health fair in the hospital's main lobby will begin at 10:30 a.m. Health screenings and checks will be available as will displays and information from area health and wellness providers.

The American Red Cross' Blood Mobile will be onsite to accept blood donations from the community. Individuals who are interested in donating should call 1-800-733-2767 to schedule an appointment.

Visit www.bidmilton.org/walk to download registration forms. Registration is $5 per walker, except children under the age of 12 who are free.

Historic Curb Appeal in Quincy: Style And Color For Your Old House

Historic New England will offer a walking tour titled "Historic Curb Appeal in Quincy: Style and Color for Your Old House" on Saturday, June 18 from 10 a.m. until noon.

The tour will depart from the Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St. in Wollaston.

On this walking tour, participants will learn about the history and architecture of Quincy's Wollaston neighborhood and get tips on adding curb appeal to their old house through historic paint color combinations and enhanced architectural features.

The Wollaston neighborhood surrounding Historic New England's Quincy House was developed between 1895 and 1930 and includes many examples of Victorian and Colonial Revival-style homes. Historic preservation expert Sally Zimmerman shares information on how to help an old home look its very best by recapturing its historic character.

An optional tour of the Quincy House will be offered following the walk. The Quincy House has recently undergone a three-year focus that included the repainting of several rooms

Quincy Senior Olympics Wrap Up 34th Games

224 From 23 Communities Compete

Two hundred twenty-four participants from 23 different communities recently competed in the 34th Annual Quincy Senior Olympics over 10 days at 13 venues all around Quincy.

One highlight of this years games was an appearance by Alice Bonner, the Secretary of Elder Affairs for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who was greeted at the Faxon Field Track facility on a recent Saturday morning by Tom Clasby, the director of Elder Services, and Quincy Recreation Director Barry Welch, the heads of the departments that organize the games in conjunction with the office of Mayor Thomas Koch.

Bonner, an avid runner, did more than visit as much to the delight of the other competitors. She took to the starting line in the one-mile run and won her age group with a time of 14:07. In addressing the crowd before her run she praised the participants for keeping active, which she cited as a key to healthy aging. She also made a correlation as to how staying fit helps to prevent falls which is one of the highest causes of deaths for older adults according to national statistics.

The Senior Olympics, a Quincy tradition, is conducted by the City of Quincy with principal sponsorship by Linden Ponds. The awards ceremony and sportsman-ship luncheon are hosted by Brookdale of Quincy Bay. Both agencies were recognized at the awards ceremony for their long time commitment which helps to keep the games at a high quality for the enjoyment of all. Games hosts the Torre Dei Passeri Social Club, Presidents Golf Course and Olindy's Bowling and Billiards were presented awards for their hospitality. Presentations were made to media partners The Quincy Sun and QATV for bringing the message of the games to the public.

Michelle Hanly, program manger for the Recreation Department, was honored by the participants with a plaque in recognition of her 25 years of leadership and dedicated service to the success of the games.

Public Health Nurse Ruth Jones of the Quincy Health Department was the keynote speaker at the Sportsmanship Luncheon and cited many studies that support longevity by those exercising and socializing on a regular basis. The games are a perfect example of that concept and contribute greatly to quality of life.

Participants compete in age groups of five-year increments in most events and range in age from 55 to 92. In the much anticipated exhibition-volleyball game the Kennedy Center team of year-round participants bested the Mayors All-Stars two games to none to keep the Kelly-Kirkland trophy for the Kennedy Center.

Barbara Gilliland and Ted Coburn were the two oldest participants in the one mile walk and had the honor of lighting the Olympic Torch to start the games.

The Medalists for the 34th games are:

YOUNG ATHLETES' BACK AND NECK INJURIES

Fortunately, back and neck injuries are less common among adolescent and high school athletes. Most injuries consist of ligament sprains and muscle strains caused by trauma, overuse, improper body mechanics, poor technique, insufficient conditioning, or not stretching enough. These kinds of injuries usually cause back or neck pain while young athletes are active and performing, and subside with rest. However, there are more serious conditions that can present similar symptoms, which makes it important for pain-afflicted youngsters to undergo a comprehensive evaluation. For instance, "spondylolysis" (a defect in the vertebra) and "spondylolisthesis" (in which one vertebra slips onto the bone below it) are common causes of back pain in young athletes, particularly gymnasts, who twist and hyperextend their spines.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we have a number of tools for determining "where" and "to what extent" the bones of your spine have become misaligned. It's important to realize that your body can "tell" us exactly where the problem areas are. Call our office at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Chiropractic care has helped millions of people. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The injury known as a "stinger" involves nerves stretching or compressing when the head is forced back and/or to the side. It is most common in football and wrestling.

Leo Papile Honoree At NQHS Football Alumni Golf Tournament June 20

By JOHN FLYNN

Resumes are for the glamorous highlights, so Leo Papile's includes those years when he was part of Boston Celtics teams that won an NBA title (2008) and lost in the Finals (2010).

The truer measure of one's life, however, is the level of appreciation for how it was shaped and who provided the inspiration. Papile scores mightily in this regard.

"I've been around pro athletes much of my life and I've been with them in the locker room before a Game 7," Papile said. "But the people who had the greatest impact on me were the guys ahead of me at North Quincy High School, Kenny McPhee and those football teams (of the late 1960s). Nine of those guys went to Vietnam. They were my heroes."

A member of the Class of '71, Papile will be the honoree June 20 at the 22nd annual NQHS Football Alumni Golf Tournament at Hyannis Golf Club. Papile said he's humbled by the honor, given that he was more basketball than football, but he relishes every opportunity to be among the people he considers to be the most important in his life — athletes and coaches from Quincy.

"I have lifelong friends from that era. We played in the Greater Boston League and part of me wishes we stayed in the GBL," Papile said. "Teams at North Quincy and Quincy were so deep, so talented in all sports back then."

Papile has authored a remarkable career in basketball over the last 40 years. He started the Boston Amateur Basketball Club in 1979 when he was 23 and remains the foundation of this program. There have been 18 national titles and 99 New England AAA gold medals and nearly two dozen players moved on to play in the NBA.

Having served a stint as Rick Pitino's assistant at Boston University, Papile endeared himself to the dynamic coach. So when Pitino came to coach the Celtics, he brought Papile into the front office. From 1997-2011 Papile served in several capacities, from scout to director of player personnel to assistant executive director of basketball operations.

Today, Papile is still overseeing the BABC but his unmatched knowledge of the amateur and collegiate basketball landscape makes him a hot commodity to NBA teams. "I still have my hands in (pro) hoops with a consulting services. We help with background checks and initiate deals," he said.

One thing he wouldn't trade, however, are his North Quincy roots.

Four Tips For Summer Pool Safety

By DR. JACK CORNWELL
Medical Director

CareWell Urgent Care

With summer just about here, barbecues, family games and swimming are top of mind.

But before you open up your pool or head to a neighbor's, consider this:

• The CDC estimates that from 2005-2014, there were an average of 3,536 fatal drownings (non-boating related) annually in the United States — about 10 deaths per day. In fact, drowning is one of the top causes of death for children ages 1-3.

While these statistics are alarming, there are simple measures you can take to keep your family safe. Follow these four tips to ensure your pool remains a fun oasis this summer.

Install a Fence

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, the easiest and most effective way to keep children safe around water is to control access to and from your pool by installing a fence around its perimeter. When selecting a fence, make sure you review your town's rules, as many have specific requirements for pool fencing. At a minimum, your fence should be 4 feet tall with self-closing and self-latching gates. To take your safety precautions a step further, consider investing in a door alarm, underwater alarm and window guards for those that overlook the pool. Lastly, pool covers can add an extra layer of protection, especially those that can be locked.

Invest In

Swimming Lessons

Enrolling your children in swimming lessons and water-safety skills training can increase their pool safety tremendously, and classes are available starting at a very young age. In fact, participation in formal swimming lessons can reduce the risk of drowning by as much as 88 percent among children ages 1 to 4, who are at the greatest risk of drowning. But before enrolling your child, take into account their previous exposure to water, maturity, physical limitations and health concerns to ensure that they're ready.

Provide Supervision

While fences and swimming lessons are key parts of the equation for maintaining pool safety, keeping children under constant supervision is crucial. Designate a responsible adult to watch children swimming or playing in or around water. Young, inexperienced children should have supervision within an arm's reach at all times and have access to flotation devices as needed. Because drowning occurs so quickly and quietly, adults should avoid distractions such as reading or talking on the phone while supervising children, even if lifeguards are present.

Have Safety Equipment Readily Available

The last step is to invest in safety equipment for your pool and ensure that it's readily available when needed. At a minimum, your pool should be equipped with life jackets, a ring buoy and a rescue hook. You should also invest in a first-aid kit, and if your family has been trained in CPR (a good idea for any pool owner), you can hang up a handy guide or reminder. Lastly, place a phone near the pool area in case of an emergency.

No matter how prepared you are, accidents are bound to happen during a day lounging around the pool. At the end of the day, paying close attention to pool safety is critical to having a safe summer.

NORTH QUINCY GIRLS lacrosse was defeated by Wellesley 20-6 in the first round of the South Sectional tournament last week. Playing outstanding games for the Red Raiders were Marissa McGue, MollyKate Cannon and Hailey Houlihan. McGue scored three goals and had one assist, she also did well on battling for the draw controls. Cannon and Houlihan did well on the ground balls and anticipation which allowed them to get the ball away from pressure quickly. Sarah Tsan, Olivia Hussey, and Karyn McEvoy each scored a goal. The girls played until the very last second. In the photo above, Olivia Hussey scores a goal for NQHS against Quincy in a 15-2 win over the Presidents May 25. Assisting on the goal was Olivia's twin sister, Celia, who was also one of the 12 goal scorers in the win.

Quincy Pediatric Cancer Patient To Bat, Field At Fenway Park

Fantasy Day Saturday Supports Cancer Research, Care At Dana-Farber

Liam DiPilato, 5, of Quincy has been named a patient partner for this year's John Hancock Fenway Fantasy Day.

This unique day attracts fans of all ages to experience the excitement of playing at Fenway while raising money for the Jimmy Fund that supports cancer research and care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Fans have the opportunity to sponsor a Dana-Farber patient to give them special on-field playing access and make their baseball dreams come true.

Liam DiPilato was diagnosed with anaplastic ependymoma and is a patient at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Jimmy Fund Clinic in Boston. Liam loves to practice t-ball, play with Legos and play with his friends — especially his cousins Lucas and Maddy. When he grows up, he wants to play for the Boston Red Sox and thinks he'll be an even better batter than Big Papi.

The Patient Partner Program gives patients and their families an opportunity to establish mutually inspiring, non-caregiver relationships with participants in fundraising programs of Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Jimmy Fund. These special friendships can be a fun distraction from medical matters to partners and their families/organizations

Breakthrough Season For QHS Boys Volleyball

Win Two Tournament Games

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was the year of volleyball at Quincy High School.

In the fall, the girls team won the Patriot League title and advanced to the sectional finals before losing to top-seeded Newton North.

In the spring, the boys team completed a remarkable four-year turnaround with a breakthrough season. The seniors defeated North Quincy and qualified for the tournament for the first time in their careers. They also earned the first two tournament victories in boys volleyball in the school's history.

Like the girls, it took the best to beat the boys. Top seeded Greater New Bedford Regional Vocational Technical High School (20-1) ended Quincy's dream season with a 3-0 victory in the South Sectional semifinals at New Bedford Saturday night.

"I had so much fun working with both teams," said Jacqui Niosi who coaches the boys and girls squads. "There was big improvement on the court, but what I enjoyed most was they were both great groups of kids. The played for the team, not themselves."

The 3-0 final was most misleading. Quincy was right there, on the threshold of a victory in each game. The final scores were 25-23, 25-21 and 28-26. The Presidents were within a point, a hit, a volley, a dig, a serve away from a huge upset.

Niosi was especially pleased with her team's effort in the final game. Quincy trailed, 24-18 in the third game. The Presidents were down two games and six points. The match was one point away from the end.

Surely, they would go away quietly. They did not. Senior Xhuljo Zyba fired service winners. Vince Cristiani (four blocks) rose up and blocked at the net. Zyba's strong serves forced weak returns, and Quincy pushed the top-seeded favorites to the limit before the match was finished.

"I could not have been happier with the way we played in the final game. We could have packed it in, but we didn't," said Niosi. "One thing we improved on all year was the mental aspect of the game. We became mentally tougher, and I think that helped us in the tourney."

No. 5 seeded Quincy (16-5) advanced to the semis with a four-game win against Duffee at home and a 3-0 wipeout of No. 4 seed

Randolph on the road. Zyba, Christ Pham and setter Chris Situ were the key performers in the tourney run.

Zyba had seven kills and 10 digs against New Bedford Vo-Tech and 41 kills and 36 digs in three tourney matches. Pham had four kills and 12 digs in the semis and 18 kills and 47 digs in the tourney. Situ had 11 assists in the semifinals, 69 for the three tourney matches, including an impressive 35 against Duffee.

"Xhuljo is so talented, and he was super-aggressive hitting the ball in the tourney," said Niosi. "Christ Pham set the tone defensively, and Chris Situ brought everything together for us."

Senior captain Bryant Wang was a steady performer who did not light up the score-sheet, but played effective, versatile volleyball for the Presidents.

"He was a great role player for us," said Niosi. "We used him everywhere. He blocked, he played the inside and outside, and he defended. He also had an excellent serve."

Quincy will lose seven seniors, seven seniors who have taken quite a trip over the past four years. When they were freshmen, Quincy won one game. When they were seniors, Quincy was less than 10 points away from stunning the top seed and advancing to the sectional finals. Zyba, Cristiani, Wang, Stiven Cyfeku, Khoa Tran, Stanley Dang, and Jonathan Frois will be missed.

"They bought into everything we wanted to do. They worked hard on conditioning, and they played as a team," said Niosi.

The future is bright. Situ is a junior and Pham is a sophomore. Sophomore Steven Andrews and junior Kenny Chan also had fine seasons.

"We have some good players coming up from the JVs," said Niosi. "We'll have a different type of team next year, maybe not has much height at the net, but we'll be competitive."

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run To Benefit ALS Research Saturday

The 19th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, (the Squirrel Run XIX), a 5-mile run, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day will be held on Saturday, June 11th at Pageant Field, Merrymount Parkway in Quincy.

Proceeds from the Squirrel Run will benefit The Angel Fund, a nonprofit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

An outstanding football player and track athlete Jimmy graduated from North Quincy High in 1984, the 8th and final member of the Kennedy family to do so. He graduated with high honors from Northeastern, and his diploma from his dad, Dean of Students Christopher Kennedy (who was also a 25-year member of the Quincy School Committee). Jimmy graduated from Georgetown Law School. After passing the bar on his first attempt, he accepted a job with the prestigious Washington law firm Schwald, Donnfeld and Bray, and settled in suburban Waldorf, MD.

Jimmy was diagnosed with ALS soon after, at the age of 28. The Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS is a tribute to the life of Squirrel, which each year brings together Jimmy's friends, family, former teammates and classmates.

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome to participate in the 5-mile run and 2.5-mile walk that begins with registration at 8 a.m. The 2.5-mile fitness walk starts at 9 a.m. followed by the 5-mile run at 10 a.m. Children's races begin at 11 a.m.

The cost is $30 for registrations and must be made online at <https://theangelfund.org/squirrel-run-sign-up/>.

All participants will receive a race t-shirt. Numbers will not be mailed prior to the race. Pre-registered participants can pick up their numbers at the pre-registered table on the day of the event.

In addition to the race and walk, the day will be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments, and awards for competitive runners in all divisions for men and women. There will be trophies, gift certificates, and other awards, as well as raffle prizes.

For registration information, or for further information please call Rich (Ratt) Kennedy (781) 383-6008, or email him at tytaylin@aol.com.

Welch Group Honors Hancock Park Employees

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, a leading provider of senior services for more than 67 years, recently honored over 350 long-time employees during the organization's Annual Staff Recognition Dinner, held at Pembroke Country Club.

"Each employee performs a significant role in delivering exceptional care and service to our residents and family members," said Welch Group President Richard Welch, referring to the extraordinary length of service of many Welch Group employees. "It's important to purposefully mark the occasion, honoring Welch Group employees who embody our company's goals and values."

This year Welch Group employees receiving top honors for their years of service to the company include John Howe, a 43-year dietary staff worker at Colonial Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Weymouth; Sandra Benotti, RN, an MDS/MMQ coordinator at Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy who has been on staff for 42 years and Donna Griffin, director of social services at John Scott House Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Braintree, who is a 41-year employee.

Innovation and quality care are the backbone of Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group – increasingly important with an estimated 72 million Americans expected to be 65 years old or older by 2030. That commitment has made the Welch Group a leading provider of continuum of care services to seniors and their families who may need housing or care options, including independent living, assisted living, short-term rehabilitation and long-term care, adult day health or home care services.

In addition to awards for distinguished length of service, the Welch Group each year honors individuals who plan to continue their education in healthcare or related services. This year there were 12 recipients of the Florence May St. John Scholarship.

The scholarship was established by the Welch Family to honor St. John, who began caring for seniors in her home, creating a model of care that her own daughter, Rita M. Welch and her husband, Thomas, would follow when they opened their first nursing center in Braintree – the John Scott House.

The Welch Group, with facilities, located in Braintree, Brighton, Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Quincy and Weymouth, employs over 2000 staff members. To learn more about the Welch Group visit online at: www.welchhrgr.com

Reeve Foundation Supports YMCA Aquatics Programs

By JOHN GALLUZZO
Development Writer
South Shore YMCA

It's a story many of us remember all too well, the tragic news that Christopher Reeve, Superman in the movies of the early 1980s, fell and suffered a severe and paralyzing spinal cord injury on May 27, 1995. It seemed, because of his on-screen persona, impossible, but it was true. But, as we all know, too, Christopher Reeve never gave up.

Such is the message that the Christopher and Dana Reeve Foundation sends out today.

Christopher admitted that his first thought was to give in. But, he said, "When Dana whispered those life-saving words to me, 'You're still you. And I love you,' it meant more to me than just a personal declaration of faith and commitment. In a sense it was an affirmation that marriage and family stood at the center of everything, and if both were intact, so was your universe."

Rather than give up on himself, Christopher decided to use his name and celebrity, and all the goodwill they engendered, to further research that would help future generations of paralysis sufferers. Under Christopher's guidance, the Christopher & Dana Reeve Foundation was born. Its research programs stretch from molecular and cellular in nature to the testing of promising therapies. Christopher even appeared before Congress to further the cause on a federal level.

As Christopher fought that battle, Dana established the foundation's Quality of Life Grants program, extending a helping hand to organizations that enhance the quality of life for those people living through the day-to-day challenges of life with a disability.

This spring, the South Shore YMCA received notification that its Partnership Program would receive a boost from the Christopher and Dana Reeve Foundation. The Partnership Program itself is innovative. Volunteers partner with individuals with disabilities to assure them of the opportunity to get the exercise they need.

Some individuals may require assistance in getting comfortable on a piece of equipment, others may feel generally more comfortable with a partner or friend standing nearby. Still others might just like someone to talk to while they work out.

A natural extension of the Partnership Program, the Aquatics Partnership Program, takes place in the pool. And that is where the Christopher & Dana Reeve Foundation is making its local impact.

It recently made grants of over $735,482 to 107 non-profit organizations in the United States that improve opportunities, access and day-to-day quality of life for families and individuals living with disabilities, including funds with which the South Shore YMCA purchased 2 aquatic walkers, aquatic gloves, neck noodles, floatation sets, and aquatic dumbbells for use at the Quincy Y pools.

"The Reeve Foundation is committed to supporting programs and resources that foster independent living, improved health and community engagement," said Donna Valente, director, Quality of Life Grants, Christopher & Dana Reeve Foundation. "The recognized grantees are instrumental to our work at the Reeve Foundation as we strive to serve the disability community with a roadmap of resources and programs to enhance their quality of life."

Although Christopher and Dana Reeve have both left this world, they continue to give through their messages of hope and the life-altering programs enabled by the foundation that bears their name. The South Shore YMCA is proud to work with them. The Partnership Program is open to everybody.

For more information, contact Sherly Rosa, Partnership Program Coordinator, at srosa@ssymca.org or 617-479-8500 x 4762.

The South Shore YMCA is a charity serving eleven local communities: Quincy, Randolph, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Hanover.

For information on how to support its work through volunteering or donations, contact Mary Orne at morne@ssymca.org or 781-264-9400 ext. 3306.

Register O'Donnell: Solid Real Estate Results For May

Norfolk County real estate posted some strong sales numbers during May according to a report released this week by Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

"For the month of May, a total of 1,554 property transactions, both residential and commercial, were recorded in Norfolk County," O'Donnell said.

"This activity represented a seven percent increase from the previous May. In addition, the total dollar volume of residential and commercial real estate transactions was $682 million, an impressive 13 percent increase year over year. These are encouraging numbers and point to

Results were however mixed for lending activity.

"May 2016 saw 2,814 mortgages recorded against Norfolk County property, representing a five percent increase over the previous May. However, the total dollar amount borrowed during May 2016 was actually a decrease of five percent from May 2015," O'Donnell reported. "While these numbers may appear contradictory, I would remind readers that this figure can be significantly impacted by just a small number of commercial loans," he added.

Last month's statistics clearly indicate that Norfolk County homeowners continue to take advantage of the Homestead Act, an important consumer tool. For the month of May, a total of 1,114 Homesteads were recorded, a 12 percent increase from last May. A Homestead provides limited protection against the forced sale of individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

Foreclosure activity continued to be a cause of some concern during May 2016. The total number of Notices

"There is also no question that some of our neighbors are facing economic hardship today. The Registry is proud to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950 to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Another option for consumers is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333."

Summing up May's Real Estate report, O'Donnell said:

"May was a solid month for real estate activity in Norfolk County. The strong eastern Massachusetts economy is clearly the driving force behind these results. While the Federal Reserve is again talking about raising interest rates in June or July, I am confident that both the real estate and lending markets will withstand this potential increase.

"My primary concern is that real estate inventory levels do not slip. Overall, given May's current data, I am cautiously optimistic that the real estate market will continue on a favorable trend in Norfolk County through the summer months."

Do you suppose workers at the candy-making factory might want to take a brief toffee break?

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church will have a Communion Worship Service and Sunday School at 10:00 a.m. The Rev. William C. Harding will conduct the service and preach the sermon entitled "Let the Children Come." Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the service.

All are welcome to attend Bethany Church Worship Services and its numerous group activities. Bethany has an active Youth Group and a Missions and Growth Committee doing various charity works.

The church office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon-1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Please visit us at: www.bethanyconchurch.org for updates and activities. If you're unable to attend worship service on Sundays, the Bethany Church Service is broadcast on Quincy Access Television at 6:00 p.m. on Thursdays and 10:00 a.m. on Sundays on Channel 8.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers during worship service on Sundays. The church is wheelchair accessible.

Houghs Neck Congregational

This Sunday is Children's Sunday at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy. The day marks the end of year celebration for the Sunday school students.

Joseph Latteo, Alex Rheault, Alex Kuntupis-Galligan, Kiley Craig and Taylor Craig will lead the 10 a.m. Sunday morning worship service and preach the sermon "Conquering Challenges with God's Mighty Power."

Greeters will be Gabriel Pavidis and Jimmy Rheault. Liturgist, Luke Rheault will call to worship and Darian Hockney, Rachel Pavidis and Sean Perry will read the scripture lessons.

Mallory Jacobs, Erica Brown, Andrew Jacobs, and Davin Hockney will serve as junior deacons. Steve Reed, minister of music will direct the choir.

The Sunday School students have been working very hard on the church garden at the rear of the church grounds. All produce harvested will go to Interfaith Social Services.

Yoga classes continue on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7 p.m. with Amy Ross certified yoga instructor. Bring a mat, water and $5.

RELIGION

First Baptist Church

Sunday worship begins at 10:30 a.m. on Children's Sunday at the First Baptist Church of Wollaston, 81 Prospect Ave. All are welcome.

Members of the Sunday School will conduct the service with the theme "Take me out to See Jesus" in skits and songs.

Serving the church will be greeters, students of the primary and junior classes; scripture readings, Hannah

Mahn.

Bibles will be presented to the junior class. The Donald MacKenzie and Robert Mahn Sr. Scholarships for continuing education will also be presented.

Following the service there will be a "Tailgate" Potluck luncheon with a baseball theme followed by games for the children on the church lawn.

All areas of the church are handicap accessible.

Union Congregational Church

Christ Church Mobile Ministries and Union Congregational Church of Wollaston will hold a series of Sunday morning Beach Services this summer beginning this Sunday, June 12 at 8 a.m.

The services will be held on Wollaston Beach between the Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs. The Rev. Martha Swanson will give a brief Bible message and the Rev. John Swanson will lead the prayers and a few old time Gospel songs. I

In other church news, the monthly spaghetti at Union Church will be held this Saturday at 6 p.m. The cost of this homemade all-you-can-eat meal is $5.

Union Church is located on the corner of Beach Street and Rawson Road in Wollaston. Sunday service is at 10 a.m. This Sunday's message at Union Church will be taken from the Bible book of Philippians Chapter two and is titled, "Humility and Proclamation, the Man is the Message."

Quincy Point Congregational

June 12th is Children's Sunday at the 10 a.m. worship at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

The church sanctuary is air-conditioned and is handicap accessible via the Abbey Road side of the building.

The children of the congregation will lead worship.

Summer Sunday School starts on Sunday, June 28th. All children are welcome. The curriculum will feature the One Room Deep Blue Sunday School Program. Per their website, "Deep Blue is the new awe-inspiring resource for children which includes adventure, exciting stories, science experiments, arts and crafts, animated video storytelling, and active games-all combined into a living-faith experience that will help children discover what it means to be a disciple of Jesus Christ today! For more curriculum info see: <http://www.deep-bluekids.com>. Awesome Retirement Church Picnic is Sunday, June 19th at Pageant Field, Merrymount Parkway, Quincy from noon to 3 p.m. Come to help celebrate Rev. Ann Suzedell's 15 wonderful years as pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church and 40 years in ministry. There will be food, games, races, and prizes. RSVP to 781-910-7761 by June 10.

QPCC will also be providing a venue for the summer music camps for South Shore Children's Chorus, the week of July 11-15th. Featuring beginning to advanced choirs for children in 1st grade through 9th. For more information, see their website @ www.southshorechildrenschorus.com

A reminder that the QPCC Missions committee is collecting toiletries, hats, gloves and sweaters or sweatshirts that are new to be brought to Seafarers' Friends. Rev. Ann has offered her own little challenge to people, "Let's see how many Sweatshirts for Seafarers we can collect."

Seafarers' Friends provides counseling, chaplaincy and other services to seamen who work on large ships from all over the world and bring products to our shores. The church office is open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. weekdays to accept donations or they can be brought to the 10 a.m. worship.

OBITUARIES

J. Antonio Alvarado, 72

A funeral Mass for J. Antonio Alvarado, 72, a longtime resident of Quincy, was celebrated Wednesday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Alvarado died suddenly June 2 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

He was born, raised, and educated in Barranquitas, Puerto Rico. Mr. Alvarado moved to Massachusetts in the 1970s and had lived in Quincy for the past 45 years.

He worked as a heavy equipment operator at Hartz Mason for many years. Previously, Mr. Alvarado had worked as a farmer in Lexington. Mr. Alvarado valued spending time among neighbors and passers-by in Brewer's Corner in West Quincy. He enjoyed gardening, painting, and was a fan of professional wrestling.

Beloved husband for 34 years of Elizabeth A. "Betty" (Harding) Alvarado. Devoted father of Juanita A. Alvarado and her partner Jonathan F. Ford of NH. One of six siblings, Toni was the dear brother of Elisabel Alvarado and Andres Alvarado and was predeceased by Victor, Maria, and Lucia

Alvarado. Stepfather of Virginia A. "Ginny" Gilmartin and her husband Sean of Haverhill, Phillip F. Fisher and his husband Jerry of Quincy, Bettyanne M. Sylvia and her husband Charles, Robert B., David B., M. James, and Mark T. Eisenhauer. Loving Abuelo of Jonathan F. Ford, Jr., seven grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment at Oaklawn Cemetery, Roslindale.

Memorial donations may be made to Prayers for Charlotte at www.prayersforcharlotte.org/donate.

Dorothy M. McCormack

A funeral Mass for Dorothy M. (Walsh) McCormack of Quincy was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mrs. McCormack died May 31, surrounded by the family she cherished.

The beloved wife of the late Francis P. "Frank" McCormack, Sr. Devoted mother of her seven children, Tina McCormack of Braintree, Patrick McCormack of Hull, Judy Tryon and her husband Tommy of Quincy, Noreen Devlin and her husband Mike of Braintree, Tim McCormack of Quincy and his former wife Lucy Gibbs of Pembroke, Fran McCormack and his wife Tina of Quincy and Beth Leonard and her husband Mark of Hingham. Sister of Joseph P. Walsh of Braintree and the late Sr. Ann Martina, James and Thomas Walsh, and Mary Kennedy.

Mrs. McCormack was the devoted and loving Grammy to her 13 grandchildren Michael, Andrew, Kevin, Rudy, Robert, Caroline, Anna, Patrick, Adam, Martin, Marykate, Aidan, and Tess. She was the daughter of the late Martin and Mary (Cafferty) Walsh. She is also survived by many loved nieces and nephews. She had very special attentive and compassionate caregivers. Lynne, Grace, and Lorraine made a difference in the quality of her life with their patience, empathy and love.

Mrs. McCormack grew up Roxbury and was very proud of her Irish heritage. During the war, she worked at Raytheon for the military defense. Upon graduation from high school, Mrs. McCormack worked as an executive secretary at Walworth's, one of her favorite workplace memories, as she met many lifelong friends, one of whom introduced her during a lunch hour to her future husband, Frank McCormack. Frank and "Dixie's" journey began on that fateful day.

The early days in Dorchester, continued to North Quincy with a home a block up from the beach. Mrs. McCormack truly made her house a home with her extensive talents; sewing, painting, wallpapering, preparing meals all while balancing the needs of seven children. In addition, she was known for welcoming her children's friends around the table, as there was always room for more. Both she and Frank were known among family and friends for their wonderful hospitality to all.

Mrs. McCormack leaves a legacy of love, loyalty and devotion to family and friends. One of her favorite expressions to her children was "Charity begins at home!" She will be sadly missed by her family but, they are so grateful for all the blessings she brought into their lives.

Sharing time with family and friends was always so important to her. Please, set some special time aside to truly enjoy your loved ones in her memory.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Memorial donations may be made to "Super Saturdays" (Non-Profit Special Needs Recreational and Social Program), c/o Mary Ford Clark, BHS, 128 Town St., Braintree, MA 02184.

Maryrose A. Mirick, 63

A funeral Mass for Maryrose A. (Sullivan) Mirick, 63, of Weymouth will be celebrated Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Mirick died after a long illness on June 5.

Born in Quincy, she was a graduate of North Quincy High School, Class of 1971, Aquinas College with a degree in fashion technology and business science college, Quincy College with a degree in early childhood education and the University of Massachusetts Boston, graduating with a vocation teaching certification. She taught in the Quincy Public Schools and tutored in the Holbrook Public Schools for many years.

Mrs. Mirick was an activist as she was former director of development for the Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts, a broker for Paramount Partners and Mirick Real Estate, court clerk assistant in the Quincy District Court, designer at Trose Treasures, spokesperson for the American Heart Association "Go Red Campaign," past president of the Ambassador Group of the So. Shore Chamber of Commerce, Paul Ferris fellow of the Quincy Rotary Club, former board member of the American Red Cross, former board member of the Quincy Business Association, former board member and founder of the Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk, and former member and volunteer of the National Kidney Foundation Fundraising Committee.

Beloved wife of Wayne Mirick of Weymouth. Loving mother of Andrea Rose Mirick and Jacquelyn Patricia (Mirick) Neary and her wife Kathryn, all of Weymouth. Cherished grandmother of Julia Rose Pruitt. Dear sister of Daniel

MARYROSE A. MIRICK

Sullivan and his wife Madolyn, David Sullivan and his wife Sandra, Claire Ball and her husband Charles, Barbara Arnold and her husband Edward, Patricia Sullivan and her husband Richard DeCristofaro. She will be lovingly and forever missed by her nieces, nephews, cousins and friends and all who knew and loved her.

There was nothing Mrs. Mirick enjoyed more than spending time with her family and friends. Vacations in Ossipee, N.H.; Cape Cod; and Windham, Maine, were cherished times.

Mrs. Mirick was a strong advocate for organ donation as she was the recipient of a kidney transplant from her sister Patricia in 1982. Mrs. Mirick had a magnetic personality and her love for life never faltered. She was a true inspiration to all who knew her.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. Wednesday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. Celebration of life at funeral home at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

A special care acknowledgment to Tufts Medical Center and the South Shore Visiting Nurses and Hospice of the South Shore.

Behind The Scenes Of Memorial Day

Even though the Memorial Day services were held indoors this year, we are thinking of the many people who worked long hours to make the intended site (Mount Wollaston Cemetery) of the ceremony look so beautiful.

The obvious workers are those staffed in the Cemetery Department. They are charged with the grooming of all six of the city's cemeteries for those visiting graves and for the ceremony held at Mount Wollaston. The Sea Street entrance to Mount Wollaston looked beautiful. The bushes surrounding the fountain were removed and replaced with colorful flowers.

As we walked through Mount Wollaston the day before the holiday, we saw a city truck with its crane extended to the top of the flag pole. Gradually being lowered in the bucket, a person was painting the pole. These are details we don't think of as we look at the whole picture.

We thank everyone from the various city departments who pitched in to make everything look so beautiful—the obvious and those who are "behind the scenes".

John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, And The Other Revolution June 17

Daniel Mallock To Lecture On New Book At Carriage House

Adams National Historical Park welcomes a fresh investigation into the friendship, rift, and reconciliation between John Adams and Thomas Jefferson this month.

The Adams-Jefferson bond spanned 50 years, the creation of a new nation, and the successes, trials, and tribulations that came alongside the American Revolution. These paragons of American history are inextricably linked through their collaboration on the Declaration of Independence and simultaneous deaths on the Declaration's 50th anniversary in 1826.

While the American Revolution bound these Founding Fathers together, another revolution an ocean away bitterly divided the two and ripped the fabric of American politics apart.

On Friday, June 17, in the Adams Carriage House at 7 p.m., Quincy native, author Daniel L. Mallock will give a lecture on his new book entitled Agony and Eloquence:

John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and a World of Revolution (Skyhorse Publishing, February 2016).

Mallock grew up within walking distance of Peace field and is returning to his roots for this special Bunker Hill Day event. In his work, Mallock traces how the French Revolution drastically altered the greatest friendship in American history as it came together, fell apart, and was ultimately renewed within the context of events in France. Copies of the work will be available for sale and signing during the event.

The Adams Carriage House is located behind the Old House at Peace field, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

Limited street parking is available. Information, restrooms, and a small gift shop are available at the Carriage House.

This event occurs in conjunction with guided tours of the John Adams Birthplace, John Quincy Adams Birthplace, and Old House at Peace field.

Tickets to the historic homes can be purchased at the Visitor Center located at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy.

A free park trolley transports visitors from the Visitor Center to the Birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field for a two and a half hour tour.

The first tour leaves the Visitor Center at 9:15 a.m. and the last tour leaves at 3:15 p.m., seven days a week including federal holidays. Tickets are $10 for adults (children 15 and under are free) and sold on a first-come, first-served basis.

For more information call 617-773-1177.

Social Security Benefits Citizens Outside The U.S.

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Over half a million people who live outside the United States receive some kind of Social Security benefit, including retired and disabled workers, as well as spouses, widows, widowers, and children.

If you're a U.S. citizen, you may receive your Social Security payments outside the United States as long as you are eligible. When we say you are "outside the United States," we mean you're not in one of the 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, or American Samoa. Once you've been outside the United States for at least 30 days in a row, we consider you to be outside the country.

If you are traveling outside the U.S. for an extended amount of time, it's important that you tell Social Security the date you plan to leave and the date you plan to come back, no matter how long you expect your travel to last. Then we can let you know whether your Supplemental Security Income (SSI) will be affected.

You can use this online tool to find out if you can continue to receive your Social Security benefits if you are outside the United States or are planning to go outside the United States at www.socialsecurity.gov/international/payments_outsideUS.html.

This tool will help you find out if your retirement, disability, or survivor's payments will continue as long as you are eligible, stop after six consecutive calendar months, or if certain country specific restrictions apply.

When you live outside the United States, periodically we'll send you a questionnaire. Your answers will help us figure out if you still are eligible for benefits. Return the questionnaire to the office that sent it as soon as possible. If you don't, your payments will stop. In addition to responding to the questionnaire, notify us promptly about changes that could affect your payments.

You can also read the publication titled Your Payments While You Are Outside the United States at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

Social Security is with you through life's journey, even if that journey takes you outside the United States.

Docket No. NO16P0676EA
Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court
Norfolk Probate and Family Court
35 Shawmut Road
Canton, MA 02021
(781) 830-1200

Estate of:

Michael Paul Kisiel

Also known as:

Michael P Kisiel, Michael Kisiel

Date of Death:

September 28, 2015

To all interested persons:

A Petition for Formal Adjudication of Intestacy and Appointment of Personal Representative has been filed by: Nancy Kisiel of West Palm Beach, FL requesting that the Court enter a formal Decree and Order and for such other relief as requested in the Petition.

The Petitioner requests that Nancy Kisiel of West Palm Beach, FL be appointed as Personal Representative(s) of said estate to serve Without Surety on the bond in an unsupervised administration.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

You have the right to obtain a copy of the Petition from the Petitioner or at the Court. You have a right to object to this proceeding.

To do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance and objection at this Court before: 10:00 A.M. on the return day of 07/06/2016. This is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline by which you must file a written appearance and objection if you object to this proceeding. If you fail to file a timely written appearance and objection followed by an affidavit of objections within thirty (30) days of the return day, action may be taken without further notice to you.

UNSUPERVISED

ADMINISTRATION UNDER THE MASSACHUSETTS UNIFORM PROBATE CODE (MUPC)

A Personal Representative appointed under the MUPC in an unsupervised administration is not required to file an Inventory or annual accounts with the Court. Persons interested in the estate are entitled to notice regarding the administration directly from the Personal Representative and may petition the Court in any matter relating to the estate, including the distribution of assets and expenses of administration.

WITNESS, Hon. John D Casey, First Justice of this Court.

Work On New Adams Hancock Green Underway

— water main work, sewer main work, drain work,” Koch replied when asked what would happen after the June 24 road closure. “They’ve already started putting in conduit by the church for Verizon and eventually National Grid, fire alarm, Comcast. They’ll all have underground conduits installed and then they’ll pull their wires.

“Then there is the underground work needed for the park — the new elements of the park. For example, we put in all the controls and the water tank and filtering system is in between the cemetery and City Hall. Now, the connections that are going to feed the fountains and all, all that underground work will begin.”

The new Adams Hancock Green will feature a promenade running north to south, roughly where Hancock Street is now. The promenade will be separated from the road by bollards, which could be lowered to allow vehicles in for special events at City Hall or the church as well as emergency access. The bollards could also allow city parades to move through the park itself.

Statues of the park’s namesakes — John Adams and John Hancock — will be located on opposite ends of the promenade, facing out of the park. The statue of Adams will be placed on the northern end of the promenade, and the Hancock statue on the southern end, near the Hancock Cemetery.

The statues are cast in bronze and stand more than eight feet tall.

“They’re heroic, which means they’re significant in size,” Koch said. “There is a lot of detail on them.”

The statues will be installed on low-rising pedestals in the new park.

“A lot of statues in Boston, in D.C. — they’re up on these huge pedestals. You can’t appreciate the statue,” Koch said. “These are low enough to be able to appreciate them.”

Sergey Eylanbekov, a Russian-born sculptor with a studio in Pietrasanta, Italy, was commissioned to design the two new statues. He was one of 78 artists who applied to design and construct them; a committee of local art experts and historians vetted the applicants.

Eylanbekov has completed the statues, Koch said, and they are either in the process of being shipped to the city or recently arrived. They will be placed in storage until they are installed in the new park.

“They’re going to be stored until we’re ready to place them,” the mayor said. “There was discussion [about] whether we should have them somewhere for people to see, but I think that spoils the impact of the space they’ll be in, because it’s the space around it — the steps, the inscriptions around it — that are going to help tell the story.

“I don’t think it would be fair to the artist or the artwork itself to just stick them somewhere in the meantime.”

In addition to the two new statues, two existing ones — the sculpture of Abigail Adams and a young John Quincy Adams outside the United First Parish Church and the sculpture of John Adams on the McIntyre Mall — will also be incorporated into the new park.

The statue of Abigail and John Quincy Adams was installed in 1997 and the sculpture of John Adams was added five years later. Both were commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and were designed by Lloyd Lillie.

Those statues will be placed in the vicinity of the Hancock Cemetery, in an area of the park meant to resemble the Adams’ home at Peace field.

“Essentially, in front of the cemetery near City Hall, there is going to be a little garden within the space, and the two statues are going to be in that garden,” Koch stated. “The plantings are going to be similar to Peace field, and there will be some kind of a plaque acknowledging who the sculptor was and they were donated by the Quincy Partnership.

“The artists, the landscape architects, we came to that conclusion that that would be a nice space, because they’re near the church — they’ll probably both be looking toward the church — where they’re buried, and their family is in the cemetery right there. I think it has some merit.”

Plans for the Adams Hancock Green also include three water features. Two smaller ones will be located near the John Hancock statue and meant to be more contemplative in nature. The largest of the three, located towards the middle of the park, will feature a number of water jets shooting skyward and a bottom resembling shifting sand.

“I told them anywhere you are in the park, I want you to hear the water flowing,” Koch said of the large fountain.

The mayor said the goal is to complete construction of the park by late 2017, but it might not be finished until spring of the following year.

“My goal is fall of ’17,” he said. “Whether we meet that or not — I don’t know. It could be spring of ’18 depending on how all the infrastructure pieces go.”

Koch did not have a price tag for the cost of completing the Adams Hancock Green in its entirety. With the underground work and the Walk of Names completed using $4.2 million in grant money, the mayor said he has asked the engineering team to determine what the cost for the remainder of the park construction is.

“We’ll have a new number soon on that,” he said. “We’ll be applying through the commonwealth for MassWorks grants, Gateway City grants, to help us to continue to advance it.”

The work done to date has been completed using state and federal funds, Koch said, and not city money. If the city were to pay for the park project, the mayor said he would not tap into the general fund but would use district improvement financing (DIF) bond money. The DIF bonds are paid back using new tax revenue generated in Quincy Center.

Koch said completion of the Adams Hancock Green would achieve several things: answer residents’ call for more green space in the downtown, make the area more tourist-friendly, create a better atmosphere for people moving into Quincy Center, and move the United First Parish Church out of the middle of the roadway.

“One, when the city did a number of charrettes, both under Mayor Phelan and then we did a number of public meetings, there was a great call for more green space in Quincy Center,” the mayor replied when asked what he hoped to accomplish with the new park.

“We heard that through every neighborhood, we need more green space, public land, etc.

“Two, if we’re going to be a class city — we want to truly be in the business of tourism — then we’ve got to step it up. Three, the downtown development investors wanted to see more investment in park, open space areas, within the downtown to create that atmosphere for those that want to live down there.

“Specifically, as I’ve said a number of times, the church became a traffic rotary and it did not provide the dignity to that building that it deserves, particularly for having two presidents buried in the crypt there.

“This changes the whole picture of there and feel of the place.”

QUINCY HISTORY MUSEUM
8 Adams Street | 617-773-1144 | QuincyHistory.org
Open Mon-Fri, 9 am - 4 pm, Saturdays

The Adams Academy, built of Quincy granite, is an early and important example of Gothic revival architecture in America. Endowed by John Adams as a preparatory school for boys, it was built on the site where the legendary patriot John Hancock was born. Now home to the Quincy Historical Society whose museum showcases the city's history from Native American times up through the early 21st century.

CITY HALL
1305 Hancock Street

Built in 1844, old City Hall is one of the oldest functioning seats of government in the country. Its academic Greek Revival architecture has been described as one of the outstanding examples of mid-century classical American design. Unusual in both its monumentality and in the severity of its granite detail, these features may be attributed to its architect Solomon Willard, who was instrumental in the development of the granite industry in Quincy. Historic Preservation work has recently been completed and visitors are welcome to tour the Great Hall and exhibit

HANCOCK CEMETERY
1307 Hancock Street

From 1630 to 1854, Quincy's most illustrious residents and civic leaders were buried here; Henry Adams, the first Adams to live in Quincy and ancestor of John Adams; Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named; patriot Josiah Quincy, Veterans of the Revolution, the War of 1812, and the Civil War. The memorials offer a chronicle of gravestone art from colonial winged skulls and cherubim, to Federalist classical motifs, to Quincy's 19th century role as the national center for granite quarrying and carving. Scan code to get connected to a Google walking tour map of the cemetery.

MOUNT WOLLASTON CEMETERY
20 Sea Street

One of America's earliest garden cemeteries, the first two plots were ceremoniously purchased on May 5, 1856 by Charles Francis Adams, Sr. A two and one half mile long stone wall, erected for the perimeter in 1934-35 by the Works Progress Administration, is dedicated to the memory of Thomas Morton who in 1625 led the settlement here after the arrival of Captain Richard Wollaston. The variety of ornate gravestones and granite monuments beautify this outdoor museum honoring three Adams descendants whose lives were lost in service to our country, veterans, former Mayors and

MERRYMOUNT PARK

One Merrymount Parkway | QuincyMa.gov
Quincy's most utilized park, donated by descendants of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and originally developed by Frederick Law Olmsted, Merrymount Park now includes Adams Field, the finest amateur baseball field in New England, Collins Rest-a-While playground, Fenno Street basketball and tennis courts, Mitchell McCoy softball field, Ruth Gordon Amphitheater, running track at Faxon Field, Ryan Boathouse and Veteran's Memorial Stadium.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN

340 Franklin Street
Corner of Viden Road
On June 17, 1775, Abigail Adams and her seven year old son John Quincy walked the short distance from their farm to the top of Penn's Hill, where they observed the smoke and fire of the Battle of Bunker Hill. The cairn, an ancient form of commemoration, was erected by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1896. The cairn's stones came from private properties and historic sites. During historic preservation work in 2008, a time capsule was discovered.

MAYPOLE HILL, MERRYMOUNT

Samoset Ave
Thomas Morton, the first English person to build a plantation, known as Mar-e-Mount, on Massachusetts Bay in 1624, operated a successful trading post. On May Day, 1627, he erected a Maypole. The site is commemorated on the City's Seal. Shown with a large tree on it, a historical marker notes the location, and its remains can be seen at the Quincy History Museum.

JOHN WINTHROP, JR. BLAST FURNACE
61 Crescent Street

The son of Massachusetts' governor and one of the principal founders of Connecticut, John Winthrop, Jr. operated the first iron smelting furnace in the British colonies, one of the earliest industrial ventures in America (1645). You can view the excavated remains of the furnace, read about its history, and see artist's renderings of the furnace in full operation.

NUT ISLAND
147 Sea Ave

Part of the Boston Harbor Islands National Recreation Area, and one of the few accessible by land, this property offers stellar vistas of the Boston skyline and other Harbor Islands. A great place to watch the sunset, this location is popular for walking, picnicking, or fishing from the pier.

QUINCY SHORES RESERVATION/WOLLASTON BEACH
Quincy Shore Drive | WollastonBeach.org
Moswetuset Hummock, 435 East Squantum Street

Quincy's largest beach offers 2.5 miles of clean sand, swimming, lifeguards, free parking, a bathhouse, scenic views of the Boston Harbor Islands National Park and a continuous walkway for biking, walking & jogging. Some of the best fried clams in the area can be found at a variety of eateries, as well as hot dogs, hamburgers, ice cream and more. There are also two children's playgrounds with picnic areas.

Moswetuset Hummock (1617) was the seat of the Massachusetts Native American sachem, Chickatabot, where he negotiated with the early English settlers. The William R. Caddy Memorial Park and Black's Creek Salt Marsh were used by Native Americans for fishing, shell fishing, and hunting. Colonists harvested salt hay from the marsh and established several tide grist mills around the estuary. Significant for its beauty and for rare Native American artifacts, including 256 stone tools, discovered on site, the park also has informational signage and children's

40 Washington Street | 617-376-1301
ThomasCraneLibrary.org | Hours: M-Th, 9 am-9 pm
Friday & Saturday, 9 am-5 pm, Sunday, 1-5 pm

Built in 1881 by noted architect Henry Hobson Richardson, who also designed Boston's famed Trinity Church, the Thomas Crane Public Library's original building is a masterpiece of 19th century Romanesque architecture. Its ornate woodwork and La-Farge stained glass windows are truly works of art. Since the library opened in 1882, several additions have been constructed, including a multimillion-dollar addition in 2001 that combines the architectural spirit of the original Richardson building with the technological capabilities of a 21st century library. Through memberships and sales at their bookstore at the Main Library (open Thursdays from 6-8 and Saturday from 10-4), the Friends of TCPL are able to fund the museum pass program and special events while supporting the library's vital role in the educational and cultural life of Quincy.

Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum

Lyons Turning Mill, Quarry Hills Drive

Free

Historic Preservation is underway in effort to establish a museum to show the history of quarrying and stonecutting and its relationship to the industrialization of this industry as it relates to the history of Quincy. Built in 1894, the mill used giant lathes to turn granite and other kinds of stone into columns, spheres, and works of art. The Quincy Quarry Railroad, which was built at the same time, ran through its center and a 20-ton overhead crane inside the mill could handle the manufactured stone products that were made there. Visitors are welcome to tour the grounds of the mill and encouraged to view the virtual museum QuincyQuarryMuseum.org/Virtual-Museum.html.

Quincy and Beyond

BLUE HILLS RESERVATION
FriendsOfTheBlueHills.org

Stretching over 7,000 acres from Quincy to Dedham, Milton to Randolph, the Blue Hills Reservation provides a green oasis in an urban environment. With its scenic views, varied terrain and 125 miles of trails, it offers year-round enjoyment for the outdoor enthusiast. Sixteen historic structures listed on the National Register tell the fascinating tales of Native Americans, explorers, farmers, quarry workers and inventors. Additionally the Blue Hills Weather Observatory, a National Historic Landmark, sits atop Great Blue Hill, as a crowning feature. The Trillside Museum is a popular location for families.

FRIENDS OF THE BLUE HILLS PROTECT & PRESERVE

FRIENDS OF THE BLUE HILLS
781-828-1805 | FriendsOfTheBlueHills.org

This mission of this non-profit organization is to preserve the Blue Hills Reservation by protecting the park's borders, maintaining the trails, and helping to protect the biodiversity of the park. QUINCY QUARRIES RESERVATION
Ricciuti Drive | QuincyQuarryMuseum.org

America's large scale granite quarrying industry was born here in 1825 when, after an exhaustive search throughout New England, Solomon Willard selected the area as the source of stone for the Bunker Hill Monument. View the remains of America's first commercial railway, walk through the quarries, many of which have been filled in, rock climb, hike, golf, have a picnic or just take in the gorgeous scenery of the largest open space within 35 miles of Boston.

Braintree

Once combined with Quincy and neighboring towns, Braintree was established as a separate town by a land grant from the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1640 and celebrates its 375th Anniversary this year. The theme of "Celebrating 375 Years of Revolutionary People, Places & Events" will be interpreted throughout the year with exhibits and programs highlighting the many ways in which Braintree, its people and happenings have been revolutionary since the town's incorporation.

Council Passes $287.56 Million FY17 Budget

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council unanimously approved a $287.56 million budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1, after cutting more than $400,000 from Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed spending plan over the past month.

Koch on May 2 had proposed a budget of $287.96 million for fiscal year 2017, an increase of nearly $11 million (3.97 percent) over the city's current of $276.97 million budget.

After shaving $402,402 from the budget during four finance committee meetings that lasted nearly 20 hours total – including two six-hour sessions that ended after midnight – the council approved the budget during a special meeting held June 8. The fourth and final series of departmental budget hearings was also held that night.

The $402,402 excised from the budget included two cuts made June 8.

The $28,857 line item for fire details in the Traffic, Parking, Alarm and Lighting Department budget was eliminated because it is funded from sources outside the general fund.

The councillors also cut $2,278 from the line item for their collective salaries ($253 each), meaning their individual salaries of $22,673 will remain unchanged in the new fiscal year. Council President Kirsten Hughes voted against that cut, saying the increased salary was meant to be a cost of living adjustment. Councillor Noel DiBona had proposed the decrease.

A $5,000 cut to the salary of the economic analyst position in the Municipal Finance Department made on May 9 was rescinded June 8, after councillors received an updated job description for the position. Three councillors – Joseph Finn, Nina Liang and Brian Palmucci – voted against restoring the $5,000.

Many of the cuts made previously were to line items that ended recent fiscal years with surpluses, and were proposed by Finn on May 9. Those cuts included $250,000 from the city's medical insurance line item, $30,000 from the unemployment compensation line item, $20,000 from tax title expenditures, $5,000 from a professional/tech line item in the city solicitor's office, $4,502 from the seasonal staff and Saturday differential line item in Crane Library budget, $1,566 from the Park Department premium pay line item, and $200 from the professional/tech line item in the treasurer/collector's budget.

The Health Department's personal service budget was cut by $60,000 on May 25, which Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain proposed.

The council on June 8 also voted to transfer $1.5 million in salaries – representing raises for union and non-union employees – to a reserve for appropriation line item. That money can be transferred back at a later date only with council approval.

Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh requested the transfer because negotiations for new contracts with seven of the nine unions representing city employees were still ongoing at the time; the budget had assumed those union employees receiving a 1 percent salary increase in FY16 and a 2 percent increase in FY17.

Of the $1.5 million transferred into the reserve for appropriation account, $1.4 million is for the raises that would go to employees of those seven unions, $117,000 is for raises for department heads, and $17,000 is for raises for non-union administrative staff.

The budgets for the proposed new department responsible for traffic, parking, fire alarms and streetlights as well as the Fire Department and Department of Public Works were approved at the June 8 meeting.

The Traffic, Parking, Alarm and Lighting Department's budget was approved in an 8-1 vote, with Finn opposed.

The $2.59 million department's budget includes two new positions: a director who will make $98,623 and an administrative assistant who will make $52,650. Mike Coffey, presently the business manager for the Department of Public Works, will be appointed as head of the department. The remainder of the personnel in the TPAL Department will transfer in from the DPW and the fire alarm division within the Quincy Fire Department.

The Fire and Public Works Departments' budgets were approved unanimously.

The Fire Department's budget will grow from $21.72 million in the current fiscal year to $22.70 million in FY17, even with the transfer of the fire alarm division. The budget includes funding for four new firefighters positions, $300,000 in additional money for overtime, and $70,000 to create a financial manager position.

QUINCY POLICE LT. Dan Minton, Betty Yau of the Mayor's Office and Bonnie Kok of the Greater Boston Chinese Golden Age Center recently hosted a pedestrian safety workshop at Tobin Towers, 80 Clay St. Over 30 elder residents attended the workshop which was informative and interactive. The elders were eager to ask questions. Many learned the important rules particularly in crossing a four-lane street and the essence of safety. The workshop is co-sponsored by the Quincy Housing Authority and the South Shore Elder Services. Several similar workshops are being planned. A schedule with details will be announced soon.

NEON BLUE AND GREEN

Tourmaline is a gorgeous gemstone that comes in a wide variety of colors. One of the most sought after of these colors is the pink-red variety known as "rubellite." Green tourmaline's pastel hues provide pleasing alternatives to emerald's deep, rich green and peridot's softer green. The finest green tourmalines are transparent, brilliant, and clean, with attractive bluish-green hues. Most green tourmalines are "pleochroic," which means that they display attractive colors in both directions, such as bright green in one and blue in another. As beautiful as these gemstones are, perhaps the most intriguing type of tourmaline is the Paraíba tourmaline. This exceedingly rare and valuable gemstone glows inside with neon blue, neon blue-green, and other fantastic colors.

Tourmaline stones are pleochroic. This means that you see the deepest color when looking down the length of the crystal. Looking at a tourmaline this way can make a green or blue color seem black, so great care is taken when cutting this stone. For more information, please call Rogers Jewelry at 617-773-3636. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 2, 1839, Africans on the Cuban schooner Amistad rise up against their captors and seize control of the ship, which had been transporting them to a life of slavery on a sugar plantation in Cuba. Despite an international ban, Cuba continued to transport captive Africans until the 1860s.

• On June 28, 1862, Confederates posing as paying passengers make a daring capture of a commercial vessel on Chesapeake Bay. The conspirators planned to use the St. Nicholas to force other Yankee ships into Confederate service.

• On June 30, 1900, four German boats burn at the docks in Hoboken, New Jersey, killing more than 300 people. The combination of old wood, strong winds and fuel-filled cargo sheds made the fire spread very rapidly. The fire was so large that it could be seen throughout the New York City area.

• On June 27, 1940, the Germans set up two-way radio communication employing their most sophisticated coding machine, Enigma, to transmit information. The Germans considered Enigma unbreakable, but the British had broken the code as early as the German invasion of Poland.

• On July 3, 1957, Nikita Khrushchev takes control in the Soviet Union by orchestrating the ouster of his opponents in the government. Khrushchev's action delighted the United States, which viewed him as a more of a moderate.

• On June 29, 1967, blonde bombshell actress Jayne Mansfield is killed instantly when the car in which she is riding strikes the rear of a trailer truck on Interstate 90 east of New Orleans. A thick white fog from a mosquito sprayer may have obscured the truck.

• On July 1, 1979, the first Sony Walkman goes on sale for $150 after a breakneck development phase of only four months. The initial production run of 30,000 units looked overly ambitious when only 3,000 were sold the first month.

Drug Court Graduates Praise Program, Emphasize Importance Of Honesty

'I Am Humble, Sober And Grateful Every Day'

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

It's certainly no secret that substance abuse, related crime rates and drug overdoses are at historic rates in America.

This trend is not lost on Norfolk County, as stated by District Atty. Michael Morrissey at the recent 14th Drug Court Commencement ceremony held at the Francis X. Bellotti courthouse.

Referring to deaths related to opiate addiction, Morrissey said, "When I first became district attorney it was less than one a week, and now it's up to three a week. We recognize that we can't arrest our way out of this problem.

"We are fortunate in Norfolk County that we have a Drug Court, a Veterans' Court and a Mental Health Court because we think it's important to treat the whole person...we do not think incarceration for a number of people is the appropriate choice for making someone a productive member of society."

Morrissey's point is supported by statistics from the U.S. Department of Justice, which link the use of drugs with crime, as drug users may not participate in the legitimate economy and are frequently exposed to situations which encourage crime.

Drug Court Justice MaryBeth Heffernan welcomed the roomful of counselors, probation officers, attorneys, social workers, families and legislators, including state Sen. John Keenan and state Reps. John Rogers and Tackey Chan.

Mayor Thomas Koch praised the work of the court and the commitment of the graduates: He addressed the 11 graduates directly: "Look around this room...this is a room full of support...we're all here today to acknowledge your work."

The mayor also acknowledged the work of Quincy's Substance Abuse Task Force which "brings together folks from schools, law enforcement, non-profits, folks in the trenches, police, and share information to come up with great strategies to continue to work this very difficult issue."

Four of the graduates were able to speak at the ceremony, and each expressed deep gratitude for the opportunity to enroll in Quincy's Drug Court program as an alternative to incarceration for drug related crimes.

One of the graduates said "I took the drug court to break up my sentence...I really didn't want to stop using drugs. When I was sent to my first [recovery] house I made no effort and got kicked out. The Gavin [Foundation] changed my life. People die out there - I don't want to go back out there...I am humble, sober and grateful every day."

John, another 2016 graduate of the program described a life where he "just couldn't get a day clean" and where drug alternatives just didn't work. "My family used to say 'Just put down the drugs', but that didn't work.

"I had been doing drugs for so long, I forgot how to do 'life.'" John told of his relationship with his son: "I had been in and out of my son's life - he's 8. I wrote a note to him when I was high and told my girlfriend to give it to him after I died...it's not just about getting out of jail - this program saved my life."

Keynote speaker Steven Tolman, former State Senator and now President of the Massachusetts AFL-CIO was described by Justice Heffernan as "a champion of the issue of substance abuse and addiction."

Tolman expressed his pride at seeing success "come out the other side. Look at everybody's face in this room—you can feel the hope, so congratulations, graduates!"

In referring to the widespread use of drugs Tolman said, "It's not an epidemic anymore, it's a pandemic now. This is out of control in our nation and that's why we are so proud of those who have come through the other side."

As an activist trying to fight the substance abuse struggle Tolman pointed to the "300 million prescriptions put out every year" as what has created this situation. "It wasn't your fault—this stuff is too powerful for the human brain. And to have the heart of Quincy court...Quincy was doing it right—not everybody got these chances.

"I stand before you today and I tell you, we as a nation have to stand up to 'Big Pharma.' These drugs that they put out shouldn't be out. My generation, and Mike Morrissey's, grew up without these pills and we survived and we got through our pain.

"The FDA has made a big mistake that has cost us 20 years—since 1996 we have been struggling with this carnage, the heartache on every single street in Massachusetts."

Tolman warned that if laws and society do not change, "What is going to be the next 20 years? We have to speak out about these dangerously addictive drugs and bad policies. And this courthouse is doing God's work on Earth!"

A veteran and former graduate of the Drug Court program whose parents were both heroin addicts addressed the room while carrying her two-year-old son in her arms. "I don't know where I would be without this program. I thank the drug court for giving me my life back."

Another of the graduates emphasized the importance of honesty in recovery. He said that 27 years after beginning his alcohol use as a kid, he found himself on the streets of Boston, homeless and wearing a pair of women's jeans he had found on the side of the road.

"If you do something wrong, own it. I learned to be honest with this program. Get honest, reach out for help—if you do this your life will change." Having abandoned his family during this bleak period where he spent some time in jail, this graduate was glad to report that he is "back with my kids' mother now" and a father to his three sons.

The first Drug Court program in New England was initiated in 1995 in an effort to address the rise in criminal offenses, fatalities and substance abuse-related issues amongst probationers and would-be jail prisoners.

Most of Quincy's Drug Court participants have either served or face time in jail. Each must attend a surrender hearing before a judge, complete an inpatient program and spend time as a resident of a Half-Way, or Sober House. Other requirements include frequent drug and alcohol testing, counseling, attendance at meetings, and participation in the Relapse Prevention and Relationships in Recovery groups.

Council Passes $287.56 Million Budget

partment's budget will decrease in the next fiscal year by $700,000 to $5.01 million, because of the transfer of personnel to the TPAL Department.

Finn voted against the TPAL budget, saying the creation of the new department would only add a new director and not more boots on the ground. He was also concerned about potential impacts on union workers being transferred into the department, and objected to the addition of a new department through the budget process.

Finn, though he voted in favor of the overall city budget, voiced displeasure with it. Among the concerns he identified was the fact that budget does not include a breakdown of employees funded through any particular line item.

"We continue to ask for certain things in detail—even in the budget process—something as simple as being able to break down the full-time equivalents so the taxpayer can actually know what it is they're purchasing," Finn said. "And yet, we don't really get that broken out in a budget format at all."

In addition to the new positions created within the TPAL and Fire Departments, the budget also includes a new public buildings commissioner position at a salary of $118,473 as well as funding to hire a third full-time assessor.

The city's allocation to the Quincy Public Schools will increase by $3.16 million to $98.75 million in the new fiscal year. The school system will also receive $3.85 million from state circuit breaker funds, bringing its total budget for FY17 to $102.6 million, up from up from $99.26 million this year.

The school system plans to hire two new full-time teachers, and add part-time positions to create two new programs at North Quincy High—broadcasting and visual design—as well as English language learners at Quincy High, elementary literacy programs, and special needs. Combined, those part-time positions are equivalent to 4.8 full-time employees.

The School Committee was slated to vote on the school budget yesterday (Wednesday).

The council approved the FY17 budget in a special session Wednesday because it had 45 days to pass a budget after Koch submitted his for approval May 2. Had the council not done so, the mayor's original budget would have been enacted as originally proposed.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1920s real photo postcard view of the Tudor Revival style rectory of Saint Ann's Church on Hancock Street in Wollaston. On the right is the lower level sanctuary of the church which was built in 1925. The upper level of the church wasn't built until 1940. While this expensive rectory for the resident priests was built the unhappy parishioners waited over 15 years before the Gothic Revival style granite church was completed. The church's property rising just up over Hancock Street provides a perfect setting to view these two excellent English style buildings. The parish had considered several other locations in Wollaston for their church before this lot became available. They actually purchased the lot on the corner of Woodbine and Hancock Streets now the parking lot for Supreme Liquors before they finally settled on this site. Public Schools Provide Positive Learning Environment

Once again, I had another great school year substitute teaching in the Quincy Public Schools.

This was my third year in my post retirement years after retiring as a police officer for the state Department of Mental Health. It keeps me busy and I feel I have offered my work experience in the classroom helping to motivate students into looking ahead and making goals for the future.

Whenever I had been a substitute teacher in Protective Services, I can relate to the subject and add some actual antidotes along the way.

However, even in automotive I can add my two cents always telling students if auto mechanic is not in your future, remember to pick a good mechanic because picking the right one is like picking your doctor.

I have also discovered that learning always happens no matter how old one gets. Even I learn new things along the way.

My job as substitute teacher also shows me just how great today's students are. Quincy Public Schools provide a good education and a positive learning environment.

Finally, I believe the City of Quincy has a first rate, state-of-the-art, Quincy High School building.

Learning happens everyday. It has great teachers who inspire great things from their students and get it.

I will return in the September of my life as I believe Frank Sinatra once crooned.

Support Strengthening Elder Abuse Laws

World Elder Abuse Awareness Day (WEAAD) is June 15th.

Once a year, communities around our country and the world plan activities and programs to share information and spread awareness about abuse, neglect, and exploitation in later life. Many elderly adults are abused in their own homes, in relatives' homes, at the hands of their guardians and in facilities responsible for their care.

If you suspect that an elderly person is at risk from a neglectful or overwhelmed caregiver, or being preyed upon financially, it's important to speak up.

Over 10 years ago, a hearing before the Special Committee on Aging of the United States Senate, reported that "one out of every four Americans will be a victim of elder abuse, neglect, or exploitation at some point. We know that somewhere between 500,000 to 5 million seniors are abused every year, and further, we also know that the reported abuse is only really the tip of the iceberg, since 84 percent is the estimate of elder abuse believed to go completely unreported. Clearly the Congress and the Nation must find some innovative solutions that will protect our greatest generation from abuse." Not much has happened since.

We have made great strides in protecting children and animals from abuse, and strengthened the deterrents and punishments for those who break the law with impressive alacrity (think of Justice for Puppy Doe), but our legislation has lagged on protecting our elderly. It only took about a year after a huge public outcry under the Puppy Doe bill to increase a sentence for a first offense to seven years from five, and subsequent penalties up to ten years. Fines also increased to $5,000 from $2,500 for a first offense and up to $10,000 for subsequent offenses. We need a similar public outcry for our seniors.

Elder abuse goes beyond physical mistreatment. It includes psychological and emotional abuse and neglect. The most prevalent form of abuse is financial exploitation. We need to support a comprehensive public health and law enforcement approach dedicated to fighting elder abuse with scarce resources and fragmented systems.

State Rep. Bruce Ayers, who serves on the Joint Committee on Elder Affairs, has filed Bill 514 to DEPENDABLE CLEANERS recently kicked off the 18th year of its Read to Ride program at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy. Christa Hagearty, president of Dependable Cleaners and children's author Janet Costa Bates met with members of the YMCA for a fun afternoon. Costa Bates (above) read through her picture book, 'Seaside Dream' as well as an enjoyable poem. Hagearty and Costa Bates interacted with the children, taking questions and discussing reading and writing. The kids and staff of the Y enjoyed the visit. The Read to Ride program is designed to encourage students to continue with their reading during the summer months. Students ages 6-15 have the chance to win a bike or an exciting prize for every book they read. By submitting an entry form, each child is entered to win each week. Since the program's inception in 1999, more than 72,000 books have been read.

ENC Play Accepted Into NY Theater Festival

An original play conceived, produced and directed at Eastern Nazarene College has been accepted into the New York City International Fringe Festival.

"The Bible Women's Project" was selected out of 4,000 submitted scripts to be one of the 200 theatrical and dance performances presented at the festival, which is considered to be one of the largest multi-arts festivals in North America. The play will be presented in Manhattan five times between Aug. 12 and Aug. 28.

Specific performance dates and times will be available on the festival's website at www.fringenyc.org.

"To be accepted into this is a huge deal," said Director and ENC alumna Tara Brooke Watkins, who conceived of the idea for a play exploring the stories of women of the Bible as seen through the eyes of contemporary female college students. "There are two major festivals in the world that bring together new plays that are considered 'fringe' – or non-commercial – and help them get seen by producers: the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland and the Fringe NYC Festival."

"Not only will our show be seen by major producers, but our cast will be exposed to some cutting edge theater themselves for two weeks."

Watkins said the idea of first applying for the festival came from ENC staff member Lauren Bowen, who once worked for the festival. After compiling and submitting all the required application materials – including a copy of the script, a video and a personal essay – Watkins received notification that "The Bible Women's Project" had been selected as an alternate.

"This was not the news I wanted, but at the same time I felt the show had been recognized as good and I was prepared to accept that as our happy ending," she said.

Watkins began rehearsing the play for a performance at a local church, and in late May, received news that the play had officially been accepted into the festival.

'My Dearest Friend' At Adams Historical Park July 2

Adams National Historical Park announces a free showing of My Dearest Friend: A Song Cycle for Soprano, Baritone, and Orchestra on the grounds of Adams National Historical Park. On July 2, at 2 p.m. hear the moving letters of Abigail and John Adams set to music on the very grounds where many of these letters were composed.

For the first 20 years of their marriage, Abigail and John Adams spent half of it apart. The result was a correspondence of over 1,000 letters highlighting the personal sacrifices each made, as well as their views on the American Revolution and the presidency.

Composer Patricia Leonard was inspired to set some of these letters to music to highlight the bond Abigail and John had, and to highlight the extraordinary influence Abigail had over John, and ultimately the shaping of the nation.

My Dearest Friend is free and open to the public.

The performance will take place under the tent at the Beale House, 181 Adams St., Quincy. There is limited street parking.

A free trolley from the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center (1250 Hancock St.) will also drop off at the location.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of the second and sixth presidents of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, along with the Old House at Peace field, home to both presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

During the open season, April 19 through November 10, tickets to the historic homes can be purchased at the Visitor Center located at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy. A free park trolley transports visitors from the Visitor Center to the Birthplaces and the "Old House at Peace field" for a two and a half hour tour. The first tour leaves at 9:15 a.m. and the last tour leaves at 3:15 p.m., seven days a week including federal holidays.

Tickets are $10 for adults (children 15 and under are free) and sold on a first-come, first-served basis.

Independence Day Events At Adams National Historical Park

The public is invited to the Adams National Historical Park for a "Continental Congress" on July 4th that will debate, defend, compromise, and consider the meaning of independence.

Experience history through the performing arts as the Park salutes two of our nation's most celebrated Founding Fathers, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson and Founding Mother, Abigail Adams, in the stage play: Jefferson and Adams, by Howard Ginsberg.

Lend your voice to liberty as the Declaration of Independence is read, right outside and below the room that John Adams took his last breath on July 4, 1826, the Jubilee Anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

Celebrate the 240th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence at the home of one of the men who helped to write it! This annual tradition has brought thousand to take part in the celebration. The July 4, 2016 activities include:

Independence Forever: The Continental Congress
2 to 3:30 p.m.

The Carriage House
135 Adams St., Quincy

Become a delegate to the Second Continental Congress and re-enact the passage of the Declaration of Independence in the Adams

Carriage House. This interactive and engaging event is an invitation to adults and children to take part in the debate about whether to remain loyal to the British crown, or to create a new nation!

The Reading of the Declaration of Independence
3:30 to 4 p.m.

Join the delegates at John Adams's Old House at Peace field and lend your voice to the ceremonial reading of the Declaration of Independence!

Jefferson & Adams: A Stage Play
4 to 6 p.m.

The Beale House
181 Adams St., Quincy

Witness a compelling dramatization of the friendship between John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and Abigail Adams. Colonial Williamsburg reenactors Bill Barker and Abigail Schumann join actor Sam Goodyear in bringing to life the fifty-year relationship – often contentious, sometimes turbulent, and ultimately enduring – of this dynamic trio who hold forth on life, love, and loss in their now famous correspondence. The play will take place under the tent at the neighboring Beale House.

The day's events are free and open to the public.

There is limited street parking. A free trolley from the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center (1250 Hancock Street) will be available. Validated parking is located on the 4th and 5th floors in the Galleria Parking Garage.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open House Saturday

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark located at the corner of Butler Road and Hancock Street will be open for public tours Saturday between 11 a.m. 3 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour, beginning at 11 a.m. The last tour begins at 2:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Dating from 1686, the house is 330 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. The homestead was the child home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead is operated by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation.

Groups may request a private tour by calling 617-742-3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org. More information can be found online at the homestead's website, nscdama.org.

Easy Boston Cream Pie

By MARIE

I always like to have something baked in the house in case of unexpected guests or if any of my kids drop in. Usually it is apple pie (their favorite) or some kind of cake to have with our coffee or tea.

After looking over some of my old recipes I found today's recipe for Boston Cream Pie. I love the cream filling that goes with this recipe as it is one my mother used to use to fill cream puffs instead of whipped cream.

RECIPE

1/2 cup butter (1 stick)
1 cup of sugar
2 eggs beaten
2 cups of cake flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 tsp salt
2/3 cup of milk

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Melt butter and add the sugar, mix until well blended. Add the eggs and mix again. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk and mix for two minutes.

Pour into two greased 8-inch layer cake pans. Bake for 20 minutes or until tooth pick comes out clean. Turn out on cake racks and let cool.

RECIPE FOR CREAM FILLING

1/2 cup sugar
2 1/2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup of milk
1 egg beaten
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

In a saucepan mix the sugar, flour and salt. Add 1/4 cup of the milk and stir until smooth. Add the rest of the milk and cook on low heat until thickened. Slowly add the eggs and cook for two more minutes, add the vanilla and cool.

Put the creamed filling in the center of the two cakes. Top with powdered sugar or shredded coconut. P.S. Cake can be frosted with a chocolate frosting.

Almond Flour Muffins

By SUZIE

Here is a very, very simple recipe that is made with just a few ingredients taken from a wonderful baker named Elena from Elena's pantry. She is on a special low carb diet and only uses almond or coconut flour for her baked goods.

This muffin is very versatile. You can add in berries or whatever you like. Basically this is a "basic" muffin recipe, just using almond flour and not wheat flour, high in protein and fiber. Make sure you get "blanched" almond flour because the unblanched is too heavy and oily. I like the Honeyville brand the best. This brand is only sold online, but worth it. It is very light and fluffy and produces a far better baked good.

RECIPE

Crusted Fried Ice Cream

By MARIE

With summer almost upon us (finally) most of us I am sure will be enjoying some kind of ice cream treat, such a favorite for all.

Today's recipe is a repeat I have to admit, but one my granddaughter, Hannah, frequently makes. You will find it so easy and everyone will love this treat.

RECIPE

5 to 6 scoops of vanilla ice cream
1 cup or so of crushed Corn Flakes
1 cup of crushed graham crackers
1 beaten egg
Vegetable oil for frying

1 cup of caramel sauce which you will heat for the topping

Place Corn Flake crumbs and graham crumbs on a paper plate or aluminum foil and blend together for the crust. Instead of Corn Flake crumbs that come prepared, it is best to crush the Corn Flakes for a better crust and the same goes for the graham crackers.

First, heat the oil in a skillet, scoop the ice cream, and roll it in the beaten egg and then the corn flake and graham cracker mixture. Sauté quickly turning until golden brown and serve with the heated caramel sauce.

School Committee Recognizes National Honor Society Members

By TOM GORMAN

The city's two high school National Honor Society members were recently honored by the school committee.

As their fellow members looked on, two seniors each from North Quincy High School and Quincy High explained the four pillars of the society — service, character, leadership and scholarship. Following the presentation, the committee presented certificates of recognition to each member of both schools' honor society.

In order to become a member of the National Honor Society, students must have a grade point average of at least 3.8. Additionally, students must excel in the four pillars.

North Quincy High's Han Truong spoke about the importance of service to the community.

"We continue to volunteer our time, talent and ability to create a better today," he said.

Regarding leadership, Dalia Sadaka, of North

Quincy High, said that students "should take the initiative" to be role models within the school community and demonstrate how to be a problem solver.

Quincy High's Vivian Zou said scholarship is more than getting good grades, it's about always "doing your best work and bringing out our full potential."

"The quest for knowledge is an intrinsic value," she said.

Zou noted that incoming juniors to the honor society must now have at least a 4.0 grade.

"We're now raising the bar," she said.

Parawat Chang of Quincy High explained that a person's character "is what separates you from the rest."

"You demonstrate your individual character through being a role model," he said. "Some people need a guiding light in their lives. Time and character will be tested by morals."

The National Honor Society, founded in 1921, is a national organization that honors outstanding students. Members are required to perform some type of service in the community as well as in school. There are about one million members nationwide.

In another matter, the committee appointed Erin Perkins as the new director of special education for the district. She is replacing Judy Perkins who is retiring at the end of June.

Perkins has served as the school system's director of elementary curriculum and programs since 2015. She is a Quincy High School graduate and earned a BA degree and a Master's degree in special education from Eastern Nazarene College.

She was a special education teacher and served as special education team administrator and the coordinator of prekindergarten, literacy, Title 1 and Gifted Programs prior to her position as elementary curriculum director. Todd will remain on through the end of June to help Perkins with the transition.

Library Bookstore Summer Specials

The Crane Library Bookstore, approaching its fifth year of operation, is offering some bargain summer specials.

All fiction books, including the ever-popular mysteries and science fiction, are on a buy-one-get-one-free of equal or lesser value special through the summer. Hard-cover books sell for $2 and paperbacks for $1. All books are in gently-used condition.

And next month the shop is hosting a "Christmas in July" special, featuring various holiday choices in print and entertainment media for both adults and children.

In addition to a large selection of non-fiction, the bookstore also stocks a variety of DVD's, CD's, videos and audio-books. Foreign language and reference material is available, as is a selection of children's and young adult books and videos.

The shop is open on Thursday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and has its own separate entrance on Spear Street, in the rear of the Thomas Crane Public Library across from Bethany Congregational Church.

Sponsored and managed by volunteers for The Friends of the Crane Library, 100 percent of the bookstore's proceeds are used to fund the many community programs at the library, including lectures, concerts, film screenings, museum passes, and a variety of special events for children.

The Basics of Myasthenia Gravis

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Myasthenia gravis is a chronic autoimmune neuromuscular disease distinguished by varying degrees of weakness of the voluntary muscles of the body.

Characteristically myasthenia gravis is muscle weakness that increases during periods of activity and improves after periods of rest. Certain muscles such as those that control eye and eyelid movement, facial expression, chewing, talking, and swallowing are often involved in the disorder. The muscles that control breathing and neck and limb movements may also be affected.

Myasthenia gravis is caused by a defect in the transmission of nerve impulses to muscles. It occurs when normal communication between the nerve and muscle is interrupted at the neuromuscular junction, the place where nerve cells connect with the muscles they control. Normally when impulses travel down the nerve, the nerve endings release a neurotransmitter substance called acetylcholine which binds to receptors to generate a muscle contraction.

In myasthenia gravis, antibodies block, alter, or destroy these receptors, which prevent the muscle contraction from occurring. These antibodies are produced by the body's own immune system. Myasthenia gravis is an autoimmune disease because the immune system, which normally defends the body from foreign organisms, mistakenly attacks itself.

In adults with myasthenia gravis, the thymus gland remains large and is abnormal. The thymus gland, which sits in the chest area beneath the breastbone, plays an important role in the development of the immune system in early life. Scientists believe the thymus gland may give incorrect instructions to developing immune cells, ultimately resulting in autoimmunity and setting the stage for the attack on neuromuscular transmissions.

Although myasthenia gravis may affect any voluntary muscle, muscles that control eye and eyelid movement, facial expression, and swallowing are most frequently affected. The onset of the disorder may be sudden and symptoms often are not immediately recognized as myasthenia gravis.

In most cases, the first noticeable symptom is weakness of the eye muscles. In others, difficulty in swallowing and slurred speech may be the first signs. The degree of muscle weakness involved in myasthenia gravis varies, ranging from a localized form limited to eye muscles to a severe or generalized form in which many muscles, sometimes including those that control breathing are affected.

Symptoms, which vary in type and severity, may include a drooping of one or both eyelids (ptosis), blurred or double vision due to weakness of the muscles that control eye movements, unstable or waddling gait, a change in facial expression, difficulty in swallowing, shortness of breath, impaired speech and weakness in the arms, hands, fingers, legs, and neck.

Myasthenia gravis occurs in all ethnic groups and both genders. It most generally affects young adult women (under 40) and older men (over 60), but it can occur at any age. Myasthenia gravis in juveniles is uncommon. Myasthenia gravis is not directly inherited nor is it contagious. Occasionally, the disease may occur in more than one member of the same family.

Because weakness is a common symptom of many other disorders, the diagnosis of myasthenia gravis is often missed or delayed in people who experience mild symptoms. The first steps of diagnosing myasthenia gravis include a review of the individual's medical history, and physical and neurological examinations. The physician looks for impairment of eye movements or muscle weakness without any changes in the individual's ability to feel things. If the doctor suspects myasthenia gravis, several tests are available to confirm the diagnosis.

A special blood test can detect the presence of immune molecules or acetylcholine receptor antibodies. The edrophonium test uses intravenous administration of edrophonium chloride to very briefly relieve weakness in people with myasthenia gravis. Other methods to confirm the diagnosis include a version of nerve conduction study which tests for specific muscle "fatigue" by repetitive nerve stimulation. Single fiber electromyography (EMG) can also reveal impaired nerve-to-muscle transmission.

EMG measures the electrical potential of muscle cells when single muscle fibers are stimulated by electrical impulses. Muscle fibers in myasthenia gravis, as well as other neuromuscular disorders, do not respond as well to repeated electrical stimulation compared to muscles from normal individuals.

Diagnostic imaging of the chest, using CT or MRI, may be used to visualize the thymus. Pulmonary function testing, which measures breathing strength, also may be used to predict whether respiration may fail.

There are several therapies available to help reduce and improve muscle weakness. Medications used to treat the disorder include anticholinesterase agents which help improve neuromuscular transmission and increase muscle strength and immunosuppressive drugs to improve muscle strength by suppressing the production of abnormal antibodies. Their use must be carefully monitored by a physician because they may cause major side effects.

Thymectomy, the surgical removal of the thymus gland reduces symptoms in some individuals and may cure some people, possibly by re-balancing the immune system. Another therapy used to treat myastenia gravis includes plasmapheresis. A neurologist will determine which treatment option is best for each individual depending on the severity of the weakness, which muscles are affected, and the individual's age and other related medical problems.

With treatment, most individuals with myasthenia can significantly improve their muscle weakness and lead normal or nearly normal lives. Some cases of myasthenia gravis may go into remission, either temporarily or permanently, and muscle weakness may disappear completely so that medications can be discontinued.

Stable, long-lasting complete remissions are the goal of thymectomy and may occur in about 50 percent of individuals who undergo this procedure. In a small number of cases, the severe weakness of myasthenia gravis may cause respiratory failure, which requires immediate emergency medical care.

Much has been learned about myasthenia gravis in recent years. Technological improvements have led to more timely and accurate diagnosis, and new and enhanced therapies have improved management of the disorder.

'Remember The Ladies' Friday At United First Parish

The History and Visitors Program at United First Parish Church, Church of the Presidents will hold its annual "Remember the Ladies" ceremony commemorating the lives of First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams at 5 p.m. on Friday, June 17th in conjunction with Discover Quincy's Art Walk Friday in Quincy Center.

This year's ceremony will feature speakers Caroline Keinath, deputy superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park and Sara Martin, editor in chief of the Adams Papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society, as well as a welcome and opening remarks from from Church President Brenda Reed.

The program will culminate with a procession to the tombs of the First Ladies, led by Quincy First Lady Christine Koch.

Programmatic partners Quincy Historical Society and the Abigail Adams Historical Society will present pop-up exhibits of artifacts from their collections just outside of the Adams Crypt.

The Adams Crypt and Church Sanctuary will be open to visitors from the end of the ceremony until 8 p.m. as a part of Art Walk Friday.

Abigail Adams, courtesy of historical reenactor Pat Bridgman, will be on site for visitors to speak with throughout the evening.

Admission to the "Remember the Ladies" ceremony, the Adams Crypt and Church Sanctuary are free. Donations to support the History and Visitors Program are greatly appreciated.

Tiffany Leung Completes Research Project

Tiffany Leung of Quincy, a member of the class of 2017 majoring in computer science at Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI), recently completed an intense, hands-on research project in Worcester, England. The project was titled Repair Cafe II.

At WPI, all undergraduates are required to complete a research-driven, professional-level project that applies science and technology to addresses an important societal need or issue. About two-thirds of students complete a project at one of the university's more than 40 off-campus project centers, which are located around the world.

The project-based curriculum offers students the opportunity to apply their scientific and technical knowledge to develop thoughtful solutions to real problems that affect the quality of people's lives and make a difference before they graduate.

Granite Geology, Stone Splitting At Lyons Turning Mill June 18

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will hold a geology of Quincy granite presentation and a granite splitting demonstration Saturday, June 18 at 2 p.m. at the historic Lyons Turning Mill, Quarry Hills Drive, West Quincy.

The geology presentation will be given by museum member Les Tyralla, a registered geologist who has a broad background in the science of earth geology. Tyralla will discuss what is Quincy granite, what made Quincy granite, where did Quincy granite come from, how Quincy granite got here and what uncovered Quincy granite along with many other interesting facts about the geology of Quincy granite.

After the attendees learn about the geology of Quincy granite there will be a demonstration on the splitting of granite. The demonstration will include a short presentation on the splitting of stone and a hands-on splitting of granite by the attendees.

Safety equipment will be supplied by the museum.

For more information call the museum at 617-472-1322.

Squantum Point Park Tour June 25

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program invites the public to a free tour of Squantum Point Park at low tide on Saturday, June 25 at 9:30 a.m.

Join coastal citizen scientist Peter Fifield to explore tide pools, search for great piddocks, learn about a "sunken forest" and inspect the remnants of a 1940 era cofferdam - built to create the runway for the Squantum Naval Air Station - being dismantled by Mother Nature.

Bring water and wear shoes that can get wet and muddy. Meet at the shelter by the Squantum Point Park parking lot. From Quincy Shore Drive, turn right on to East Squantum Street, then left on to Victory Road in Marina Bay. Proceed straight through the first rotary. Take the next left on to the Haul Road to enter the park.

Granite Partners With Quincy Police Lieutenant To Raise Funds To Help Fund A Cure For ALS

Granite Telecommunications, LLC, a provider of communications solutions to businesses, raised $5,726 for ALS ONE, a Hanover-based nonprofit organization committed to finding a treatment for amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) within the next four years and improving the care for people diagnosed with the disease.

Granite became involved with ALS ONE after Quincy Police Lt. Kevin Tobin reached out to the company with news that his father, retired Quincy police officer Timothy Tobin, had recently been diagnosed with ALS.

Not long after learning of his father's diagnosis, Lt. Tobin and the Tobin family were connected with ALS ONE, a partnership of many of the best ALS scientists and clinicians from top Massachusetts institutions, including Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH), UMass Medical School, ALS Therapy Development Institute and Compassionate Care ALS.

Lt. Tobin knew of Granite's weekly fundraisers and charitable work in the community, and so he approached the company for help in supporting his family's efforts to combat ALS with ALS ONE. Less than a week later Lt. Tobin was invited to Granite's headquarters to tour the building with Granite teammates and raise money and awareness for his cause.

"My family is incredibly grateful to Granite Telecommunications for their support of ALS ONE," said Lt. Kevin Tobin of the Quincy Police Department. "We have seen first-hand how devastating the disease of ALS is and we are working with ALS ONE to help raise funds for critical research and care."

ALS ONE was founded by Hanover resident Kevin Gosnell, a husband, father of three and small business owner, after he was diagnosed with ALS in May 2015. He immediately put to use the skills he cultivated as a CEO to create a new business that gathers the best minds in the ALS community to work together towards achieving their common goal of finding a cure for the disease.

"I have always believed in the power of a team and that is the foundation for ALS ONE, uniting the best minds to work together to help expedite progress to eliminating the disease and providing needed care for those suffering," said Kevin Gosnell, founder of ALS ONE and person living with ALS. "We are extremely grateful to Granite and the Tobin family for their contributions to ALS ONE that will help us towards our goal of funding critical research and care."

Houghs Neck Garden Club Celebrates 10th Anniversary Saturday

The Houghs Neck Garden Club will celebrate its 10th anniversary Saturday, June 18.

Friends and neighbors are invited to celebrate with club members at a free event at Nut Island from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The garden club was started by a group of neighbors who had for years been part of the Community Action Committee working with the MWRA to transform Nut Island from a blight on the community to a picturesque park that is now home to wildflowers, grasses and walking trails with spectacular 360 degree views of Boston Harbor.

In addition to refreshments, raffle and boutique the club will offer walking tours of the island with a master gardener, short talks on significant Nut Island events including the testing of ordnance in the 1860s and 1870s that was instrumental in the defense of the United States and the breaking up of large steamships from 1885-1903 that resulted in some Houghs Neck cottages being built from the parts; and internal tours of the facility (note: elevators are not working so be prepared for lots of stairs).

At HNGC meetings, members meet to exchange ideas and enhance their gardening knowledge and skills through attending workshops and talks given by visiting experts. At the same time, new friendships are born and old ones strengthened or rekindled.

The HNGC also strives to serve the community in other ways and was proud to initiate a scholarship to be awarded to high school seniors from Houghs Neck accepted for higher education study in the fields of horticulture, environmental studies, or related fields.

<http://hngc123.wix.com/houghsneckgardenclub/>

In 2005, the neighbors who had worked so hard for so many years to transform Nut Island from a blight on the community to a beautiful park held a Wildflower Festival to celebrate the restoration of Nut Island. This group of neighbors formed the Houghs Neck Garden Club.

$10.3 Million For Roads, Vehicles Gets Initial OK

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee on Monday approved borrowing more than $10.3 million to repair major and neighborhood roads and purchase new vehicles, including a pair of fire engines and a dozen marked and unmarked police cruisers — items Mayor Thomas Koch sought as the first part of his new five-year capital plan.

The finance committee did not vote on an additional nine items included in the capital plan at a combined cost of $9 million — including $3 million for building improvements and $2 million for new school technology and software upgrades. The committee also did not consider a request to repurpose more than $1 million in unexpended funds from previously completed capital projects to repair the roof of the City Hall annex and upgrade the gymnasium at North Quincy High School.

Those items will be considered June 27 — the final meeting before the council recesses for the summer. The full council must also approve the money for road repair and new vehicles that night.

The committee voted 9-0 in favor of the $5 million that would be spent on road and sidewalk repair.

Chris Walker, the mayor's director of policy and information, said $2 million would go towards major roads with the remaining $3 million spent on neighborhood streets; the administration would use input from ward councillors to identify neighborhood streets in need of repair.

"The ward councillors, we believe, are truly the boots on the ground when it comes to identifying streets in need of reconstruction," Walker said. "Our engineering team will be working closely with the council and other stakeholders as we move forward."

Walker said the administration hopes to continue with the road repairs after the $5 million bond is spent. Koch, he explained, is considering including money for road reconstruction projects in future city budgets, or identifying other funding sources to pay for the work, as opposed to borrowing the money in the future.

Public Works Commissioner Daniel Raymondi said the mayor would have final say in determining which roads are repaired, but identified three major thoroughfares in need of work: Quincy Avenue, Burgin Parkway and Willard Street.

The $5 million bond, Raymondi said, would supplement the $2 million Quincy will receive in Chapter 90 money from the state for roadwork this summer. Some of the work funded by the bond might not begin until the spring of 2017.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, the chairman of the finance committee who previously authored a resolution seeking more money for road repair, welcomed the $5 million bond.

"I'm very happy to see we're starting to get real about roads, because the reliance on a funding source outside the city is tough," Croall said. "There is a lot of infrastructure to maintain. It's nice to see us take the first step in addressing the need across the city. There is a lot of work to be done."

Councillor Joseph Finn said the city should use more objective measures than input from ward councillors to determine which neighborhood roads are repaired.

"That's how in the past we've sat and watched some of the same streets get done over and over and over again," Finn said. "If you're putting forward the premise that political consideration is better than solid asset management in terms of keeping infrastructure intact, I'd suggest just the opposite."

"That's not to say ward councillors' input into perennial problems isn't important, but one would think that when we're coming up with this number of $5 million that some thought has been given as to how we can get the most out of that particular investment."

The $5.33 million for new equipment includes money for two new fire engines, a dozen police cruisers, school buses and vehicles for the Department of Public Works, Park Department, Council on Aging and Recreation Department.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron said his department plans to purchase a pair of fire engines for $575,000 each that would take about 10 months to put into service, as well as a transport van.

The two new fire engines would be stationed at the Fire Department headquarters and the West Quincy firehouse, replacing Engines 1 and 5, respectively. Those engines, both purchased in 2005, would then be moved to Squantum and Houghs Neck to replace engine trucks Barron said were purchased in 1988 and 1989. Those engines would be kept as spares; the Fire Department has two spare engines, from 1984 and 1985.

The city plans to spend $485,000 on the new police cruisers, according to Al Grazioso, Koch's director of operations. Six would be marked and six unmarked.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said the six Ford Explorers that would be purchased as marked cruisers would serve as front-line patrol vehicles for about two years, after which they would be moved to other units such as the Community Police or Special Operations. The unmarked cruisers are meant to serve as replacements for model year 2000 and 2003 vehicles the department currently uses.

The Police Department also plans to purchase a prisoner transport van at an estimated cost of $75,000. Keenan said the department's current transport van is from 1999.

The new school vehicles include two large buses, five minibuses and a wheelchair

Council Approves New TPAL Department

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council has paved the way for the creation of a new department responsible for traffic, parking, fire alarms and streetlights.

The council's finance committee voted 8-1 on June 8 to approve the budget for the Traffic, Parking, Alarm and Lighting Department Mayor Thomas Koch had proposed creating when he introduced his spending plan for fiscal year 2017, which begins July 1. The entire $287.56 million city budget was then approved unanimously that night during a special session of the full council.

The $2.59 million TPAL budget includes positions being transferred in from the Public Works Department and the Fire Department. Also included is a new director's position at a salary of $98,623 — Mike Coffey, currently the DPW's business manager, will be appointed to lead the new department — and a $52,650 administrative assistant position.

Coffey said he planned to take a systematic approach to addressing the matters falling under the department's purview, including traffic and parking woes.

"We've got a lot of issues and we really want to go at it systematically, put together plans, implement those plans, and then measure our success against those plans," he told the council.

Coffey told the councillors he would be the single point of contact for the department, available around the clock. He also plans to provide the councillors with regular progress reports, and go before the council for a review of the department's work in six months.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said the city's traffic operations have gotten worse since the previously independent Traffic Department was folded into the DPW in November 2012.

As one example, he said the traffic signal at the intersection of Burgin Parkway and Centre Street — near the entrance to Crown Colony as well as Route 3 — had been down for two weeks with the city unable to fix it.

"Here we are talking about spending $138 million on the infrastructure improvements to bring people downtown – we can't get the lights that let you into the city to work. It's embarrassing. It's embarrassing to be the ward councillor that we can't get that done and I've got to tell people 'I don't know,'" Palmucci said.

"I think no one will argue that there aren't problems. Why is it the way it is?"

Coffey said there were a number of reasons why the issue has gotten worse.

Staffing within the traffic department, he said, was not at the level it should have been, because of vacancies, changes within the organization, and employees being out because of illnesses.

Development within the city, Coffey added, has also led to traffic problems; a citywide traffic and parking study proposed as part of the mayor's proposed capital improvement plan (CIP) could help address that issue.

"You bring more people into the city and more development into the city you have more traffic issues to deal with, and I'm not sure we've dealt with them as well as we could," Coffey said.

"I think we're going to address some of that in the CIP program. The mayor feels that we should really be looking at a citywide traffic flow study."

Additionally, the city's current traffic signal management system, which would allow traffic personnel to alter signals remotely, has gone unused. Coffey said he was unsure why it is no longer in use, but said the system is from 1997 and cannot run on computers built after 2003. Some of the lines that connect the management system with the traffic signals have also been cut.

"It think that's fundamental – especially in this day and age," Coffey said of a replacement system that could be included as part of the capital plan. "I think we should have a person sitting there in our offices, taking a look at a trouble spot."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, the chairman of the finance committee, suggested Coffey's new department could work with the police on enforcing the city's residential parking requirements: Quincy does require a permit for parking overnight on city streets, but that has gone largely unenforced.

"Traffic is obviously a big concern...but parking is equally as pressing when we get into some of these neighborhoods. Obviously, we have a residential parking requirement. It might not be enforced, but it's there," Croall said. "That's something you've really got to think about."

Coffey said that requirement is selectively enforced now when problems arise. Being more aggressive about enforcement is something that should be discussed going forward, he said, along with possible changes to the parking requirements.

Councillor Joseph Finn voted against the department's budget.

Finn said he was opposed to the creation of a new city department through the budget process, and said the addition of the department would just create a new director's position.

"This particular proposal offers no new boots on the ground, no new resources – no more than we have presently," Finn said. "It's simply a shift and a change in management that creates a new position – a fairly high paying position – at a time when we should be thinking about trying to move to truly consolidate resources to do things with greater efficiency."

Coffey said the department could grow by hiring more electricians who would be able to handle the different functions within the department – streetlights, fire alarms and traffic signals, among others – in several years.

Chris Walker, Koch's director of policy and information, added the change would free up the electricians working within the alarm division of the Fire Department, allowing them to work in other areas.

Finn also expressed concern that the union employees being transferred into the new department from the Department of Public Works would become ineligible for promotions to higher paying positions, such as foreman, in the DPW, and that their job functions may change without having been properly negotiated.

Helen Murphy, the city's director of human resources, said negotiations with all the unions are ongoing and it had not been determined if the transferred employees would be eligible for promotions in the DPW. Additionally, the 2013 contract with the workers in the fire alarm division allowed for the possibility of them performing work such as streetlight maintenance and other functions the new department will be responsible for.

Finn also noted the city's municipal code requires the fire chief oversee the fire alarm division.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron said that ordinance would need to be changed, but state law allows oversight of the fire alarm division to be delegated to someone other than a community's fire chief.

The finance committee did make one cut to the TPAL budget. The $28,857 line item for fire details was cut entirely, because those expenses will be funded from outside the municipal budget.

$10.3M For Roads, Vehicles

minibus for a combined cost of $500,000, Grazioso said.

New DPW vehicles include two street-sweepers and a pair of snow-fighters as well as dump trucks, backhoes and utility trucks.

The Park Department plans to purchase a log loader and bucket truck in addition to dump trucks and a backhoe.

The Council on Aging plans to purchase six handicapped-accessible wheelchair vehicles, and the Recreation Department boats and a new van.

The $5.3 million for new vehicles was approved in a 7-2 vote, with Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci opposed.

Palmucci said he opposed the $5.3 million bond after Walker informed the council it funded two years worth of vehicle and equipment needs, not one year.

The remaining nine items in the capital plan the council did not vote on Monday include:

- $3 million for the repair and improvement to various city buildings, including schools.

- $1.3 million for the purchase of computers, smartboards and other technology for city schools and $700,000 for software upgrades and the design of technology upgrades through the IT Department.

- $1.4 million for the purchase of two parcels in the vicinity of the William B. Rice Eventide Home at 215 Adams St. to keep them as open space.

- $1 million for traffic signal improvements at major and secondary intersections, and school zones; the money would also be used to put out a request for proposal for a citywide traffic, parking and pedestrian safety study.

- $500,000 for the study, design and engineering of sea walls and flood control projects.

- $500,000 for the study, design and engineering for a new animal shelter as well as improvements to the Mound Street Beach and the Kennedy Center.

- $500,000 for a feasibility study, engineering and preliminary design of a new public safety headquarters that would house the Police and Fire Departments in the vicinity of the current police station.

- $500,000 for the study, design and engineering for the master plan of Merry-mount Park.

- $100,000 for test borings and hazardous materials testing at Sterling Middle School.

Mark Cavanagh, the city's director of municipal finance, said Quincy could afford the $19 million in borrowing included in the first phase of the capital improvement plan. Going forward, he said the city intends to cap its annual debt service payments at 6 to 7.5 percent of the annual general fund budget.

"The policy is a benchmark utilized by cities with the highest credit ratings, and we are below that benchmark now," Cavanagh said. "We will remain below that benchmark next year when this CIP funding is put in place and we will remain below this benchmark in future years after future authorizations."

Standard and Poor's – one of the three major credit rating agencies – has assigned Quincy an AA+ rating, the second highest rating the company gives. Palmucci asked what the impact of the new capital plan would be on the city's credit rating.

Cavanagh replied that the capital plan has already been included into the agencies' current ratings for the city.

"The rating agencies understand you have to make investments in capital assets. It's a very positive thing to do. When it's planned out over a period of time and we discuss it with them ahead of time in ranges, they've built that number into our current credit rating for us," Cavanagh said.

"They believe the CIP is affordable; they expect it, frankly, to be incorporated."

Walker said the initial $19 million sought by Koch represents a "small fraction" of Quincy's entire needs for capital projects, which he said total more than $300 million.

New Admissions Reception Center At Quincy College

Quincy College has built a new "front door" to the college, encouraging the community and prospective students to learn more about programs in a new, state-of-the-art Admissions Reception Center (ARC).

Quincy College Board of Governors and Quincy College President Peter H. Tsafaras, J.D. hosted a grand opening of the new Quincy College Admissions Reception Center Wednesday, June 15 at noon, Presidents Place, Suite 101N, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy.

Presentations and formal ribbon cutting were set for noon followed by light fare until 1:30 p.m.

The event was open to the public.

The ARC occupies a coveted first floor location in Presidents Place located at 1250 Hancock St., in Quincy across from the MBTA Quincy Center T-Station. The 1,700 square foot space includes, among other features, a four screen matrix television presentation wall, designed to present college programs in rich media, tablet computers pre-loaded to assist students in researching programs and/or applying to Quincy College, and ergonomically designed furniture to facilitate greater interaction between Admissions Associates and visitors.

The state-of-the-art Admissions reception center (ARC) is adjacent to the Barnes & Noble at Quincy College Bookstore and will provide visitors to the building an excellent first impression of Quincy College, showcasing two high quality and impressive student service functions.

Block Island Trip July 18

Due to increased demand the Quincy Council on Aging has scheduled another trip to Block Island on Monday, July 18th.

The day trip includes Block Island sightseeing tour, a full course luncheon at the National Hotel with choice of salmon, chicken or seafood cakes, round trip Block Island Ferry and luxury motor coach. There will also be time to browse the shops and enjoy the atmosphere in this elegant and beautiful town.

This trip is for anyone over the age of 60. The cost for the day is $109.

Bus departs from Quincy at 8 a.m. and departs from Block Island at 4 p.m. arriving home at approximately 7 p.m. To sign up for this trip visit the Kennedy Center. Payment is due at sign up.

Hundreds Attend Manet Health's Celebration, Auction

Hundreds of local business, community and legislative leaders, community residents, and patients recently joined the Manet Community Health Center Board of Directors and staff for its Spring Celebration & Auction at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

Dignitaries at the event – the health center's single largest fundraiser of the year – included state Sen. John Keenan, state Rep. Tackey Chan, City Councillors Ian Cain and Nina Liang, and representing Event Sponsor Steward Health Care System, David Morales, executive vice president and chief strategy officer for Steward Health Care System, and Walter Ramos, president of Carney Hospital.

Sen. Elizabeth Warren sent greetings in the form of a special video, which extolled the importance of community health centers. See the video at www.manetchc.org.

A highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Barbara A. Morris Award for Distinguished Service to longtime Manet employee Kathleen Sullivan of Milton, by Manet Board President Joseph Reardon and fellow board member Barbara Morris, for whom the award is named. The Quincy City Council also presented Sullivan with a certificate of recognition for her service to Manet and to the community.

All proceeds from the event will help advance Manet's mission to provide essential health services and programs for patients and families along the South Shore and Greater Taunton communities.

This year's generous sponsors included:

Register O'Donnell Promotes Homestead Act

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds homeowners about filing for Homestead protection. Under Massachusetts law, a Homestead recording provides for limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"Protecting one's primary residence is a key objective for all homeowners," O'Donnell said. "If you own a home and it is your principle residence, one way to protect your home asset is to file a Homestead. The Homestead law also allows the filing of an Elderly Homestead defining elderly as a person who is 62 years of age or older.

"One of the major changes under the 2011 Homestead Law passed by the Massachusetts Legislature is that a valid homestead cannot be terminated when refinancing a mortgage. Another clarification of the statute is that a Homestead can provide protections for a primary home kept in trust."

It is important to note there are certain debts that are exempted from protection under the Homestead Act, such as federal, state and local tax liens, as well as mortgages contracted for the purchase of a primary home and nursing home liens. Most other mortgages, debts, and encumbrances existing prior to the filing of the Declaration of Homestead, along with probate court executions for spousal and child support, are also exempted from Homestead protection.

Homestead recordings can be filed at the Registry of Deeds for a state imposed fee of $36.00. To find out more about the Homestead law, or to get a free application, please go online to the registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"It is important to make clear that a Homestead protects consumers against the forced sale of their primary owned residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000," O'Donnell said. While the debt is still owed, homeowners will at least have the comfort of knowing that with a Homestead filed at the Registry of Deeds, their primary residence cannot be forcibly sold to satisfy most debts."

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior'

My husband and I recently purchased a Spanish colonial home that has been remodeled taking away much of its original charm. What does remain is a beautiful arch and wrought iron door between the living and dining rooms. What can you suggest for interior decorating to return it to its roots? Georgette

Try white or cream stucco walls, wooden beamed ceilings, red terra cotta tile or wide plank wood floors, and dark metal light fixtures including wall sconces. Add dark wood furniture (carved pieces work very well), textured fabrics like brocade, and rich warm colors like cranberry, rust, and mustard (or any hues in the red, orange, and yellow families). Try to repeat the arch shape in your artwork or maybe a mirror. And don't forget the addition of colorful Spanish-style ceramic tiles; try them around your windows instead of woodwork.

I've always wanted a vanity table in my bedroom. I just bought a traditional apron table to serve that purpose. I welcome your ideas for a chair to make a small statement to add to my long-awaited make-up table. Charlotte

Try an armless slipper chair with a ruffled skirt and tufted or quilted seat and back. A similar style is the Victorian lady chair. Even if you choose a solid or simpler, small pattern for the fabric, the shape and details of these chairs will certainly get noticed. As another option, choose a wooden traditional side chair and paint it a color to complement your room's color scheme. Here's a hint on color selection: Choose the third dominant color in your bedspread or window treatment for the paint and try a semi-gloss so the chair gets a little extra attention.

What is the difference between louvers and shutters? Bobbie Louvers are a type of shutter with moveable slats so you can control the level of air and light you allow through the window behind them. There is also louver-style - typically used in doors instead of window treatments - and the louvers are stationary.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution?

Group Aims To Restore Princess Eve Marsh

Quincy Making Waves Coalition (QMWC) has expanded their scope beyond educating residents about the ramifications of the FEMA flood maps, to include environmental issues such as Wollaston's salt marshes. In particular, the group is focused on the deteriorating Princess Eve Marsh (PEM) in the Beechwood Knoll Area.

The Princess Eve Marsh no longer receives the needed salt water from Blacks Creek. In 2011 the City of Quincy, as part of an ongoing maintenance plan, closed the "Flap Valve" at the Fenno Street culvert. This has had a severe impact on the Princess Eve Marsh, QMCW members say. There were reasons for this action, but it is clear that this salt marsh will continue to deteriorate if salt water is not allowed to flow in and out, they say.

The Quincy Making Waves Coalition would like the tide gate (flap valve) at the Fenno Street culvert to be partially opened, as it was, to allow sea water from Blacks Creek to flow in and out of the Princess Eve Marsh. Restoring the natural tidal cycles will flush out the silt that has built up in the ditches, and revive the native salt marsh vegetation.

The life of this marsh depends upon the addition of salt water, which will stunt the aggressive growth of the invasive phragmites, which has taken over even the lower portions of the marsh floor. Phragmites increases the rate of marsh accretion, to a much greater degree than would occur with native marsh vegetation.

Those familiar with the Princess Eve Marsh can see the drastic physical changes that have taken place since this flap has been closed. The view of the Princess Eve Marsh was much like looking across the clear view of marsh at Blacks Creek, that view has been replaced by dense phragmites.

The benefits to tidal flow are that the salt water will minimize the phragmites and begin to lower the marsh floor elevation. Lower elevations increase the marsh's storm water capacity, protecting our homes from flood water during storms. This protection is likely what kept Beechwood Knoll from flooding during the highest recorded water tables in Boston's history; the Blizzard of 78. We need a working marsh for flood control.

Reducing the phragmites, also reduces the serious threat of fire, due to the substantial number of dried out phragmite stalks. And of greatest importance to the entire city, this simple act of allowing fish back in to feed on mosquito larvae reduces the very serious risks associated with mosquito borne illnesses, which we are all concerned about.

The Quincy Making Waves Coalition invites concerned citizens to join them for a presentation called "Princess Eve Marsh: A Status Report" set for Tuesday, June 21 at 7 p.m., in the Ruth Cameron Auditorium, located on the second floor of the Mann Student Center at the Eastern Nazarene College, 23 East Elm St., Wollaston. QMWC looks forward to sharing a brief history of the Princess Eve Marsh, what members say are the issues, along with the many benefits to restoring this marsh land.

The Quincy Making Waves Coalition Marsh Team members are Richard Joyce, John Risitano, Janice Salvucci, Gordon DeCambr, Carol Themmen and Pam Brennan. For more information on the Princess Eve Marsh, contact Richard Joyce at 617-653-9787 or email rjoycequincy@hotmail.com

Environmental Lawyer To Lecture On Gas Pipelines, Alternatives

Does Massachusetts need more natural gas capacity, including controversial projects like the Access Northeast Pipeline and the Fore River compressor station? Or are there safer, cleaner ways to fill our energy needs?

At 7 pm on Monday June 20, Nathan Phillips, a Boston University environmental scientist, and Tyler Soleau, energy and climate outreach director of Acadia Center, which does energy research and advocacy, will address these questions in a lecture at the main branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St. in Quincy Center.

Phillips, an author of some 75 articles in peer-reviewed scientific journals such as the Environmental Science and Technology and Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, will detail his research on leaks in existing gas infrastructure, including the gas distribution pipelines that run beneath the streets of Quincy. Three percent of the natural gas brought into Massachusetts is lost because of leaky distribution pipes, he said in a telephone interview, and because natural gas is mostly methane, a super-potent greenhouse gas, those leaks are to blame for roughly 10 percent of the state's carbon footprint. Leaking natural gas can also cause explosions and contribute to disease, he said.

Expanding pipelines and adding new compressor stations to bring more natural gas to the state is "like putting a new addition on a house with a leaky roof," said Phillips. "The new infrastructure will increase the pressure in distribution pipes, and that is bound to create new leaks and exacerbate existing leaks.... It will cause many nonhazardous sites to become hazardous."

For his part of the lecture, Acadia Center's Tyler Soleau, an environmental lawyer who formerly worked as staff director of the Climate Change Committee of the Massachusetts House, will discuss the state's future energy needs and whether they can best be filled by increasing natural gas capacity.

"I'll be talking about where our energy mix is now, where we need it to be, and why natural gas doesn't need to be a big part of that," he said. Instead, he said, "We can build a future based on efficiency and clean energy."

Officeholders and activists from Quincy and Weymouth "have been fighting a tough battle against Spectra Energy's proposed Fore River Compressor Station," said David Reich, board chairman of Quincy Climate Action Network, a co-sponsor of the lecture, along with Fore River Residents Against the Compressor Station (FRRACS) and the library. "This lecture will arm us with the hard facts we need to continue fighting."

Alice Arena, lead and founder of FRRACS, added that "Spectra's principal claim is that we need this gas, but if they plugged up all the existing leaks, we would actually have more gas than we need." As for Gov. Charlie Baker's proposal to pay for new gas infrastructure by adding a tariff to electric bills, Arena says, "We can't afford to pour money into a dying energy source. We need to pour money into wind, solar, tidal, and other forms of renewable energy."

PASS Realtors Honor Three Members

Realtors and affiliates of the 2,600 member Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors (PASS) recently attended an event at Black Rock Country Club in Hingham to celebrate PASS members who volunteer with the Association and to honor three members with special awards.

The 2016 PASS Realtor® of the Year award was presented to realtor John Heaney of Century 21 Annex in Quincy. Heaney received the award for his contributions to the Association and the real estate profession during the previous year. Heaney serves as a PASS Board of Director, co-chairperson of the Association's Membership and Networking Committee and continually promotes PASS and its programs.

Heaney will represent PASS as a finalist for the Massachusetts Association of Realtors Realtor of the Year. He will be recognized during the MAR annual conference in October.

Jonathan Keener, also of Century 21 Annex in Quincy, received the Realtor of Outstanding Service award which is presented to a PASS Realtor member who has given countless hours of his or her time to PASS over a period of years and has demonstrated volunteerism within the South Shore community.

Keener is chairman of the PASS Community Service Committee, serves as a member of the PASS Government Affairs Committee, and is a PASS and MAR Board of Director. His volunteerism includes helping the homeless; donating to food pantries, and assisting children's organizations.

CONGRATULATIONS JON AND JOHN!

Century 21 Annex Realty, Quincy, is proud to announce that Jonathan Keener (left) and John Heaney (right) received awards from the Plymouth & S. Shore Association of Realtors on June 7, 2016. John Heaney received the 2015 Realtor Of The Year Award and Jonathan Keener received the 2015 ROSA Award for Realtor of Outstanding Service. Congratulations Jon and John!!!

On Sunday, June 5, 2016, at approximately 2:02 p.m., Officers Peter Curley, Steve O'Hare along with Anti-Crime Officers Bill Lanergan and Steve DesRoche were dispatched to the Family Dollar Store located at 1445 Hancock Street for a report of a female chasing a male with a knife.

Upon arrival, Officers DesRoche and Curley observed a female who was very animated - yelling and screaming. The Store Manager pointed at the female and stated, "She is trouble. She has been here for a while giving me and customers a hard time. I have been afraid to call." He then pointed to a male and said, "She just chased him with a knife."

Officer Lanergan checked on the male who was slightly out of breath, uninjured and demanding that the female be arrested. He said that he was exiting the Family Dollar store when, "I slightly bumped into her by accident." Before he could offer an apology, the female turned to him and said, "What the f@#$, you just walked into me, f@#$%^& apologize." The 44 year old male said that he did not want any problems so he started to walk away, but the female started chasing him as she screamed at him, "You mother f@#$%^, you walked into me, f@#$%^& apologize right now." The male was concerned that the female was totally enraged so he walked away faster and it was at this point that the female reached into her pocket and pulled out a double edged folding knife. She opened the knife and ran towards him so he started running as he pleaded for someone to call "911." (He ended up calling himself and the Police arrived moments later)

The Store Manager said he was first drawn to the incident when, "I heard a lot of yelling and screaming and went outside to see exactly what was going on." Although he did not see the chase part of the incident, he said as the Police closed in on the scene, he saw the female take the knife and put it in "that guy's bag over there at the bus stop." He added, "He is holding the knife and hiding it for her." The guy he was referring to was about ten feet away.

Officer Lanergan then asked the male victim if he knew where the knife was and he pointed to the male by the bus stop and said, "Yea she knows him. He has it in that big bag."

At this point, the female suspect was placed in handcuffs by Officer DesRoche. Officers on scene then approached the male by the bus stop and asked him if he knew anything about an incident that just occurred. He denied any knowledge, adding, "I had nothing to do with anything." When told that two people stated they had observed the female suspect place an item into his backpack, this male shook his head and stated, "No, did not happen." Officers then questioned the victim and Store Manager again to make certain what they saw. Separately, they both said that they saw the female place a knife in her bag and then walk over to the male and placed her bag into his backpack. When asked, they both confirmed that the male knew and allowed it to happen.

Based on this information, the Officers on scene removed the bag from the male suspect and opened it. Inside the bag was a lady's purse. As Officer DesRoche removed the bag, he observed a small red mini stun gun labeled, "Little Demon Phx 800 mini stun gun." The male suspect immediately blurted out, "That isn't mine, don't know who's it is." The victim closed in and said, "Yea that's the purse." Officer DesRoche opened the purse and then located a red and black folding knife which was double sided. The victim confirmed that it was the same knife he was chased with. The male suspect was also placed under arrest and transported to the station for booking.

Back at the station in the booking area, Officer Michael Dougan was conducting an inventory of the property in the female suspect's purse and found loose pills that were not in labeled pill bottles, three identifications not in her name, as well as a small amount of what appeared to be class "D". Located were 13 orange pills and 2 white pills identified as Gabapentin, 21 orange pills identified as Suboxone, 5 blue pills identified as Klonopine, one pill identified as an Amphetamine, 2 white pills identified as Benzodiazepam and several other pills that were not controlled substances. Officer DesRoche had used the TruNarc scanner to help identify the pills.

The female suspect, a 29 year old Quincy resident, was charged with charged with, "Assault by means of a dangerous weapon - knife, Carrying a dangerous weapon - double sided knife, Possessing of class "E" (Gabapentin) 94C, two counts of possessing class "C" (Klonopine and Benzodiazepam) 94C, and two counts of possessing class "B" (Suboxone and amphetamine) 94C. The male suspect, a 33 year old Brockton resident, was charged with, "Misleading a police investigation, Carrying a dangerous weapon - double knife and Possession of a stun gun. Nice Work!

FROM "AAA NORTHEAST" June publication: Memorial Day marks beginning of 100 deadliest days for teens:

*Between Memorial Day and Labor Day, nothing kills more people between the ages of 16-20 than car crashes.

*An average of 200 teen drivers and passengers die during this time, an increase of 43% over the rest of the year.

*Speed and distracted driving, especially texting, were leading causes of these accidents.

Quincy Retired Teachers Association Awards 35 Scholarships

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association awarded $71,000 in scholarships to 35 graduating seniors at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools at a recent ceremony held at Central Middle School.

"This ceremony is a highlight of this and every year for retired educators," said Linda Lew Hanson, vice president of the QRTA Scholarship Fund. "We love to see the excellence of the Quincy Public Schools mirrored in the achievements of these wonderful students."

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association, parent organization of the QRTA Scholarship Fund, consists of retired Quincy Public Schools staff, teachers and administrators. The organization was established 35 years ago when it received contributions from the estates of former educators for the purpose of awarding scholarships.

The established trust fund now manages approximately $1.7 million and students receive scholarships from the interest earned. "This contribution to the youth of Quincy from its retired teachers is unique in the Commonwealth," said Kathleen Mitchell, president of the Retired Teachers Association.

Since its inception, the QRTA Scholarship Fund has given over 1,000 scholarships to graduating Quincy High School and North Quincy High School seniors, totaling over $2 million.

"Quincy is very, very lucky to have an organization like the QRTA and their generosity to our students is truly wonderful," said Quincy School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro, who attended the recent ceremony. "Tonight showed once again that Quincy's educators give unselfishly to our children while they work, when they retire and even after they pass away. I am proud to be part of this group."

The QRTA Scholarship Fund presented Scholar-

Bill Dunn Jr. Road Race June 25

The Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 25 in Houghs Neck.

The event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other. This is the 10th year the road race is being held and each year the support and participation is remarkable.

Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a 5-mile run or 2-mile walk beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for 1st Place Male/Female Runner and 1st Houghs Neck Resident Male/Female Runner.

The first 300 people to register will receive a free race T-shirt.

Proceeds from the event benefit the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship which has provided scholarships to Quincy High School students, donations to Childrens Hospital, Manets Youth Football and other local organizations.

The registration fee is $30 for runners; however, for those who sign up before June 20th, the registration fee is $25. The registration fee is $20 for walkers prior to June 20th, after June 20th the fee is $25. Children walking are free.

Registration forms are available on line at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Dr., Quincy, MA 02169. Register also online at www.active.com or www.coolrunning.com.

For more information contact Margaret Dunn at 617-471-9075.

Squantum Road Race July 2

The annual Squantum Road Race, which is part of the annual 4th of July festivities in Squantum, will be held Saturday, July 2nd.

The race is sponsored by state Rep. Bruce Ayers. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Squantum Community Center located at 50 Huckins Ave.

The race will kick off at 10 a.m.

Registration is $20 for adults, and kids age 10 and under run for free.

Trophies and t-shirts will be provided. All proceeds go to the Squantum 4th of July Parade.

For additional information, contact Bruce Ayers at brucej.ayers@yahoo.com.

NQHS Men's Soccer Hall Of Fame

The NQHS Men's Soccer Alumni Committee is slated to select its first Hall of Fame team Nov. 1.

The committee is in the process of gathering as much information possible from the 1960 team to present players.

Although there is an abundance of information regarding certain years, there are many gaps. If any former coaches or players would like to nominate a player email Donovan-bros87@aol.com.

A brief history regarding the player would be very helpful.

Two Residents Receive Connecticut Awards

Two students from Quincy were recently presented awards at the annual Honors & Awards ceremony at Connecticut College.

Kelsey Anne Fischer, a member of the Class of 2017, was presented the John S. King Travel Scholarship. The scholarship is given to a rising sophomore or junior to support intensive summer language study in Germany, in tribute to Professor John S. King, champion of the value of immersion in another language and culture.

Elizabeth Ann Green, Class of 2017, received the Salvatore Stephen Figliome-ni '82 Memorial Art Award. The award is presented to an art major who "savors life and art and inspires a sense of goodness."

Three Graduate Fitchburg State

Three Quincy residents recently graduated from Fitchburg State University.

They are:

Diana R. Cavallo, with a masters of education in curriculum and teaching; Victoria R. Maldonado, with a bachelors of science in psychological science; and Tara R. McFarland, with a masters of education in curriculum and teaching.

Quincy Native Keeps Navy's Most Advanced Aircraft Flying

By Petty Officer 1st Class PAT MIGLIACCIO

Navy Office of Community Outreach WHIDBEY ISLAND,

Wash. - A 2007 Skyview High School graduate and Quincy native is serving with a U.S. Navy electronic attack squadron that flies the Navy's newest and most technologically-advanced aircraft, the EA-18G Growler.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Robert Meade is a culinary specialist with the Electronic Attack Wing, Pacific one of 14 Navy electronic attack squadrons based in Whidbey Island, Washington.

As a culinary specialist, Meade runs the squadron's food operation and insures the troops get fed.

"In my job I get to know everyone and interact with every member of the squadron on a daily basis," said Meade.

Taking off from and landing on Navy aircraft carriers as well as supporting expeditionary land-based operations around the world, the Growlers and their crews engage in electronic warfare, one of the most important components of modern air combat, according to Navy sources. The electronic warfare mission involves jamming enemy radar and communications systems in order to render air defenses ineffective.

To accomplish these tasks, the Growler has a sophisticated electronic warfare suite, complete with advanced receivers, jamming pods and satellite communications.

ROBERT MEADE

"The Growler has so many intricate parts," said Meade. "It's amazing to see what it takes to keep one working."

As a member of one of the U.S. Navy's squadrons with the newest aircraft platforms, Meade said he and other CVWP Sailors are proud to be part of a war-fighting team that readily defends America at all times.

"Our squadron is expeditionary. We get to travel all over and see the world," said Meade.

Sailors' jobs are highly varied at CVWP, according to Navy officials. Approximately 65 officers, 400 enlisted men and women, and 110 civilian contractors make up and keep all parts of the squadron running smoothly -- this includes everything from maintaining airframes and engines, to processing paperwork, handling weaponry, and flying the aircraft.

"Every day I feel an extraordinary amount of pride to serve alongside our great nation's most inspiring men and women," said Captain Scott Farr, Commander, Electronic Attack Wing, U.S. Pacific Fleet. "Our team is filled with hardworking and highly qualified professionals who hold uncommon levels of responsibility and accountability in support of our mission: to maintain, fly, and fight the Growler around the world. Their work ethic, commitment, enthusiasm, and esprit de corps are second to none!"

Serving in the Navy, Meade is learning about being a more responsible leader, Sailor and citizen through handling numerous responsibilities.

Burke Awards $6,000 In Scholarships To Six Graduates

George "Trigger" Burke recently presented six University of Massachusetts scholarships to graduating seniors at Quincy High School and North Quincy High School.

Graduates of Quincy High School receiving Burke's UMass scholarships are Tien Le, Peter Saccoach and Jason Truong.

Graduates of North Quincy High School receiving Burke's UMass scholarships are Xinyin Lu, Karl Preza and Michael T. Truong.

Each scholarship is in the amount of $1,000. Burke has awarded $170,000 to 170 students attending the University of Massachusetts.

In addition, the George Burke Fitness Center at Quincy High School is used extensively. He gave over $100,000 to QHS to build the fitness center.

Burke, a Quincy attorney, is the former acting mayor, president of the City Council, former state representative and former Norfolk County district attorney.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

HOW ONE THING CAN LEAD TO ANOTHER

Few things in life occur in isolation. Because the body is an interconnected structure, back pain is seldom limited to only the back. If left untreated, back pain can lead to osteoarthritis of the hips. In fact, an analysis of patients with low back pain shows that they experienced a higher incidence of hip osteoarthritis (but not knee arthritis). What this means for those suffering from low back pain is that it is possible that their condition can lead to overcompensation and unusual wear and tear of the hip joint. The best approach to solving this cascade effect is to address the underlying cause(s). Chiropractic treatment can help realign the spine and diminish future degeneration of the lower back.

We can help identify where your pain originates. Let FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC help you perform your personal best without the use of drugs or surgery. Could you benefit from professional, gentle, and safe chiropractic care? Give us a call at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We have the experience and expertise to give you the care you need. Let us make a difference for your good health and comfort now and in the future. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy.

P.S. When people experience pain, they use other muscles and alter their body mechanics to avoid the pain.

NeighborWorks Holds Neighborhood Cleanup

Local residents recently joined with volunteers from NeighborWorks Southern Mass. for a neighborhood clean-up and community block party in Quincy Point.

More than 75 volunteers, staff and neighbors participated in the clean-up around 45 Winter St. - a former vacant lot that is now home to dozens of families following its development by NeighborWorks Southern Mass.

Following the clean-up, attendees then joined in a neighborhood block party featuring a community picnic, balloon animals, face painting, an ice cream sundae bar and more. Six bicycles were also raffled off to local children.

Timothy Moran WNEU Graduate

Timothy Moran of Quincy recently graduated from Western New England University in Springfield with an Associate of Arts in Liberal Studies.

Motorcycle Ride To Benefit Joanna's Place

Joanna's Place, a not-for-profit organization founded in memory of Weymouth's Joanna Mullin, who was tragically killed in 2007, will hold the 9th annual Motorcycle Ride on Saturday, July 16.

The ride will feature up to 1,000 motorcycles stretching unbroken for over a mile, and will rumble on a 30-mile escorted path around the South Shore. The ride will also feature lunch and many raffle items ranging from gift cards to hotel stays at summer hot spots, thanks to the dedicated generosity of local businesses and friends.

The ride raises money for Joanna's Place, a program that promotes resilience in children and families on the South Shore facing stressful life events.

The ride will begin at the Weymouth Elks, 1197

Washington St. in Weymouth. Registration for motorcycle riders will begin at 10 a.m., and the ride itself will start at noon.

Last year's ride brought in over $30,000, and organizers hope to even surpass that total this year. In addition to ticket and raffle sales, businesses and families can sponsor a mile of the run for $250, and their names will be featured on signs all along the route.

High School Track Highlights

The excitement didn't stop when the last of the dual meets ended. The Quincy and North Quincy track teams kept up the heat scoring several wins and other impressive performances at MIAA events.

At the Division 1 MIAA meet held at Somerville's Dilboy Stadium, Mike Munroe cemented his reputation as the best shotputter in Massachusetts with a double win in the shotput and discus. Nicole Jorgensen opened some eyes with a huge personal best winning the javelin in 129'05" smashing her week-old school record and beating her personal best by a whopping 13 feet. The URI bound basketball and volleyball star went into the Allstate meet as the #2 seed in the state, not bad for about six weeks work.

Sophomore Dominic Laptiste extended his personal best in the longjump with a 20'08" leap eclipsing his 20'00" jump vs North Quincy. Alex Case just missed the finals in the 200 with an impressive 10th against a talent laden field.

Further to the south in Norwell the Red Raiders plied their luck in one of the most impressive high school track facilities in the state. Jimmy Cannon clocked a PR tying 10:16 in the two mile but was under 5 minutes at the mile. The state's top javelin thrower Nick Kelly, nursing a strained groin muscle since the state relays in early May, opened with two long fouls but the injury got worse with every throw and with him taking sixth in the shot earlier in the night, it was a matter of time before Kelly's efforts were neutralized. His third and final toss of 127'5" was a disappointment to the first year thrower but Coach Geoff Hennessy was proud of his star athlete.

"Nick was a class act all the way," said Hennessy. "With all eyes on him and college coaches along the side line he went and shook all the finalists hands and then went to meet with the coach from UMass-Lowell and did North and the whole city proud. Great athletes sustain injuries from time to time and this was most in-opportune. Coming off a huge win the the State Coaches meet he was game to win the division, but it wasn't meant to be. Not many young men handle themselves with class in the face of such adversity, but as the tournaments heat up the thrills are greater and so are the disappointments when the losses come.

"Nick has a great future. I'm blessed to have worked with such a great kid."

The girls 4 x 100 relay of Kelsey Coughlin, Mia

Healy, Allison Wong and Devin Hiltunen turned in a seasonal best of 53.67. All members are underclassmen so next year looks promising as they look to the school record of 51.3 set in 1981.

At the Allstate Mike Munroe wasted no time in establishing the best throw with a third round 57'07" and winning the first Allstate title by a President since Washington Morriset did it in the highjump in 2002. Nicole Jorgensen placed 6th with a 125'05" on a day when nearly every girl was having a personal best day. Mike came just short in the discus with a 142'07" missing finals by one spot and a scant 2 inches.

Mike continued his fine season with a 2nd at the New England's his 56'4" throw in round #3 just beat the approaching rain storm that made the circle very slick. The event concluded just before the rain increased and made the rest of the meet challenging for all competitors.

Coaches Geoff Hennessy, Peter Chrisom and Michelle Bell accompanied Mike. Nicole Jorgensen had a prior engagement and could not compete. The girls javelin was won with a 130'04" toss.

Quincy High's New England qualifiers in recent times include Jeff Pereira (longjump) and Curtis Calley (shot) in addition to Morriset, Munroe and Jorgensen.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church will have a Worship Service at 10:00 a.m. The Rev. William C. Harding will conduct the service and preach the sermon entitled "Step Up Men." Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the service.

All are welcome to attend Worship Services and numerous group activities. Bethany has an active Youth Group and a Missions and Growth Committee doing various charity works.

The church office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon-1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Please visit www.bethanyconchurch.org for updates. If you're unable to attend worship service, it is aired on QATV at 6:00 p.m. on Thursdays and 10:00 a.m. on Sundays on Channel 8.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers during worship service on Sundays. The church is wheelchair accessible.

Atherton Hough School 'Touch-A-Truck' Saturday

Atherton Hough Elementary School will host a "Touch-a-Truck" fundraiser Saturday, June 18 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the school, 1084 Sea St., Quincy.

Youngsters are invited to interact with construction vehicles and learn hands-on about the vehicles seen in the neighborhood. Trucks include a fire engine, sheriff's command center, street sweeper, ambulance, Bobcats, mini excavator, large dump truck, police cruiser, postal truck and more.

Touch-a-Truck events offer children a chance to meet the men and women who operate these machines.

The fundraiser will feature prize raffles, a DJ, face painting, food and a police K-9 demonstration. Admission is $5 per person.

Church On The Beach Sunday Mornings

Christ Church Mobile Ministries in conjunction with Union Congregational Church of Wollaston announces "Church on the Beach" on Sundays beginning at 8 a.m.

Bring a beach chair or a blanket and if the tide's right take a swim after the service.

The service is brief, Christ-centered and there is no offering.

Rev. Martha Swanson will be the preacher this week and pastor Jack Swanson will say some prayers. For more information call Union Congregational Church at 617-479-6661.

Arthur H. Bornemann, 93

A memorial service with Marine Corps military honors for Arthur H. Bornemann, 93, of Quincy was held June 11 in Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy.

Mr. Bornemann died May 29.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Theodor and Louisa (Weekman) Bornemann; a daughter, Carol Gleason; and his late former wife Lois (Ritchie) Bornemann.

Mr. Bornemann served his country with honor in the U.S. Marine Corps during WWII, and saw action in the South Pacific, specifically the Solomon Islands and Guadalcanal, and was discharged Jan. 4, 1946, with the rank of tech sergeant.

Following his military service, he started his 29-year career with Gillette Corp, and received an award for his 'clutch' invention that aided the production line. He went on to the Boston Post Office where he received an award for outstanding performance before retiring in 1981.

Not one to sit around in retirement, Mr. Bornemann joined the staff at Bethany Church as a sexton and all around handyman, and it is there that he met his wife, Thelma. He single handedly maintained the entire church and the grounds. After his retirement from the church, he volunteered there for many years. Mr. Bornemann also won the Quincy Beautification Award for a number of years for his landscaping efforts, and came in first place for speed walking in the Senior Olympics in Quincy.

He was the beloved husband of 35 years to Thelma R. (Forbush-Dougenik) Bornemann. Loving father of Susan Worden of E. Taunton, and stepfather of Roger Dougenik, Nancy Dougenik and Marybeth Lynch. Cherished Grandfather of Wendy Benoit, Dana Gleason Jr., Debra Nunziata and Mark Worden and seven great-grandchildren.

The Rev. William C. Harding, the church's pastor, officiated the memorial service.

Memorial donations may be made to the Roger & Emma Forbush Memorial at Bethany Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Arrangements were made by Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Albina K. Lindewall, 92

A funeral Mass for Albina K. "Bea" (LaFarr) Lindewall, 92, of Quincy will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Thursday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Lindewall died peacefully June 11 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

She was born in Gardner, Mass., on Dec. 15, 1923, to the late Joseph and Sophia (Blake) LaFarr. She was a graduate of Gardner High School and had lived in Quincy for more than 65 years.

Mrs. Lindewall was a longtime active parishioner of St. John the Baptist Parish in Quincy and had worked as the principal secretary in the rectory for more than ten years. She participated in many parish activities and was one of the first Eucharistic Ministers. She was a member of the St. John's Ladies Sodality and the former Quincy Catholic Club.

Mrs. Lindewall enjoyed gardening and was devoted to her family and friends. She was especially proud of her grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great great-grandchildren.

Beloved wife of the late Erick K. Lindewall. Devoted mother of Carl F. Lindewall and his wife Dolores of RI, Dianne G. Lindewall and her husband Kenneth Flamm of TX, Paul E. Lindewall and his wife Christelle of SC, the late Donna J. Saluti and her husband Alfred J. "Fred" Saluti of Weymouth. Cherished grandmother of nine grandchildren, 23 great-grandchildren, and three great great-grandchildren. She was the youngest and last of six siblings and is survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-7 p.m. Wednesday in Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy. Funeral from the funeral home at 9 a.m. Thursday, prior to the Mass.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, TN 38105.

'Creating Tiny Treasures' Aug. 1-5

First Baptist Church of Wollaston, 81 Prospect Ave, will host a "Creating Tiny Treasures" workshop for kids ages 9 to 14 to be held Aug. 1-5 from 9 to 11:30 a.m. each day in Fellowship Hall.

During the week youngsters will create a miniature child's playroom with a Disney theme. The room will have toys, lighting and an acrylic glass front. They will learn about scale and how to make interesting miniature items out of everyday objects.

The workshop will be taught by Jan Burton, assisted by Paula Gordon and other members of the Tiny Treasures Society, a chapter of the National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts. This will be the twelfth year a workshop has been held as part of the Church's outreach program to youth of the community.

Prior registration is required along with the fee of $35 for materials.

Further information and registration forms may be obtained by calling the church office Tuesday, Thursday or Friday at 617-472-0824.

During July and August the office will only be open on Thursday. Messages are checked often and responded to promptly.

Medicare's National Mail-Order Program For Diabetes Testing Supplies: What You Need to Know

If you, a friend, or a loved one has Original Medicare and uses diabetes testing supplies, you should know that Medicare is continuing its National Mail-Order Program that helps you get quality supplies while saving money. This program includes all parts of the U.S., including the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Using a contract supplier

Under the program, you need to use a national mail-order contract supplier for Medicare to pay for diabetes testing supplies that are delivered to your home. If you've been getting your diabetes testing supplies through the mail and would like to continue to do so, you may need to choose a new supplier starting July 1, 2016.

If you don't want diabetes testing supplies delivered to your home, you can go to any local store (pharmacy or storefront supplier) that's enrolled with Medicare and get your diabetes testing supplies there.

National mail-order contract suppliers can't charge you more than any unmet deductible and 20% coinsurance. Local stores also can't charge more than any unmet deductible and 20% coinsurance if they accept assignment, which means they accept the Medicare-approved amount as payment in full. Local stores that don't accept Medicare assignment may charge you more than 20% coinsurance and any unmet deductible. If you get your diabetes testing supplies from a local store, check with the store to find out how much you'll pay.

You have certain protections when using a national mail-order contract supplier. National mail-order contract suppliers must:

- Make the same items and services available to people with Medicare that they make available to people without Medicare.

- Make sure you get a particular brand of diabetes testing supplies when a doctor or other health care provider prescribes a particular brand to avoid an adverse medical outcome.

- Never influence or try to convince you to switch your current glucose monitor and testing supplies brand to another brand.

Finding a contract supplier

To find a list of national mail-order contract suppliers online, visit Medicare.gov/supplier, enter your ZIP code, and click "Go". Select "Mail-Order Diabetic Supplies" in the Competitive Bid Categories section, and click the green "Search" button at the bottom of the page.

You can also get a list of national mail-order contract suppliers by calling 1-800-MEDICARE

(1-800-633-4227). TTY users should call 1-877-486-2048.

Get your questions answered

If you have questions or want more information, Medicare has resources to help you understand the program, including Medicare.gov and 1-800-MEDICARE. Medicare Advantage Plans (like HMOs or PPOs) will notify you if your supplier is changing. Contact the plan for more information.

This information is provided by the United States Department of Health and Human Services.

St. Chrysostom's Spring Fair

St. Chrysostom's Church will hold its "Spring Into Summer" Fair Saturday, June 18 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 1 Linden St., Quincy, corner of Hancock Street.

'Wolly' Demo Begins; Future Site Use Unknown

By SCOTT JACKSON

The future of the site of the historic Wollaston Theatre remains uncertain, even as demolition of the 90-year-old building began Monday.

Representatives for theater owner Miao Kun "Michael"

Fang said last fall that he planned to demolish the building, citing concerns over its structural integrity. The city held off on granting a demolition permit for the theater, however, as Mayor Thomas Koch discussed the potential acquisition and restoration of the building with Fang.

Koch, in late May, said he would not be purchasing the building because the cost of doing so and renovating it would be too high. Jay Duca, the city's director of inspectional services, said the demolition permit was granted June 10 with the demolition beginning Monday.

Stephen Crawford, Fang's spokesman, said plans for the future of the site have yet to be determined.

"We want to work with the community and the mayor's office so that what is created there is consistent with the overall vision for the neighborhood," he said.

The Wollaston Theatre, located at 14 Beale St., is located in a Business C zoning district on an 18,790 square foot parcel of land.

The Wollaston Theatre first opened its doors in 1926 and served as a vaudeville theatre before it was transformed into a movie house in the 1930s. The theater was last open to the public in 2003.

Fang purchased the property for $600,000 in 2012 from Yvonne Chandler. Chandler and her late husband, Arthur, had owned the Wollaston Theatre since 1979.

Before selling to Fang, Chandler had reached an agreement in 2009 to sell the building to Street-Works, the city's previous master developer for Quincy Center. The New York-based company exercised an option to opt out of that agreement after it was estimated that renovating the building would cost upwards of $7 million.

DEMOLITION of the 90-year-old Wollaston Theatre began this week. The old movie screen was visible to passersby on Beale Street Monday afternoon. The Wollaston Theatre, known to many as "The Wolly," first opened in 1926 and was last open to the public in 2003.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You feel ready to face up to a major change, although it might involve some risks. A once-dubious family member comes around and offers support and encouragement.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Move forward with your plans, despite discouraging words from those who underestimate the Bovine's strong will. Your keen instincts will guide you well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding is easily cleared up. Then go ahead and enjoy some fun and games this week. A Libra might have ideas that merit serious consideration for the future.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel as if you're in an emotional pressure cooker, but the situation is about to change in your favor. Take time out for some well-earned fun.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A shift in your workplace responsibilities creates resentment among some co-workers. Deal with it before it becomes a threat to your success on the job.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect some surprises in what you thought was one of your typically well-planned schedules. Deal with them, and then enjoy some lighthearted entertainment.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful: What appears to be a solid financial opportunity might have some hidden risks attached. A hazy personal matter needs to be cleared up.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's a good time to strengthen ties with family and friends. You might feel unsure about a recent workplace decision, but time will prove you did the right thing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Just when you thought your relationship was comfortable and even predictable, your partner or spouse could spring a potentially life-changing surprise on you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your usually generous self is overshadowed by your equally strong suspicious nature. You might be judging things too harshly. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Love and romance dominate the week. Married Aquarians enjoy domestic harmony, while singles could soon be welcoming overtures from loving Leos.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An old health problem recurs, but it is soon dealt with, leaving you eager to get back into the swing of things. A favorable travel period starts this week.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an independent spirit that resists being told what to do. But you're also wise enough to appreciate good advice.

United First Parish Church Windows Restored

$80,000 Community Preservation Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

A months-long project to restore or replace 20 windows at the United First Parish Church is nearly finished — an undertaking the president of the historic church said was long overdue.

The $80,000 project, funded by the city's Community Preservation Committee, entails the restoration of 14 double-hung arch windows on the first floor of the addition on the east side of the Quincy Center landmark, Kirt Switzer, the church's president and CEO, said recently.

The 14 windows date to 1889, the year the addition was constructed.

"They're just the way they were. They're beautiful," Switzer said. "I'm astounded at how well they look."

The project also involves the replacement of six basement windows; restoration was no longer an option for them given the shape they were in.

"They deteriorated to the point they couldn't be restored," Switzer said.

The window project began about three to four months ago, according to Switzer, and all but four of the windows have been installed.

"We're on our final lap," he said.

WW Millworks of West Bridgewater restored the 14 windows for the first floor and also made the six new windows for the basement. The company is no stranger to the city having also prepared the windows for the recently restored James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall).

"They have a long history with the city and are well-known all over the state," Switzer said. "They did all the window work at Old City Hall."

Yankee Remodeling, a Quincy company, handled the installation of the windows and other related work.

The restoration of the windows in the addition is long overdue, Switzer said.

"I joined the church in 2001," he said. "They were in terrible shape then."

The church received a federal grant for the window work in 2008 or 2009, Switzer said. The window work did not take place at that time, however, because the building's bell tower was in greater need of repair and the funds were repurposed for that project.

In 2014, the City Council and Community Preservation Committee approved allocating $80,000 to the church for the window project. Switzer credited architect James Edwards, the president of the Quincy Historical Society, for helping to secure those funds.

"It was long overdue and we appreciate the support from the city, the mayor and everyone," Switzer said.

The windows in the church's sanctuary were restored as part of a two-year, $1.7 million restoration project completed in 2000, Switzer said. That project also included the installation of a new slate roof, 16 steel trusses to support the roof, and restoration of the sanctuary.

Switzer said the sanctuary windows would be touched up this summer, once the windows in the addition are all re-installed. The church is still working with its contractors on the timeline for that facet of the project, and will also work around the ongoing construction in Quincy Center.

Concerns Raised Over Quincy Center Affordable Housing

By SCOTT JACKSON

Several city councillors and members of the public voiced concerns over the lack of affordable housing in Quincy Center Monday night as the council contemplates a new blueprint for downtown redevelopment.

The City Council's finance, ordinance and downtown committees met Monday in a joint hearing to review the proposed fourth amendment to the Quincy Center Urban Revitalization and Development Plan introduced by Mayor Thomas Koch in May. Councillors did not take a vote Monday, but could approve the plan June 27 during their final scheduled meeting before recessing for the summer.

'Christmas In July' To Benefit Salvation Army July 28

'Kettle Captains' Needed For 1-Hour Shifts

The Salvation Army of Quincy announces its third annual "Christmas In July" kettle standout will be held Thursday, July 28 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. in front of The Quincy Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The "Christmas in July" kettle will raise money to help those struggling to meet basic needs and underscores the Salvation Army's mission of helping the less fortunate not just during the holidays but year-round.

"Christmas in July" is our one-day campaign in the summer to remind everyone that The Salvation Army is here in Quincy all year round," said Capt. Timothy Ross, Quincy Corps Officer. "The Salvation Army provides a variety of services all year long, such as food pantry and emergency services, as well as youth programs that take place all year long, not just at Christmastime and these funds raised in July will continue to help support these services.

"You would be surprised how many people struggle to make ends meet month to month. It could be someone just came across some hard times and in need of a little extra help," Capt. Ross added.

To help make this fundraiser a success, The Salvation Army is seeking "Kettle Captains" who will be in charge of ringing the bell during a specific one-hour shift. The kettle captains are asked to raise at least $100 during their shift and can do so by making a donation and/or by arranging friends and co-workers to help man the kettle or simply ask them to stop by and drop a donation into the kettle during their one-hour shift.

The kettle captain who raises the most money during their one-hour shift will receive a complimentary one-year subscription to The Quincy Sun for their ef-

New Sterling School Plan Awaits State Approval

By TOM GORMAN

The Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) was expected to approve design plans for the new Sterling Middle School this week.

Walter MacDonald of the city's public buildings department informed the school committee on June 15 that the schematic plans for the new school were submitted to the MSBA about three weeks ago. He explained that the city's school building committee and other officials were to meet with the MSBA on June 22 to discuss the plans.

"I'm looking for those plans being approved," he said.

Some initial site testing has been completed. According to MacDonald, borings on the new site were conducted and came back favorable.

"We were concerned about the soil conditions and (possibility) of ledge," he said. "The test found just boulders."

MacDonald added that since no ledge was found, it "should keep prices down" regarding initial foundation work.

The new school is to be built adjacent to the existing school on Granite Street near Roberts Street and will be about 150 feet in from the road. It is to be about 20 feet lower than the existing school and have two front entrances; one for grades 6, 7 and 8 and a separate one for grade 5. The plans call for a green space and a bus lane in front and double the amount of parking for faculty.

There will be two drives for the school, one from Granite Street and the other from Roberts Street. Entry to the gym and auditorium will be from the rear. The new school is scheduled to open in 2019.

MacDonald said that his team would update the school committee in the fall "on where we stand with the project."

If approved by the MSBA, the state would reimburse the city about 68 percent of the construction Already one local company has stepped to the plate to serve as a kettle captain. Amy Morin, a legal assistant with Baker, Braverman & Barbadoro, P.C., 300 Crown Colony Dr., Suite 500, Quincy, will be the kettle captain during the 10 to 11 a.m. shift.

Another kettle captain will be Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth who will man the kettle for the 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. shift.

"We are emphasizing that this 'Christmas in July' kettle is a fundraiser and as such we are hoping that many folks will step forward and either make a donation or help man the kettle or even serve as a kettle captain," said Bosworth who is coordinating the day with Captain Ross.

"If you would like to be part of this effort, please call me at The Quincy Sun at 617-471-3100 or email me thequincysun@verizon.net," Bosworth added.

Organizers are hoping to decorate the sidewalk in front of The Sun for the "Christmas In July" fundraiser with a Christmas tree. Santa Claus has also been notified and could make a special appearance during the day.

The main objective is to have fun and to raise funds for a very worthy cause.

"Need has no season and The Salvation Army will be available all year long to help those who come through our doors looking for assistance," Capt. Ross said.

BEYOND SAPPHIRES

As those born in July may already know, their birthstone not only belongs to the same mineral family (corundum) as sapphire, but ruby is the most valuable form of corundum. Rubies are more valuable than comparably sized diamonds primarily because they are much more rare. Ruby, in fact, can command the highest price of any colored gemstone, and its price rises in accordance with slight differences in color. The preferred hue is a pure, vibrant red that may have a slightly purplish-red tinge. If the color shows too much orange or is overly purple, ruby's quality is downgraded. Rubies of the highest quality have vivid color saturation without being too light or too dark.

If you are considering buying a ruby to be set in a ring, earrings, pendant, or other jewelry, then stop by Rogers Jewelry. We specialize in the finest quality diamonds and precious stones. Hancock Street Permanent Closing Between City Hall, Church Friday

By SCOTT JACKSON

The portion of Hancock Street between City Hall and the United First Parish Church will close to traffic permanently this Friday (June 24) beginning at 9 p.m., as work begins on a new public park linking the two historic buildings.

Starting at 9 p.m. on Friday, Quincy Center traffic will be detoured in the vicinity of Hancock Street between Dimmock, Coddington, and Washington and Granite Streets as contractors move barriers, paint new traffic markings and activate new traffic signals. The detours are expected to end around 5 a.m. on Saturday, June 25.

After the new traffic pattern is implemented, vehicles will travel in two directions around the United First Parish Church on Washington and Temple Streets.

A map of the traffic changes can be viewed at www.quincyma.gov, and here are the highlights:

• Hancock Street between the McIntyre Mall and past the Church, City Hall and the Hancock Cemetery becomes a public space and is no longer open to vehicular traffic.

• Hancock Street will take southbound travelers around the back of the church to go straight on Washington, left on Coddington Street or right on Temple Street and back toward Hancock and Granite Streets.

• Northbound travelers will go around the church on Temple Street with no changes in the traffic pattern.

There will also be no changes in the traffic pattern for travelers on Washington Street heading north toward Hancock Street.

The closure of the road is necessary as the city begins the work on the first phase of the Adams Hancock Green — a park that will connect City Hall, the United First Parish Church and the Hancock Cemetery. Work on the first phase of that park, which will include a new Walk of Names with thousands of personalized bricks, is already underway and should be finished this summer with a dedication planned for August.

The new park, once completed in its entirety in the fall of 2017 or spring of 2018, will include three water features, an 18-foot-wide promenade running where Hancock Street is now, and larger-than-life statues of John Adams and John Hancock. The statues of John Adams and Abigail and John Quincy Adams commissioned by the Quincy Partnership will also be featured in the park, relocated to a spot near the Hancock Cemetery.

Once the new traffic pattern begins, traffic headed southbound along Hancock Street in Quincy Center will now travel on Washington Street next to the church. Two lanes will be available at the intersection where Washington, Coddington and Temple Streets meet — one to take a right onto Temple and then back onto Hancock Street and the other to continue along Washington Street or turn left onto Coddington Street.

Southbound traffic on Temple Street would flow in one direction until reaching a new raised crosswalk where Hancock Street resumes. At that point, three southbound lanes would be available heading into the intersection with Granite Street — a right-turn only lane onto Granite Street, a center lane to stay on Hancock and a lane to turn left onto Maple or Chestnut Streets.

Traffic headed northbound on Hancock Street would travel in one lane in the 1300 block between Granite Street and Temple Street. About halfway up Temple Street, traffic would split into two lanes — one allowing vehicles to take a right onto Washington headed southbound towards Quincy Point or go straight ahead onto Coddington, and the other a left-turn only lane that would lead back to Hancock via Washington Street.

A chart of the new pedestrian traffic signals (Hawk Signal Operation) that are part of the Adams Hancock Green traffic pattern appears below.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920 postcard reproduction is a view of the old West Quincy depot on the Granite Branch of the Old Colony Railroad. The Granite Branch was built in 1871 on the roadbed of America's first railway that was in West Quincy and Milton. The branch ran from the Old Colony's mainline at the Atlantic depot in North Quincy through the Montclair marshes to East Milton and on to Capens Circle in Braintree where it rejoined the mainline. Much of its roadbed is now the Southeast Expressway. This depot was an important shipping point for the famous Quincy granite that was quarried for over 100 years in the West Quincy hills that overlooked it, but it was also used by passenger trains until the commuter service was discontinued in 1941. When the Expressway was built in the 1950s the depot was demolished and the site is now home to Biondi's service station on Willard Street across from Curry Hardware. The West Quincy sign on the right has been replaced today with a large billboard that is more imposing than the advertising posters on the side of this building. Senate Passes Veterans Bill To Support Veterans, Service Members And Their Families

The Massachusetts State Senate has unanimously passed Senate Bill 2325 "An Act Relative to Housing, Operations, Military Service, and Enrichment," also known as the Massachusetts HOME Act.

The legislation expands on the commitment the Massachusetts Senate has made to our veterans, service members and their families by expanding state benefits and services.

The bill increases veterans' access to housing through several provisions, for example by excluding military disability compensation from the formula that housing authorities use in determining rent for disabled veterans, and by giving eligible veterans a state-wide preference in housing for the elderly and persons with disabilities. Currently this preference applies only to a veteran's community of residence, limiting their ability to enter housing in surrounding communities.

Senator John F. Keenan (D - Quincy) filed and passed an amendment to the bill, prohibiting a municipal tax debt from being sent to a third party agency for collection if the taxpayer is a military veteran.

"This and the various other provisions of the bill ensure that we give due respect to those who have served and returned home, and provide a supportive atmosphere for veterans to return to their communities," Keenan said.

"Gold Star" statutes would also be updated by the bill, providing a property tax exemption for the surviving spouse of any soldier, sailor, member of the National Guard or veteran who, during active duty service, suffered an injury or illness which was the proximate cause of death. The update would also provide a property tax exemption to veterans who have a 100 percent disability rating for service connected blindness.

Other provisions of this Act include:

- The expansion of the Public Service Scholarship to children of any military or service person missing in action and children of prisoners of war;
- Allows employees of the Commonwealth who are members of the armed forces reserves and are ordered to service for more than 30 consecutive days to be paid the regular base salary reduced by the amount received as base pay for military service. It also preserves the seniority or accrued leave time;

- Allows cities and towns to appoint a veterans agent for three-year terms instead of the current one-year term;

- Establishes the Office of Veterans Homes and Housing within the Department of Veterans Services to oversee the Soldiers Home in Chelsea and in Holyoke;

11 Residents Graduate Massasoit

Eleven students from Quincy recently graduated from Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

They are:
Danielle Lee Bonome,
Joseph Edward Brown,
Julie Kenny, Maxia

Dominique Labady, Tara Marie McCarthy, John Charles Monahan, Lauren E. Moroney, Lauren G. Murphy, Stephanie Elizabeth Noonan, Tiffany Anne Slawski, Zenghui Wu.

- Creates a post-deployment commission to study ways to improve services to veterans who have been deployed overseas;

- Adds veteran status as a protected class under the statute prohibiting discrimination in employment.

The bill will now be reconciled with the version passed by the House of Representatives before being sent to the Governor for his signature.

American Forces Ordered To Aid Of South Korea

President Harry Truman today ordered United States planes and warships to the aid of South Korean forces. He laid down a policy of standing firm against Communist aggression in the far Pacific.

As part of the broader policy, Truman directed that the U.S. Seventh Fleet be prepared to prevent any Communist attack on Formosa, the island refuge of the Chinese Nationalistic government.

It was learned that President Truman's historic decisions were reached at a high policy meeting at the White House.

QHS Students Win First Place In Video Contest

Posted On MWRA's YouTube Page

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority announces Quincy High School students LaQueen Arias, Keren Garcia, and Jhonata Sousa won First Place in MWRA's annual video contest.

Their video is posted on MWRA's YouTube page.

This year, high school students across the MWRA service area were challenged to create videos to help spread the word about Bay State Fertilizer, which is made from recycled sludge at a pelletizing facility on East Howard Street in Quincy.

An awards ceremony was held recently at the Deer Island Treatment Plant. State Rep. Tacky Chan presented the Quincy students with special citations.

Three Local Groups Awarded Better Beaches Program Grants

Save the Harbor/Save the Bay and the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) recently awarded more than $215,000 in Better Beaches Program Grants to support over 80 free beach events and activities on the Boston Harbor region's public beaches in a ceremony on Boston's Fish Pier.

This year's Better Beaches Program Grants will fund concerts and sand sculpting competitions, beach festivals, movie nights, free paddleboard, kayak and swimming lessons, storytelling by the sea and art on the shore on public beaches from Nahant to Nantasket.

This year's recipients include 43 organizations in 9 waterfront neighborhoods and beachfront communities from Nahant to Nantasket, including three from Quincy.

The Friends of Wollaston Beach received $3,500 to support Kids Day, Discover Quincy received $7,500 for Wolly Beach Wednesdays and the Discover Quincy Beach Bash, and Quincycles received $3,815 for Ride the Beaches of Quincy.

"It's a great investment and a terrific partnership," said Save the Harbor's spokesman Bruce Berman. "The Commonwealth appropriated $190,000 this year and we are giving away more than $215,000 to support another spectacular summer of free events and activities on these great urban beaches."

THREE LOCAL GROUPS - Friends of Wollaston Beach, Discover Quincy and Quincycles - recently received grants from Save the Harbor/Save the Bay and the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR). Among those taking part in the award ceremony at Boston's Fish Pier are state Rep. Dan Hunt of Dorchester, Metropolitan Beaches Commissioner and Director of Mass Parks Operations for the Department of Conservation and Recreation Samantha Overton, Margaret Laforest from Discover Quincy, state Sen. John Keenan of Quincy, Maureen Mazrimas from Friends of Wollaston Beach, Joe Hern from Quincycles, President of Save the Harbor/Save the Bay Patricia Foley, and Save the Harbor/Save the Bay Board Chairperson Joseph P. Newman took part in the recent award ceremony at Boston's Fish Pier. Photo Courtesy Save the Harbor/Save the Bay

Crane Library Bookstore Summer Specials

The Crane Library Bookstore, approaching its fifth year of operation, is offering some bargain summer specials.

All fiction books, including the ever-popular mysteries and science fiction, are on a buy-one-get-one-free of equal or lesser value special through the summer.

Hard-cover books sell for $2 and paperbacks for $1. All books are in gently-used condition.

And next month the shop is hosting a "Christmas in July" special, featuring various holiday choices in print and entertainment media for both adults and children.

In addition to a large selection of non-fiction, the bookstore also stocks a variety of DVD's, CD's, videos and audio-books. Foreign language and reference material is available, as is a selection of children's and young adult books and videos.

The shop is open on Thursday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and has its own separate entrance on Spear Street, in the rear of the Thomas Crane Public Library across from Bethany Congregational Church.

Sponsored and managed by volunteers for The Friends of the Crane Library, 100 percent of the bookstore's proceeds are used to fund the many community programs at the library, including lectures, concerts, film screenings, museum passes, and a variety of special events for children.

Quincy Farmer's Market Opens Friday

The Quincy Farmers Market kicks off its 34th season Friday at Merry-mount Park, featuring live music, expanded lunch offerings, picnic tables and free parking.

Twenty full-time vendors will participate in the Quincy Farmers Market this year, plus 10 others who will make appearances throughout the season. City departments will also be taking part in the farmers market.

The live music program will run from noon to 4 p.m. on Fridays in the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater. The program is organized by Mike Delaney and the musicians of the Roslindale Open Mic. All the musicians write their own music. There will be plenty of seating for those wishing to come to the market, get lunch, and enjoy the live music.

This summer's music lineup includes four duos, a trio and four solo acts: Chris Lee on June 24, Haley Hewitt on July 1, Karen Woodhall and Carl McPhee on July 8, Chris Lee and Mike Delaney on July 15, The 3 Guys (Gerry Ryan, Alex Rosiewicz and John McLean) on Aug. 5, Chris Pahud on Aug. 12, Junko Ogawa on Aug. 19, Patti DeRosa and Mike Delaney Aug. 26 and Steve Folino and Jack Meserve Sept. 2. The Recreation Department's summer theater performance will take center stage on July 29.

The lunch menu at the Quincy Farmers Market has doubled in size since last year. New vendors include award-winning barbecue from the Boney Brothers of Florida; Middle Eastern dishes served up by Kebab House; Home-Style Caterers of Quincy, who are returning after acquiring a new kitchen in Marina Bay; and West Quincy's O'Brien's Bakery, featuring grilled cheese, dogs and burgers, and baked dishes.

City departments will connect with patrons and children throughout the summer each week. The Fire Department, Public Works Department, Police Department, Park Department and Crane Library will all participate, beginning with a "touch-a-truck" event run by the Park Department on opening day from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

Making its first appearance at the Quincy Farmers Market this year will be Signal Rock Farm of Charlton, offering lamb by the pound and quarter, half or whole lambs. The company also makes wool products from its sheep – including blankets, scarves and baby garments.

Mac-the-Knife will offer on site sharpening services for the first time this year. Bring your knives, scissors and yard tools, and leave with them sharp – probably for the first time in years for most of us.

Carberry Kitchen of Weymouth will be featured full-time this year for the first time, offering up a variety of dog treats.

Relay Power, an energy education company, and Quincy Saves, which promotes energy efficiency, will both make their first appearances this year.

The Quincy Farmers Market is an incubator for new food and cottage industry business. Darlene Sicard of D'sLectables started her baking business just a few years ago, with Quincy as her largest market, and recently won a "Shark Tank" like contest in Rhode Island. Northeast Community Bank, located on Quincy Avenue, sponsors appearances by start-ups. This season, the bank will host Seaside Apiaries, a Squantum beekeeper; Quincy woodworker Steer Powers; and Euphoria All Natural, a soap and body care company.

Returning vendors include Ray the Fish Guy, Ackerman's Maple Farm, GoldenRuleHoney, Frohloff Farm pork products, The Undisputed Chicken Eggs, and Westport Rivers Winery. This year will mark the 34th straight year of appearances by Stillman's Farm of New Braintree and Freitas & Sons of Middleborough.

To volunteer to work with the market on children's activities and other recreational experiences at Pageant Field for the 2016 season, or for other questions, contact market manager Janet Little at janet.little@comcast.net.

Squantum Point Park Tour Saturday

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program invites the public to a free tour of Squantum Point Park at low tide on Saturday, June 25 at 9:30 a.m.

Join coastal citizen scientist Peter Fifield to explore tide pools, search for great piddocks, learn about a "sunken forest" and inspect the remnants of a 1940 era cofferdam – built to create the runway for the Squantum Naval Air Station – being dismantled by Mother Nature.

Bring water and wear shoes that can get wet and muddy. Meet at the shelter by the Squantum Point Park parking lot. From Quincy Shore Drive, turn right on to East Squantum Street, then left on to Victory Road in Marina Bay. Proceed straight through the first rotary. Take the next left on to the Haul Road to enter the park.

For more information and rain date rescheduling, call 617-472-0799.

Blonde Brownies

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for the most delicious blonde brownies ever – a favorite of my niece Ann. These rich, tasty treats are made with the combination of chocolate chips and brown sugar and are a real crowd pleaser.

BLONDE BROWNIES

(Also known as Congo bars)

RECIPE

2 sticks of butter
1 box light brown sugar (equals about 2 cups)
3 eggs
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons of vanilla
2 3/4 cups flour
2 cups of chocolate chips (either milk chocolate or semi-sweet)

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees

Grease 10 x 14 baking pan
In a pot on top of the stove, melt the 2 sticks of butter.

Turn Off Heat. (This step is very important)

Add box of brown sugar and blend until butter and sugar are very smooth.

Add 3 eggs, one by one, mixing thoroughly after each addition.

Add baking powder and salt, mix again.

Add 2 and 3/4 cups of flour, mix well

Add chocolate bits and mix batter until well blended.

Pour into baking pan and smooth out. Batter will be very thick

Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Let cool, cut into squares

Options: You can add one cup of any favorite nut, or 1 cup of coconut

You can also frost with a butter cream frosting before cutting into bars.

Mexican Style Quinoa

By SUZIE

Many times I hear from patients that they do not like quinoa. When we start discussing it, it usually, if not always, ends up that they simply boil it in water and plop it on a plate!

You wouldn't serve rice or pasta that way and expect it to taste good.

Here is a great and easy recipe for a quinoa dish that everybody loves. It is flavorful and packed with nutrients.

Quinoa is an ancient grain of the Peruvians who used the grain for stamina and energy. It is very easily digested as well.

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup uncooked quinoa, rinsed well and drained (it must be rinsed to avoid a bitter taste)
1 medium onion, chopped

3 cloves garlic, minced
1 red pepper, chopped
1 can tomato sauce (8 oz)
2 1/2 cups broth (I use chicken or vegetable)
2 tsp chili powder
1 tsp cumin sea salt
fresh cilantro, avocado, salsa for topping

Simply sauté onion, pepper, and garlic in a saucepan until fragrant. Add quinoa and toss to coat for a few minutes. Now add the broth, tomato sauce, and dried herbs.

Stir, cover, and simmer until liquid is absorbed, about 15 minutes.

Season to taste with sea salt and toss with cilantro.

Serve with sliced avocado and salsa. ENJOY!!!

Sugar Pecan Cookies

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for a simple delicious cookie made with confectioner's sugar instead of granulated sugar. It makes the taste of this cookie light and decadent. Because I like a larger cookie instead of using a teaspoon full to make each cookie I used a tablespoon.

RECIPE

6 tablespoons of butter
1 beaten egg yolk
6 tablespoons confectioner's sugar
1 cup of flour

1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup chopped pecans

Melt butter and sugar together. Add flour alternately with beaten egg yolk and beat well.

Add 1 teaspoon of vanilla and chopped pecans and mix until well blended. Drop cookie batter by teaspoons or tablespoons depending on how large you want the cookie.

Bake on a slightly greased cookie sheet or a cookie sheet lined with parchment paper at 350 degrees. Bake for about 10-12 minutes. Let cool on a wire rack.

Music Show For Children Friday

Thayer Public Library and Quincy/Braintree Family Network will host a music show for children ages 1-4 Friday, June 24 at 10:30 a.m. at the Thayer Public Library, 798 Washington St., Braintree.

The show will be Hugh Hanley, an experienced performer who creates a wonderfully fun but gentle atmosphere. He will invite the children and their caregivers to participate in singing, and clapping.

No sign-ups needed. The program is funded by a grant from the Massachusetts Department of Education.

The Quincy/Braintree Family Network is a program of "Community Care for Kids" under Quincy Community Action Programs.

Gennaro's Eatery Of Quincy Wins Best Pizza In New England

Gennaro's Eatery of Quincy recently won first place in the 2016 Pizza Challenge for all of New England.

The Challenge was brought to New England by the Cara Donna Provision Company and Aired on Wicked Bites TV Show on NESN.

There were two challenges. The first challenge took place at Lombardo's of Randolph. Owner Gerard Martocchio and his Pizza Chef Dan Keefe of Gennaro's

Eatery won first place out of the 27 contestants who competed throughout the region to determine the best pizza in New England.

Martocchio and Keefe impressed the judges with their Pizzagaina Scicilian Pizza. Martocchio's inspiration for his creativity was the Pizzagaina which is an Italian Easter Pie.

The second challenge was held at Gillette Stadium in Foxborough. The contestants were narrowed down to the first three winners of the first challenge. The Challenge was held at the Cara Donna Provision Co. Food Show

The winner again for first place in the Best Overall Pizza in New England was Gennaro's Eatery. Martocchio and Keefe once again impressed the judges with their hand-crafted artisan pizzas.

Gennaro's has been serving delicious authentic Italian food to our customers for over 22 years!

Peculiar Things Your Body Does

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Our bodies can do some pretty weird things that every so often even researchers can't explain. Though some of these functions may seem strange, that doesn't signify that there's a cause for alarm. If any of these happen to you, don't worry, they are absolutely normal.

RUTH JONES

Goose Bumps on the Skin

They seem to appear when you're scared or cold, while you're listening to a piece of particularly moving music or even worse, when someone runs their fingernails across a chalkboard. But there's actually no biological reason we get them any longer. When humans were much hairier, goose bumps served as an instrument of intimidation. For example, you may have observed that when animals feel threatened, their hair often stands straight up. That's so they appear larger, and therefore more threatening. It worked the same way for us back in the days of the caveman. But now that we have much less hair than our ancestors, goose bumps are much more visible, and pretty purposeless.

Shivering

Simply put, it's like the opposite of sweating, which happens when you're overheated and need to cool down. Shivering, when you're cold aids you in producing and conserving heat. It also helps trigger the preservation of homeostasis, which maintains the stability of your internal functions.

Jerk awake while falling asleep

In fact it is referred to as a hypnagogic or hypnic jerk. One theory discloses that it happens because as your body starts to relax and your breathing slows, your brain somehow thinks you are falling instead of falling sleeping, and it wants to make sure you're aware that you might be falling to your death. Others theories uphold that it's just a normal part of relaxing, and usually occurs if you're anxious or stressed, have drank too much caffeine or alcohol, or are very fatigued. Regrettably, the more you start to worry about them, the more they may occur.

Yawn

We have traditionally been lead to believe that you yawn because you're tired or bored. Latest research indicates that yawning may just be a way to keep your brain cool. Essentially, a yawn acts like your brain's personal air conditioner. When you start to yawn, forceful stretching of the jaw increases blood flow in the neck, face, and head. At the same time the deep intake of breath during a yawn forces a downward flow of spinal fluid and blood from the brain. Cool air breathed into the mouth cools these fluids. Jointly, these processes may act like a radiator, eliminating too hot blood from the brain while introducing cooler blood from the lungs and extremities, in this manner cooling brain surfaces. This cooling down process assists in keeping you sharp and more attentive in stressful situations. And yes, it is true, seeing someone else yawn or simply thinking about a yawn can, in fact, make you yawn.

Salivating

Salivating happens for numerous reasons: It keeps your mouth moist and comfortable, helps you chew, taste, and swallow, fights germs in your mouth and prevents bad breath, has proteins and minerals that protect tooth enamel and prevent tooth decay and gum disease, helps keep dentures securely in place, helps break down food, and protect our mouth and teeth before we vomit. Thinking about or see some appetizing food? Your mouth will start to water in preparation for your next meal.

Eyes twitching

If you feel a slight flutter in your lower lid, it could be indicative of a number of things: stress, lack of sleep, dry eyes, eye strain, sensitivity to light, too much caffeine, alcohol, and allergies. If your eyes constantly twitch, take a break from your computer screen, try to catch up on sleep, or put down the caffeine. You may also be dehydrated, so take a sip of water.

Hiccup

In order to breathe, our lungs work in combination with our diaphragm, a muscle that helps pull air into the lungs and relaxes to release air back out with exhalation. If you eat or drink too rapidly, the diaphragm can become aggravated, subsequently trapping air in your throat and in turn, causing a hiccup. Generally, hiccups last just a few minutes, and holding your breath or taking a few deep breaths usually can cure them promptly.

Eyes tear up

Crying is a lot more complex than most people think. There are literally assorted tears for every kind of situation.

Basal Tears: They keep our eyes wet at all times and protect them from bacteria and other harmful substances. You can usually go through your day without noticing basal tears.

Reflex Tears: If your eyes water when you're chopping an onion, then you are experiencing reflex tears, which are released in larger amounts than basal tears. They occur to keep an unwanted gas or acid from penetrating your eyes.

Emotional Tears: You can expect these to appear when you're really happy, sad, frightened, or merely feeling overwhelmed. Researchers don't really know why we cry emotional tears, except that they might have a comforting effect and be an evolutionary social cue that you're sad.

Blush

We all have experienced that feeling: You find yourself in an embarrassing situation, and you feel a rush of heat enveloping your face. Basically, your body is experiencing a rush of adrenaline, an increased heart rate, and dilated blood vessels to improve blood flow. Scientists believe this is another evolutionary indication similar to a nonverbal apology for social blunders.

Belching and flatulence

Let's face it, they're awkward, but they happen to everyone when gas needs to be released from the body. You most likely burp when you swallow excess air, eat too fast, chew gum, or drink carbonated beverages. Stomach infections can also be the source of non-stop burping. On the other end of the spectrum, flatulence occurs when food is not fully digested when it is in the stomach and small intestine, and then reaches the large intestine in an undigested state. Bacteria begin to feed on the food, thus creating gasses that have to be expelled. The average person expels flatulence gas 14 times every day. Contrary to popular belief, women have just as many passages as men, and older people, have no more gas than younger individuals.

Historical Society Trip To Kittery, ME, Isle Of Shoals July 21

Quincy Historical Society will sponsor a summer trip on Thursday, July 21, to the Maine - New Hampshire Coast, featuring a cruise around the historic Isle of Shoals and Portsmouth Harbor.

The tour bus will depart the Adams Academy at 7:30 a.m. and arrive in Kittery, Maine, at approximately 10 a.m., for an hour of shopping at the Kittery Outlets.

Lunch will be at Warren's Lobster House, located on the harbor. The lunch entree is a choice of fresh filet of haddock with Ritz Cracker topping or a 10-ounce grilled top sirloin steak.

The centerpiece is a 2 3/4-hour afternoon cruise with the Isle of Shoals Steamship Company around Portsmouth Harbor and out to the Isle of Shoals.

The 10 small islands comprised in the Isle of Shoals have a history dating back to the Native Americans. They drew the attention of Captain John Smith when he sailed the New England coast and served as stations for fishermen from Europe. Smuttynose Island has a role in the legend of Blackbeard, was a resort for famous 19th century authors, and was the site of two notorious murders.

The islands provide a range of picturesque features, both in their rocky natural and in their buildings like the 150-year old Gosport Chapel and the 19th century Appledore House hotel.

The cruise will be back at dock at 4:45 p.m. The tour bus should return to the Adams Academy by approximately 7 p.m.

The price for this trip is $83 per person for Historical Society members and $88 per person for non-members. To register, or for more information, contact the Historical Society at 617 773-1144.

On Your Mark, Get Set, READ! Summer Fun At The Library

By JULIE RINES

Thomas Crane
Public Library

Are you looking for ways to keep busy this summer?

Check out the dozens of programs available at the Thomas Crane Public Library beginning June 24th as we participate in the nationwide summer reading adventure, "On Your Mark, Get Set, READ." The Thomas Crane Public Library's summer library adventure is two full months of fun for children of all ages.

Meet some unusual animals, sing or dance at the Talent Show, hear concerts, listen to the stories at the Farmer's Market and Wollaston Beach, show your creativity with crafts, participate in pajama storytimes, play with bubbles, watch a magic show and movies and more all for free this summer at the library. The library offers programs for children of all ages; details are available on the library's website thomascranepubliclibrary.org.

The fun begins on Friday, June 24th with a storytime at the Quincy Farmer's Market at Pageant Field in Meryount Park where we will be telling stories at noon, weather permitting. Look for us in a shady spots near the vendor tents. Stop by to say hello, pick up summer program information and hear a story or two.

Monday June 27th brings the start of two weekly programs. Every Monday afternoon stop by the North Quincy Branch Library at 2 p.m. for a movie matinee. We'll be keeping cool this summer with a series of chilly tales featuring snow and ice and winter sports. We'll begin our adventures with Frozen. This movie is rated PG and runs for 108 minutes.

Also beginning Monday, June 27th is the return of Art-to-go a 10-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch.

Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 to 4 p.m. to make this week's craft. The weekly craft will be at the Main Library on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays.

Our first craft will be a beach ball sun visor, the perfect thing to wear to our storytime on Wollaston Beach, Wednesday, June 29th at 10: a.m.

This summer from June 27th through Aug. 31st track your reading online with our new summer reading game. Sign up, log books, and complete challenges. You might even win a prize! This program is for children up to age 12, teens are invited to join our teen summer reading program.

For a complete listing of all summer programs and activities check out the Events Calendar and Summer Fun section of our website thomascranepubliclibrary.org

These programs are supported in part by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Blue Hills Community Alliance Awards Health, Wellness Grants

The Blue Hills Community Health Network Alliance (CHNA 20) recently awarded eight community grants to support local projects to improve health and wellness in South Shore communities including Quincy.

Thanks to donations from South Shore Hospital, Steward Health, and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, CHNA 20 announces its 2016/2017 Community Grant winners. The focus of this year's Community Grant Program funds projects that lead to positive, enduring and replicable outcomes based on CHNA 20's core priority areas of Chronic Disease & Wellness and Access to Care & Services.

CHNA 20 received many grant applications representing a variety of programs and services. The grant review process was rigorous and conducted by a 20-member review committee chosen from community health agencies in the CHNA 20 catchment area.

Grant recipients include:

- Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center (Family Connectors Program in Quincy)
- Enhance Asian Community on Health (Mental Health First Aid for the Asian Community)
- Father Bill's & Main-Spring (Narcotics Training at Father Bill's Place Emergency Shelter)
- Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (Multilingual Access and Navigation Capacity Building Project).

QCAP Receives $25,000 Grant

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., has received a $25,000 grant from the Santander Charitable Contributions Program.

The funding is part of Santander Bank's commitment to the communities where its customers and team members work and live, with a focus on financial education, neighborhood revitalization, community services and affordable housing initiatives.

QCAP is the leading private nonprofit organization in the Greater Quincy area dedicated to reducing poverty and helping low-income people achieve self-sufficiency. QCAP serves more than 22,000 unduplicated individuals in more than 80 communities. The service area includes Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Randolph, Hull, Brockton, and surrounding Norfolk County, South Shore, and Metro Boston Communities.

Santander's charitable contribution would go towards QCAP's Greater Quincy Financial REACH Center that provides financial education, including budgeting, credit repair and counseling, and money management; career counseling, job search and placement; free tax preparation, and benefits support to help low-income households achieve financial stability and independence.

for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

LIFELONG CARE FOR DENTAL RESTORATIONS

Whether dental restorations such as crowns, bridges, and veneers are supported by natural teeth or implants, they require lifelong care. Newly revised guidelines recommend that patients with dental restorations visit their dentists at least every six months so that the dentist and/or hygienist can clean, adjust, repair, or replace their restorations. The dental team can also advise patients with dental restorations about home maintenance. Dental restorations made of composite materials, metal alloys, porcelain, plastic, and other man-made materials collect dental "plaque" (the sticky bacterial film that constantly forms on the teeth) that must be removed with daily brushing and flossing. Otherwise, these colonies of germs will harden into tartar, compromise restorations, and threaten gum and bone health.

We are committed to excellence in the fields of cosmetic and restorative dentistry. We work with our patients so they can achieve and maintain a beautiful smile and healthier gums and teeth. If problems are diagnosed and addressed early on, teeth can often be saved. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. Tartar is calcified (hardened) plaque that can only be removed by sharp tools in the dentist's office.

Concerns Raised Over Q. Center Affordable Housing

lic plazas and infrastructure in Quincy Center – in particular the Hancock and Ross parking areas – to incentivize redevelopment. If the URDP were to pass, it would not authorize any new spending or disposition of public land; those would require separate votes.

Koch is also seeking to use district improvement financing to borrow $1 million to cover costs for downtown planning, including design work for new infrastructure, before the council recesses. No vote was taken at Monday's committee session, and it will be considered June 27. The city has borrowed $40 million to date in DIF money, which is paid back using new property tax revenue generated in Quincy Center.

Affordable housing is targeted at residents who make less than 80 percent of the median income for the area. Quincy's zoning code requires developers to designate 10 percent of units on housing projects as affordable, or pay into the city's Affordable Housing Trust Fund. Downtown redevelopment projects are exempted from the requirement, however.

Councillors Joseph Finn and Brian Palmucci have each proposed eliminating that exemption by updating the zoning code. Palmucci's proposal died in committee last year after it was not voted on before the council's session ended, and Finn's proposal introduced this year remains in committee.

Finn on Monday said the redevelopment of Quincy Center is intended to benefit everyone in the city, and the pending amendment represents a shift from that. He said his previous support for the revitalization of Quincy Center was based on having a variety of housing.

"This particular URDP represents a sea change in direction," Finn said. "Part of the reason for myself why I've always been incredibly supportive of the downtown development from the beginning is because the vision from the beginning was of mixed-use and that that mixed-use included a variety of housing."

Planning Director James Fatseas said the redevelopment of Quincy Center is still in its early stages, and the plan is not to make it exclusive to any group. Developers, he stated, have shied away from the downtown because of high costs of land acquisition and requirements that they contribute to infrastructure and parking costs, even as new developments pop up around the city.

"We are not trying to create a downtown that is exclusive to any group," Fatseas said. "We don't have people knocking down our door to come in to the city of Quincy and do development in the downtown, as evidenced by the lack of development in the downtown."

Palmucci noted the developers behind Deco, a 180-unit residential project on Burgin Parkway in South Quincy, paid $1.4 million into the Affordable Housing Trust, while AvalonBay agreed to pay $3.2 million as part of the permit for its 396-unit Quarry Street apartment complex. He questioned how those developers could make those payments, but those in Quincy Center could not pay anything into the trust fund.

"I cannot believe the land acquisition or the construction costs are so different on those projects...that they're so different between Deco and something that will be downtown that we can't get some contribution to affordable housing," Palmucci said.

Two developments have been permitted for the Quincy Center under the URDP – West of Chestnut, with 169 apartments, and Cliveden Place, with 56 condos. Neither developer was required to designate units as affordable or make a contribution to the trust fund.

The city is also negotiating land disposition agreements with two developers who plan to build on the Hancock Lot, with a residential component in each project. William Geary, Koch's point person for the redevelopment of Quincy Center, said those developers have "no appetite" for contributing to the affordable housing trust or setting aside units as affordable.

"Each one of them will have financing challenges," Geary said. "That's predominantly what drives their considerations – the financing challenges both in terms of escalating costs of construction and costs of the property."

Councillor Nina Liang, the chairwoman of the downtown committee, said she had spoken to administration officials about the affordable housing issue and been told it would be addressed in the future after development begins taking off.

"Some point in the future is not reassuring to myself or my colleagues," Liang said. "We're on the same page that it needs to be addressed, it's just a matter of can we define when that moment is going to be."

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain said a compromise would be needed. He was wary of holding up the URDP, and also wary of people being priced out of new housing projects.

"I don't want to have holding this up on my chest, but I also don't want to exclude anyone who might want to live here," Cain said. "I do have a need to figure out a compromise between my colleagues and the administration. Whatever way we can move forward together...we should do it."

Ward 6 Councillor William Harris had made a motion to pass the URDP Monday as proposed – approval from the full council June 27 would still have been required – saying it was "the right thing for Quincy."

"I'm confident the city is going to address the need for affordable housing. I'm certain of it," Harris said, adding that he did not want to give developers the impression the city was stalling.

Harris later withdrew his motion, however, after Palmucci and Finn both said they would vote against it. Palmucci said there were too many unanswered questions about the URDP amendment, and Finn said new language regarding affordable housing could still be included in the document and voted on June 27.

Members of the community expressed their concern about affordable housing during a public hearing at the start of the four-and-half-hour session Monday.

Doris Moore, a Whitwell Street resident, said working-class residents built Quincy, and working-class residents should not be ignored in the new downtown.

"These families who struggled to build this city shouldn't be ignored. I think it's shameful to even think that there is no affordable housing in this," she said.

2 Retiring School Directors Recognized

Joanne Morrissey (Food Services), Judy Todd (Special Ed)

By TOM GORMAN

Two school department directors are calling it a career this summer after a combined 37 years of service to the district.

Food Services Director Joanne Morrissey and Special Education Director Judy Todd were recognized by the school committee on June 15. Morrissey served for 23 years and Todd held her post for 14 years. Both are Quincy High School graduates who came back to work in the city's school district.

Morrissey said her sewing teacher at Quincy High School got her interested in career as an educator and after graduation attended the University of Massachusetts Amherst majoring in home economics with a focus on nutrition. After earning her degree, Morrissey worked for 17 years at the state Department of Education under John Stalker who wrote many child nutrition laws back in the 1940s.

"When a position became available in Quincy, I knew it would be a good fit," she said.

As the district's food services director, Morrissey was instrumental in offering lunches for school age children during the summer. Additionally, she helped design kitchens for the city's new schools and oversaw the designs for renovating older cafeterias and kitchens, wrote grants, increased staff awareness of food allergies and fought against having soda machines in the high schools.

Morrissey said before any new foods were added to the school lunch menus, she would often try them out first with her two children at home.

"I have two kids, one eats everything, the other eats nothing," she said.

Morrissey said she found the most challenging parts of the job were bringing in new staff, keeping up with changing state regulations, and outfitting schools with new equipment.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro noted that Morrissey was not in favor of having chocolate milk or cupcakes in the schools.

"You are an intense advocate for healthy nutrition," he told Morrissey.

Todd said her initial goal was to be a psychologist - a career choice because her cousin was diagnosed with autism. She noted that the first law implementing special education requirements in public schools was written in 1973, three years before she graduated in 1976 from Quincy High School.

She began her career in Quincy as a special education teacher at Broad Meadows Middle School. After 13 years there, she was named director of the district's special education department.

DeCristofaro said that Todd created "meaningful programs for all demographics." He read a letter from a parent praising her dedication and how she "gave so much and made our lives better."

As director of special education, he said that Todd had to make difficult decisions - "some popular, some not" - daily regarding what services to provide to children with special needs.

"You have passion, respect and love for each and every special needs child and parent," he said. "You were always an advocate for special needs kids."

Committee member Emily Lebo said that Todd has "a phenomenal staff" while colleague Anne Mahoney noted that some people may not understand the enormity of Todd's job.

"Sometimes, it can be difficult," Mahoney said. "It's not easy for a parent to learn their child has special needs."

Todd related how a Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center student wished her a happy retirement.

She asked the student if she knew what retirement was.

She said the student answered, "It means you can go to the beach."

"That's for me," said Todd.

In another matter, DeCristofaro informed the committee that parents and students can obtain the summer reading list on the district's website as well on the Thomas Crane Public Library and Barnes & Noble sites.

New Sterling School Plan Awaits State OK

cost.

The committee was updated on several improvement projects, some of which will get underway this summer.

The Lincoln-Hancock pool will be re-grouted and new lights installed. That work is expected to be done between Aug. 26 and Sept. 7. The pool's water is to be heated with a geothermal technology heater. In 2017, the school's electric heating system is to be converted to natural gas.

The Merrymount School will have its roof replaced this summer along with precast stone caps, roof ventilator and the skylight. MacDonald said the parapet wall will be repointed. He expected work to begin June 27.

Regarding the rooftop unit, MacDonald explained that it has to be custom made so that it may not be ready until mid-September. Work to install the new unit would be done on a weekend.

The North Quincy High School science lab, built in 1977, is to be upgraded. MacDonald said there are issues with sinks and drainage.

"A lot of the equipment no longer functions," he said. "We want to bring it up to current teaching standards."

He added that data recorders are being eyed that students can use to record their experiments.

MacDonald said a company specializing in science labs will be engaged and the staff will be asked for input in the new design.

Committee member Emily Lebo suggested the city apply for a state life sciences grant that could fund the lab reconstruction.

Also at North Quincy High, the gym bleachers are to be replaced with American Disabilities Act (ADA) code bleachers. Public buildings director Gary Cunniff said the gym entrance is to be reconfigured, noting that it is now "kind of tight."

Plans for that project are expected to be drawn this summer.

Cunniff said last summer an underground sanitation line at Beechwood Knoll School was repaired and a second line is failing. He explained it could be temporarily cleaned and will be replaced in the next year or two.

Other projects in the works are refurbishing Parker School's front steps and the remodeling the 1912-era Montclair School nurse's station restroom, upgrading the heating system at Broad Meadows Middle School and addressing a drainage issue at a second floor restroom at Wollaston School.

Cunniff said that boilers at Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Wollaston and Merrymount schools will be converted from oil to natural gas by next summer. The MSBA will reimburse the city nearly 70 percent of the $1 million project cost.

Most of the projects are in the city's $19 million five-year capital plan and are funded through bonds and appropriations.

Committee member Anne Mahoney suggested that existing bonds be repurposed to fund needed projects.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the city is at the forefront in working with the MSBA that would reimburse 68 to 69 percent of costs associated with improvement projects.

"Quincy is the model of how presentations are done," he said. "We are leveraging every dollar."

In a related matter, during her special education subcommittee report, committee member Anne Mahoney said that discussions are needed to address the lack of proper special education resources at North Quincy High School. She said the school does not have the same resources for special education compared to Quincy High School.

Financial Education Workshops

South Shore Bank is partnering with Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) to offer a series of free financial education workshops to military service members, veterans, and Quincy area residents over the next several months.

The free workshops, which will be held at QCAP's main office at 1509 Hancock St. in Quincy, will cover such topics as credit management, tips to protect yourself from ID theft, basics of investing and retirement planning, and protection of your assets: insurance and estate planning.

"South Shore Bank is happy to volunteer side-by-side with QCAP in helping the individuals and families in our communities improve the quality of their lives through financial education," said James M. Dunphy, South Shore Bank President and CEO.

Registration for the workshops is required. For more information, contact Theresa Whittaker, QCAP Program Assistant, Greater Quincy Financial REACH Center, at 617-657-5355 or twhittaker@qcap.org.

Orlando Shooting Victims Remembered At Vigil

REV. REBECCA FROOM, pastor, United First Parish Church, speaks at a vigil last Friday in remembrance of the 49 victims of the Orlando nightclub shooting June 12. Froom called the vigil, attended by some 70 people, 'broken-hearted and open-hearted.'

OUTDOOR SHRINE set up on the grounds of United First Parish Church remembers the 49 lives lost in the June 12th nightclub shooting in Orlando, FL. The shrine includes 49 small rainbow colored flags as an expression of solidarity with the LGBTQ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer) and Latinx communities, said Rev. Rebecca Froom, church pastor.

70 Attend Observance At United First Parish Church

By SCOTT JACKSON

Nearly 70 people attended a vigil at the United First Parish Church to remember the victims of a mass shooting at a gay nightclub in Orlando, Fla.

The vigil on the grounds of the Quincy Center church was held the evening of June 16, days after the June 12 mass shooting. Forty-nine victims were killed inside the Pulse nightclub during the early morning hours of June 12, and 53 others were wounded, making it the deadliest shooting in U.S. history.

The names and ages of the 49 victims were read aloud during the vigil, and the church's bell rang out after each victim was identified.

"It was broken-hearted and open-hearted," the Rev. Rebecca Froom, the pastor of the United First Parish Church, said of the vigil.

"Some people were crying during the reading of the names and the bell. People came together and comforted each other, giving a little bit of hope and affirmation that we are not in this alone."

Froom said plans for the vigil came together in the two days before it took place — the members of the church were in too much of a state of shock the day of the shooting itself, which happened on a Sunday.

"We felt the need for there to be a response within a week of the shooting," she said. "It was important for our congregation to come together to grieve and express our solidarity with the LGBTQ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer) and Latinx communities."

Froom was joined at the vigil by clergy from three other Quincy churches: the Rev. Donald Hammond of the First Presbyterian Church, who gave the invocation; the Rev. Felix Carrion of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, who read the names of the 49 victims and led Prayers of the People; and the Rev. Dr. Peter-Michael Preble of the Bethany Congregational Church, who led the Prayer of Confession.

Jamie Grassmann, a member of the United First Parish Church, gave a personal reflection. Those in attendance also sang "We Are a Gentle Angry People," which was written after the 1978 assassination of Harvey Milk, an openly gay San Francisco politician.

Many of those present held rainbow flags — a symbol of the LGBTQ community. The United First Parish Church purchased those flags for the vigil from a small business in Florida.

The United First Parish Church collected funds to benefit two organizations in the LGBTQ community in the Orlando during its services on Sunday, Froom said. The church plans to continue to provide community members with information on how to help those affected by the shooting.

Mayor Thomas Koch is organizing a citywide interfaith service beginning at 6 p.m. Sunday, June 26, at Bethany Congregational Church on Spear Street. Donations will be accepted that night for the One Orlando Fund, established by Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer to benefit the victims' families and the community.

Wollaston Beach Friends Celebrating 10th Beach Season

'KidsFest' Sunday; Membership Drive Launched

The Friends of Wollaston Beach (FWB) are celebrating their 10th beach season in 2016.

Their biggest annual event is "KidsFest" which is scheduled for Sunday, June 26th from 5:30 p.m. until sundown.

Kidsfest is free and is being held on the sands of Wollaston Beach across from the DCR Bathhouse at West Elm Avenue. The event is the longest continuously running annual event on the sands of Wollaston Beach and the second longest of all Boston Harbor beaches from Nahant to Hull.

KidsFest includes plenty of activities for children including inflatables, sack races, hula hoops, jump ropes, and more. KidsFest ends with a Glow in The Dark Dance Party on the sand with DJ Mark McGillicuddy.

The free event is made possible through a grant from the Better Beaches Program that is sponsored by MA DCR and Save The Harbor/Save The Bay. This year FWB received $3,500 to partially fund KidsFest and two other events in the Tot Lot across from the beach. FWB has received over $25,000 from the Better Beaches Program in the last decade.

Over the past 10 years, FWB has held close to 100 events, clean ups, and meetings regarding Wollaston Beach. Events have included KidsFests, car shows, kite festivals, art festivals, used book drives, historical meetings and walks, beach and marsh clean ups and more.

This year FWB is hosting "KidsFest" on June 26th, Tot Lot "Book & Boogie" on July 21st, and Tot Lot "Movie Night" on Aug. 18th.

Over these same 10 years, FWB has successfully advocated for Wollaston Beach and has been involved in numerous improvements and initiatives. Those include: upgraded fencing around the Tot Lot Park, stenciling of storm drains, solar powered "Big Belly" trash receptacles, recycling containers, improved staffing and maintenance, enhanced police presence, updated signage regarding beach rules, and more.

One of the more significant accomplishments for FWB was the installation of seven interpretive signs and four information kiosks along the waterfront. That project was funded by matching grants from MA DCR and City of Quincy Community Preservation Committee. The grants were written by FWB President Neil McCole. The project was spearheaded by McCole, City of Quincy Historian Tom Galvin, and former City Councillor Doug Gutro - who also founded the Friends of Wollaston Beach along with fellow former Councillor Brian McNamee.

Gutro was the local representative to the Metropolitan Beaches Commission at the time, a position now held by state Sen. John Keenan. The signs create a walking trail that stretches from Moswetuset Hummock to Caddy Park and they highlight the environmental and historical significance of the Wollaston waterfront while connecting to areas of local Native American history. The kiosks are located at various points and highlight the waterfront, various other local parklands, and include a community bulletin board.

Longtime FWB President Neil McCole said, "The Friends have launched a new membership drive in 2016 - 10 Bucks for 10 Years. We are humbly asking people to support the group by making a simple donation of $10 to celebrate our 10 year anniversary. Of course we will accept larger checks, including a 'Lifetime Friendship for $100."

FWB has collaborated with many partners over the years. This year's events are sponsored by and partnered with Save The Harbor/Save The Bay, MA DCR, The City of Quincy, Mayor Tom Koch, The Copeland Foundation, and Discover Quincy.

"We are very thankful for the support we have received this year and over the past 10 years," McCole said. "None of the work we have done, or continue to do, would be possible without the input, funding, and support of our various partners."

"FWB has had a great run this past decade and we want the next decade to be even greater. Wollaston Beach is a tremendous community asset and we hope to have a strong turnout for our events. See you on The Beach!"

23rd Annual Maria Droste Spring Fashion Show

The Maria Droste Counseling Agency's Annual Spring Fashion Show was recently held at Lantana's in Randolph.

As has been the tradition for 23 years, this year again, the event was held to benefit the Quincy agency. As always, it proved to be a very fashionable opportunity to socialize with friends and the evening culminated with a sensational spring show.

Several local trendsetters, both male and female, took to the runway, including Mass. State Auditor Suzanne Bump, who modeled spring selections from a well-known Boston Couturier, David Josef. The male side of the fashion story featured a collection from Hajjar's Apparel for Men of Quincy. Hairstyles were under the direction of Susan Canavan of Aura in Quincy and make-up was provided by Brittney Fasano.

'Bringing Hope To Life'

The staff of counseling professionals at the Maria Droste Counseling Services Agency all believe in four basic values: acceptance, respect, compassion and healing. In order to bring 'Hope to Life,' they provide quality services to all in need of a brighter future by offering affordable and timely mental health and holistic services.

Since the Agency's opening in 1992, the staff and volunteer professionals have provided critical support to individuals, couples, and family groups, with clients from seven to 70, on an adjustable fee scale based on each client's ability to pay. All of this is made possible as a result of the generosity of supporting people in the community not unlike those who organized this special evening, as well as those who took to the runway and those who attended the event

Land Records Available On Registry Website

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers that land records are available for viewing online via the Registry's internet-based document research system at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"Consumers can see up to 5,000,000 scanned land document images dating back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793. These documents are available via our internet-based document research system," said Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

"Providing secure, accurate and accessible land record information, coupled with our on-site customer service center, is critical to our success at the Norfolk County Registry of Deed."

Elaborating on the Registry's research capabilities, O'Donnell said Land record information can be researched by multiple options, including the name of the property owner and property address. He also noted consumers can access the Norfolk County Registry of Deed's internet-based document research system to determine property ownership, to research land titles, to review land plans and to confirm that documents affecting a person's property — such as a mortgage discharges — have been duly recorded.

Plot plans are not available on the Registry's website since they are not recorded at the Registry.

The Registry's website also provides information on how to obtain copies of land documents. The Registry copy charges are $1 per page plus an additional $1 per document for cost of postage.

"Providing first-class customer service is a core objective of the Registry," O'Donnell said. "Norfolk County residents and businesses deserve a Registry of Deeds that provides them with access to land record information in an easily accessible and consumer friendly manner. The Registry website www.norfolkdeeds.org does that by bringing the Registry records into your homes and businesses."

To learn more about these and other Registry of Deeds events and initiatives, like us at facebook.com/NorfolkDeeds or follow us on twitter.com/NorfolkDeeds.

Councillors Seek Report On Residential Tax Exemptions

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors want Mayor Thomas Koch's administration to prepare a report on the impact of establishing a tax exemption that would benefit owner-occupied homeowners.

The City Council voted unanimously June 6 in favor of seeking an analysis on what the impact of granting the exemption would be. State law allows communities to shift the tax burden from certain lower valued residential properties onto higher valued homes, most apartment buildings and secondary homes.

To qualify for an exemption, the property must be owner-occupied and the primary residence used by the taxpayer for income tax purposes as of Jan. 1. The exemption would not be automatic; homeowners would have to apply for it.

The exemption would be limited to a 10 percent decrease in the qualified property's original assessed value, according to the resolution filed in support of the analysis, and the exemption works as a decrease in the assessed value of a qualifying property in an amount that would not exceed 20 percent of the averaged assessed value of all residential properties.

The exemption would reallocate the tax burden within the city's residential class, but not increase total tax revenue.

Council President and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes sponsored the resolution seeking the analysis. She said she learned about the exemptions from a constituent whose son lives in a community that already allows them.

"It does offer some tax relief for folks who live in their homes. Owner-occupied residences would get a tax exemption or, quote, discount, on their residential taxes to help with the obvious high cost of paying taxes," Hughes said.

"We have a great deal of folks on a fixed income. There are families who have lived here for many, many years. They've owned their homes for a long time. A lot of senior citizens in our community. This is something that may help alleviate some of their tax burden."

While she sought the analysis, Hughes is unsure of whether or not she would support establishing a residential exemption.

"I don't know where I stand on this, or where the others stand. I do think it's definitely worthwhile and something I think we owe it to our constituents to as the administration to take a look at," Hughes said. "I applaud the administration — when I did discuss this with them, they were happy to take a look at this and see if this is something that our community might benefit from, if it's something that's feasible for us."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci co-sponsored the resolution.

"Anything we can do in terms of easing the burden on taxpayers, we should take a look at," Palmucci said. "The purpose of this is to have a discussion...

see who would be impacted, who would benefit."

Councillor Joseph Finn voted in favor of the analysis, but expressed concern allowing the exemptions could have unintended consequences, particularly in terms of affordable housing. Owners of properties that did receive an exemption, he said, could pass on the added tax burden to their tenants.

"I'll support the analysis but I want to make sure we proceed cautiously if we're going to actually consider it," Finn stated.

KKatie's To Open In Quincy Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

An area burger bar will open its fourth location this fall in the West of Chestnut development after receiving one of nearly two dozen all alcohol liquor licenses intended for restaurants coming to the new Quincy Center.

The Board of License Commissioners granted the all alcohol license, as well as a cabaret license, to KKatie's Burger Bar on June 14. Keith Steiding III, the president of KKatie's, said the restaurant would likely open in October, though the developer behind of West of Chestnut, Gate Residential, is pushing the eatery to open sooner.

KKatie's will lease a 2,600 square-foot retail space at West of Chestnut, located in the 1400 block of Hancock Street. Steiding said he had recently filed plans with city officials for the build out of the space. KKatie's will seat about 100 patrons.

The restaurant has two locations presently in Plymouth and Marshfield and plans to open a third in Hyannis this summer. Steiding said the KKatie's opening in Quincy Center would feature identical menus and pricing as the other locations.

"We're really, really excited," he said. "We're not changing the menu. We're not changing the prices. Everyone thought we're coming to Quincy, raising prices — we're not."

Members of the licensing board welcomed the addition of the restaurant to the downtown.

"I've been to the one in Marshfield several times," Police Chief Paul Keenan said. "I know you guys do a good job. It's a nice place."

"We're really, really excited to have you guys coming to Quincy," added Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the chairman of the licensing board.

KKatie's was awarded the second of 23 all alcohol pouring licenses approved for the downtown district by special legislation signed into law in 2013 by then Gov. Deval Patrick. The first license was granted in March to Pho Pasteur, a 90-seat restaurant Vietnamese restaurant planned for 1462 Hancock St.

The 2013 special act also gave the city two hotel liquor licenses, one retail license and one beer and wine pouring license for establishments in Quincy Center. The retail license was granted in February to Hancock Tobacco, which plans to move into a 4,000 square foot space at 5 Cottage Ave., around the corner from its current location.

None of the 27 licenses can be transferred outside of the downtown district, unlike other liquor licenses that can be transferred anywhere in the city with board approval. Scheele said a restaurant must hold its license for at least three years before transferring it to a different establishment in Quincy Center; if it holds a license for less than three years, the license is returned to the city.

In other business June 14, the licensing board granted an alteration of premises for Louis at 1269 Sea St., which allows the Houghs Neck restaurant to place four tables on its patio space on Bayview Avenue. The four tables will each hold four seats, for a total of 16 patrons outside.

John Galligan of Louis said the restaurant's kitchen closes at 10 p.m. each night, at which point service stops. He said all patrons dining in the patio space would be gone by 11 p.m. at the latest.

The restaurant, Galligan said, would take steps to mitigate any noise coming from the patio, by installing a trellis, for example. Neither live entertainment nor live music will be played outdoors; Louis would need to appear before the board again if it planned to have live entertainment there.

Galligan added that smoking would also not be allowed in the outdoor dining area.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, in a letter to the board, said about 30 residents attended a May 31 community meeting on the proposal, and the overall consensus was in favor of the new outdoor seating.

Restaurants in the city can offer outdoor seating between Patriots Day in April and Columbus Day in October, according to Scheele.

The Board of License Commissioners also granted a special permit for the 29th August Moon Festival. This year's event will take place

Phoenix House New England To Honor 4 Community Leaders

Phoenix House New England will present its inaugural Public Service Award Luncheon in Quincy on Wednesday, June 29.

The Luncheon commemorates Phoenix House's first year in operation in Quincy and honors four outstanding community leaders whose achievements and service to society inspire individuals struggling to reclaim disordered lives. Awardees include Mayor Thomas P. Koch, Massachusetts AFL-CIO President and former state senator Steven A. Tolman; William J. Ostiguy, chairman, The Gavin Foundation; and The Rev. Eric M. Hillegas, rector, St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church and president, Quincy's Inter-Church Council.

The luncheon will be held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, 27 Glendale Rd. Festivities will begin at 11:30 a.m. with a reception and the luncheon will begin at noon.

Dan Jaehnig, News Anchor, NBC 10, Providence, a Quincy native, will serve as Master of Ceremonies.

Proceeds from the luncheon support the work of Phoenix House, one of the region's leading nonprofit substance abuse treatment organizations, to save lives from the opioid addiction epidemic ravaging Massachusetts and the entire nation.

"It's been an extraordinary year," said Sheri L. Sweitzer, chairperson of Phoenix House New England's Board of Directors. "Since opening our doors in February 2015, we've set more than 4,540 people on the road to recovery. And the quality of our services has been recognized both statewide and nationally.

"Recently the Massachusetts Bureau of Substance Abuse Services reported that Phoenix House in Quincy had the state's best record for placing clients in continuing care. What's more, in February of this year we underwent a rigorous review by CARF, the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities, a national standard of excellence, and were granted a three-year accreditation—the highest available.

"We thank all our honorees for their support in helping us reach this important milestone."

Fred A. Trapassi, Jr., vice president and senior program director of Phoenix House New England's Eastern Massachusetts programs, added: "Phoenix House is committed to ensuring the health and safety of all individuals from substance misuse and abuse. We're very proud to recognize these four individuals.

"They share our commitment to better health through recovery from addictive substances, and they make incredible contributions to people who are at the lowest point in their lives. It's fitting that they be honored with these awards."

All four honorees have shown outstanding commitment to the people of Greater Boston, particularly at a time when the opioid epidemic has taken a devastating toll on communities throughout the state. Mayor Koch has demonstrated exceptional support of Phoenix House's efforts to combat the epidemic in Quincy. Senator Tolman was one of the first state leaders to sound the alarm about the epidemic while holding office, providing a wake-up call to all Massachusetts residents and leaders. Ostiguy's commitment to individuals in Greater Boston struggling with substance use disorders is witnessed by his strong support of the Gavin Foundation's partnership with Phoenix House. Rev. Hillegas and the Inter-Church Council have provided spiritual support weekly to individuals receiving treatment at Phoenix House.

More than 200 guests are expected to attend the luncheon. Proceeds from the event support substance abuse treatment programs and services provided by Phoenix House.

Tickets to the Luncheon cost $100 per person. Sponsorship opportunities are available. For information or to make reservations for the event, call 401-331-4250, Ext. 93210.

On Tuesday, June 14, 2016, at approximately 9:00 p.m., Officer Lauren Lambert along with the Quincy Fire Department were dispatched to a report of a car fire in the parking lot of the Bridgewater Credit Union located at 213 Independence Avenue, Quincy.

While en route, Dispatcher Michael Bowes informed Officer Lambert that the fire may have been intentionally lit by a male wearing a white t-shirt and black shorts. With this information, Officer Bruce Tait responded as well.

Upon arrival, Officer Lambert observed approximately 10-15 individuals standing on the sidewalk on either side of the parking lot entrance, drawn by the car fire. The Officer spotted a male matching the description given by Dispatcher Bowes, standing by himself in the parking lot just outside the front doors to the bank. Officer Lambert observed a small two door dark colored motor vehicle fully engulfed in flames.

As the Officer exited her cruiser, the suspect walked towards her with his hands up over his head with a wallet in his left hand. He then said, "Aren't you going to arrest me. That's my car! You have to arrest me. I just lit my car on fire". Officer Lambert immediately handcuffed the suspect, searched him and then secured him in a cruiser.

At this time, the Quincy Fire Department arrived on scene and began extinguishing the fire. With the suspect seated in the rear of a cruiser, Officer Lambert read him his Miranda rights, which he waived. When asked why he lit his vehicle on fire, the suspect said, "I'm all done with this world." Asked if he felt like he was going to harm himself or anyone else, the suspect replied, "Not right now but I might." Officer Lambert asked the suspect if there was anyone else, human or animal in the vehicle and he responded, "Oh no, I would never do that." He also denied having any firearms or explosives in the vehicle, adding, "No, just all my personal belongings clothes and stuff. The only flammable items in there is my cologne." When asked if he had ever been hospitalized or treated for mental health issues, the suspect said, "Oh yeah - a lot." He then began laughing and became very animated as he appeared to be talking to himself.

Officer Lambert had Brewster Ambulance EMTs respond for a mental health evaluation and he was subsequently transported to Quincy Medical Center. According to the license plate on the car which was owned by the suspect, it was insured and the lien holder was Bridgewater Credit Union. The vehicle was parked in the middle of the parking lot directly in front of the video surveillance cameras.

The suspect, a 36 year old Watertown resident, was charged with "Arson." At last report, he was being medically evaluated. Nice Work!

AWARD NOTIFICATION COMMISSION MAILING: is another scam stating that you have won 2 million dollars. There is a $12.99 "Acquisition fee for premium offer" that must be paid first. Why don't these scammers just take out the fee out of the 2 million dollars you supposedly have won? The Better Business Bureau advises to avoid this offer/scam. As always, if you get an offer that is too good to be true, type in the name of the company with either the word, "scam" or "review" after it to see what others are saying.

'May The Odds Be Ever In Your Favor'

Valedictorian Alicia Walker's Message To The Quincy High School Class Of 2016

Quincy High School Class of 2016 Valedictorian Alicia Walker offered these remarks to her fellow graduates at graduation ceremony June 13 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

How many times in your life has somebody wished you good luck? I bet a lot. Today alone, I'm sure dozens of the people with whom you've surrounded yourself for the last 13 years have or will wish you luck in your future. Is this a suggestion that you've gotten to where you are now based solely on luck?

From a mathematical perspective, luck isn't even a thing. Probability rules the roost, and any good statistician will chastise you for weighing luck over odds. If we operated on the assumption that luck does not exist, then life would be very formulaic. The function of our lives would take an input of work and spit out a proportionate output. That's exactly how the world works, isn't it?

Unfortunately, it's not. And considering that I'm only seventeen years old and I already know this, it must be pretty obvious. So that means there are more variables in our equation; that it's not as simple as getting out what we put in, or an amount directly proportional to that value. So here we are wrestling with this concept of luck, and recognizing the inevitability of the matter. Whether you call it luck, fortune, opportunity, a blessing, or any other synonym, there's a pretty sizable element in life over which we have no control. Our family, ethnicity, financial situation, hometown, IQ, these are all things that we don't get to decide from the beginning, and don't get to alter on a whim. The hours of work we put in or the sacrifices we make in our lives can't necessarily influence all of the cards we've been dealt. And oftentimes that is enough to drive us all bananas.

There will come a point in your life, if there hasn't already, when you will hate your cards. Your hand may seem hopeless or useless, and that never makes things easy. However, it's at trying times like these that you must recognize the fact that you haven't had the greatest luck, and that these bad things aren't happening as a result of anything you have done. That's just how the chips fell. That being said, it's unlikely that anything will change for the better if you sit on your butt and do nothing. Try to determine what is within your capacity to change, and make something happen. On the flipside, in times of great success, step back from where you are and appreciate how much of it you were blessed with and didn't necessarily earn. Personally, I recognize that I am extremely lucky. The center of that is my family. We might be slightly dysfunctional, but my parents and siblings are my support system that I couldn't go without. It's really humbling to take a step back from your life and realize how much of what you're doing has been facilitated by others. So for that, I'd like to say thank you.

Thank you to everyone who has made this day possible, both today and for the years leading up to it. Thank you to my parents, who have tried to teach me to be a decent human being while I have been focused on trying to achieve greatness. Thank you to my siblings, for driving my competitive spirit, and for thickening my skin so I feel confident enough to take a few hits every now and then. Thank you to my teachers for inspiring me to prioritize curiosity and a yearning for intellect. Thank you to my friends for somehow managing to deal with all of my insanity over the past four years, and for being my second ohana. And to you all, I seriously suggest figuring out who is a blessing in your life and passing the thanks on.

Regardless of how bad or good your luck is, you have the power to spin your situation in a positive or negative way. As Spiderman taught us "with great power comes great responsibility", so no matter what situation you're in, you are obligated to make the best of it if you want a good life. Always remember that you have the chance to change your fate, and no you don't have to turn your mother into a bear to do it. Sorry guys, you all know I'm a nerd so naturally I had to throw in a few Disney and Marvel references. It's time for me to go, even I'm sick of me talking at this point. But rather than wish you all good luck, I sincerely hope that when the chips fall as they may for us all, that we are able to do what we can to shape the kind of future we deserve. Congratulations Class of 2016, and May the Odds Be Ever in Your Favor. Walker out.

'Go Out There, Explore The World, Make A Change!'

Valedictorian Wai Yin Debbie Chan's Message To The North Quincy High School Class Of 2016

North Quincy High School Class of 2016 Valedictorian Wai Lin Debbie Chan offered these remarks to her fellow graduates at graduation ceremony June 14 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

This afternoon, as I was putting on my cap and gown, I did what each of you also probably did, whether it was in the proximity of your own bedroom or shamelessly in front of your family and friends: I took a good, long look and checked myself out in the mirror.

What I noticed, however, wasn't whether I look good in red, but how time truly flies by without any of us really noticing. As I was staring into my mirror, I saw a reflection of myself with a beaming smile in celebration of what tonight signifies in our lives. But in the reflection, I also saw a faint shadow of my past - a younger version of myself.

I was once an innocent toddler who dressed up as a princess on her birthday, a curious child who free fell onto a bed of snow without hesitation and made snow angels in her winter coat that was one size too big, and a lost adolescent who endured awkward silences in high school when left alone with a girl who is now her best friend.

We are all shaped by our past in the same way - shaped not by minuscule details like what we had for dinner five years ago - but by memories that we had emotionally imprinted on the moment they were made. These are the instances we commemorate in our scrapbooks and albums, because these photographs represent a part of our identity that we never want to forget.

From the moment that we walked through the doors as perplexed freshmen, adorning an expression of awe as we admired the sense of belonging, maturity and self-identity of the seniors to when we finally became "the seniors" we had aspired to be, we couldn't help but to capture our memories with selfies of all angles and group photos of all types in a scrapbook, embellished with captions that never failed to express our joy. Whether senior year was everything that you had dreamed of or its expectations were simply too high to exceed, let's all rejoice as we leave it all behind, because today signifies the time for us to set new endearing visions for our future.

Today is the day we ask ourselves, "What memories should I capture for the next pages of my scrapbook and how should I caption them?"

As we venture into the unknown, we will, without a doubt, face unimaginable challenges, unwelcoming changes, and treacherous temptations. But among these uninvited hindrances, I hope that we will also find not just an ambition to overcome your fears but also peace, gratitude and happiness. We must never forget our own ability to choose the memories we make, and thus, fellow graduates, I want to challenge you all to envision what you want to see in your own scrapbook of memories and to go chase after those dreams.

Challenge yourselves to fill your scrapbooks with positivity and light and not with despair and desolation even in times of the most arduous hikes.

Challenge yourselves to fill your pages with elements that transcend above trivial matters such as love, friendship and compassion, and not material goods such as lavish income, extravagant houses, and petty grades.

Challenge yourselves to fill your album with evidence of you making a positive impact on someone's life and changing the world for the better. Most of all, challenge yourselves to fill your scrapbooks with photos so that when you look back at it, you would see no evidence of regret or shame and you would be proud to claim it as your own.

In pursuing the crafting of this perfect scrapbook, fill it with pictures that capture only the realest of you, the brightest of smiles and the purest of hearts and meticulously choose the captions that flawlessly embody the perfect sentiments of the photos.

Whether your future leads you on an artistic military, scientific or business path, we must never forget that our future is always within our grasp, and we are forever blessed with the option to say yes or no to the opportunities presented to us and with the option to choose what identifies us as individuals.

I know our future will not always be all glitters and sparkles, but instead of choosing to remember it with our past mistakes and failures, sprinkle some glitters and sparkles all over your scrapbook. Choose to live your future in the most vibrant vitality and choose to honor your past with the most brilliant colors.

Class of 2016, go out there, explore the world, make a change! Our future awaits us, and it is up to us to collect the most colorful palette of memories. This is your life. Bedazzle it. Make the most of it. Live it. Congratulations Class of 2016! We made it, and I can't wait to see what our future beholds.

'Go Out And Make Your Dreams Happen'

Senior Class President Chrissy Norton's Message To Her Fellow QHS Graduates

Welcome all to the graduation for the class of 2016. My name is Chrissy Norton and I have had the privilege of serving as Quincy High's senior class president.

There are hundreds of people we could thank for helping all of us reach our graduation day. Thank you to the amazing teachers we have here at Quincy High, we truly would not be here, graduating today, without all of your help. We wouldn't have a plan for our future if it weren't for our guidance counselors. The nurses have aided us when we were ill. Our security guards made sure we were safe everyday. Our deans have given us support when we needed it most. Mr. Tag and Ms. Murray have made sure everyone feels comfortable, and enjoys going to school at Quincy High. Our families have pushed us along, and given us hope when we thought school was getting too difficult and our friends have been there helping every day along the way. So, thank you all so much for your support, and thank you for being here with us today.

As well as thanking everyone individually I would like to relay to you that we, the Class of 2016, are truly "thankful" for the things that have helped us reach this point... friends, family, and the traditions we have shared. We have a lot of reasons to be thankful for Quincy High. Not just for the muffins, M&M cookies, buffalo chicken calzones from the cafe or the new water fountain. Those are great, but there's so many things we experience every day that seem so minuscule and insignificant but really, these experiences have changed us.

I have seen a remarkable amount of friendships made in the class of 2016, that I know will last for the rest of our lives. I see laughter, smiles, and friendly faces when I walk through the hallways every day. We all have our own version of family at home, and many people would say that during our time here at Quincy High we've become like an extended family.

We've looked out for each other, helped each other, and we have enhanced each others lives, even if we didn't realize it. Homecoming, Spirit week, Prom, and The Rally, are all traditions we've experienced together. Traditions, like this, like graduation are so important because we should always celebrate our accomplishments, and the milestones we have reached. Some of you may think these traditions are silly or cliché, but they are ways in which we've come together, outside of the classroom to celebrate us, as a class.

We should all be so proud of each other. Among us, we have students going off to college, students joining the military to serve our country, we have students who will pursue a career in a trade, or go to a trade school and students who will immediately enter the workforce. And for those of us who are still unsure about our future, as many of us are... I would like to share a quote with you from the book Into the Wild which most of us read our junior year. It reads, "So many people live within unhappy circumstances and yet will not take the initiative to change their situation because they are conditioned to a life of security, conformity, and conservatism, all of which may appear to give one peace of mind, but in reality nothing is more dangerous to the adventurous spirit within a man than a secure future. The very basic core of a man's living spirit is his passion for adventure. The joy of life comes from our encounters with new experiences, and hence there is no greater joy than to have an endlessly changing horizon, for each day to have a new and different sun."

So seniors I urge you, don't be afraid to change your situation to make sure you're learning about something you love, or doing something you love every day.

Although I can feel the excitement to move on, and start a new path in life, I know we are all going to miss walking through the doors of Quincy High School, seeing our friends, and learning more about the world every day. I know it may be hard looking back at all of the memories we've made, and all of the great people we've met and knowing we have to leave it all behind. But, there are so many opportunities ahead of us, and I hope we all take advantage of these opportunities offered to us, like we have here at Quincy High School.

So, class of 2016. Those four years you pushed yourself through, thinking you couldn't do it, thinking it was too hard, thinking you were under too much pressure. That test you just took, that project you just presented, that essay you just wrote. Don't worry about all of that anymore. Because we're finished. We've made it through, and we're graduating high school.

Congratulations class of 2016. Now, go out and make your dreams happen, but don't forget where it all started and make sure you come back to share all of your stories and accomplishments. I know there will be some great ones.

'Continue Your Passion, Let It Guide You'

Senior Class President Stephen Condon's Message To His Fellow NQHS Graduates

Mayor Koch, Superintendent DeCristofaro, Deputy Superintendent Mulvey, Vice Chair Bregoli, Council President Hughes, Mr. Shaw and the faculty and staff of North Quincy High School, family, friends, and fellow graduates, Passion: a strong feeling of enthusiasm or excitement for something or about doing something.

I've lived in the City of Quincy for 15 years. I was not some child prodigy who is now graduating high school at the age of 15, I moved here in 2001, and I lived on the same street of a historical site, the Josiah Quincy House. I wasn't aware that this home even existed until a field trip with my elementary school.

Before walking into the home, we were required to put blue shoe covers on our sneakers to preserve the deteriorating structure. I remember the color because I would occasionally look over to my friends looking more at the shoe cover than at the artifacts in the home. It was at that moment I realized my fascination with history. As my friends gazed longingly at the exotic material over their sneakers, I was drooling, perhaps literally, over the visions pursued and the legacies established in this one home. That is when I started to fully embrace history.

And I see a similar desire in the North Quincy High School Class of 2016. Perhaps not in history, but a subject that has meaning for you. I was genuinely spellbound by the goals we set, and amazed at the ability of this class to fulfill them. Certainly, obstacles came our way. Whether it was in sports or in academics, our strength and determination to succeed were put to the test, but we possess something powerful.

Just a few months ago, I, like many of you here today, attended the infamous Turkey Day Football Game between the Raiders and they who shall not be named. At this game, I saw many familiar faces hugging, screaming, and cheering while people tried to teach me the basics of football. But one does not need to know the rules of football to recognize the unity and the enthusiasm that were present between members of the team and the entire North Quincy community cheering on from the stands. We did not win, but the Raiders on this field demonstrated resilience because they were motivated by something strong.

The Class of 2016 is not all football players. This is an extremely diverse school, and yet, despite our different interests or hobbies, there is something that always brings us together. From the Debate Team to the Manga Club to the always competitive History Bowl Team, we were given the opportunity to pursue our own goals. In that respect, the school has provided us with the tools we needed, but it has been the determination and resolve of this class to go out and make use of these opportunities and make a name for ourselves in what we love, not because it is easy, but because it is hard.

In these examples, that something, that has kept us all going forward and never looking back, is passion. The word passion is often used loosely, but, with the Class of 2016, I think it's applicable to each person seated before me in their red cap and red gown, a gown that I likely at some point bugged you to pay for. Some here allow their passion to take center stage, in this event we often see people challenge the status quo or advocate to push boundaries that reshape the society in which we exist.

To strive for your passion sets you apart from others. And this class has done just that. We did not succeed in every moment along the way. But, as Winston Churchill spoke to the British people, during a time of war, "Success is not final, failure is not fatal: it is the courage to continue that counts." I told the story about the Josiah Quincy House for two reasons. One, to show that my passion for history started at such a young age. And two, to reveal the passion of a man who, just like this class, did not shy away from a challenge. To the North Quincy High School Class of 2016: I've witnessed the passion you have had at this school. Continue it, let it guide you. If you do that, you may stumble occasionally, but ultimately, there are no limits to what you can accomplish

Educators Green Dedicated At Quincy High School

Granite Monument Honors Past, Present, Future Teachers

By TOM GORMAN

Students, officials and teachers recently gathered to dedicate the Educators Green at Quincy High School featuring a granite monument honoring the past, present and future teachers of the city and a plaque in memory of the late Bruce McDonald who taught English for 42 years at the school and chaired its English department.

The monument and plaque were unveiled during the June 7 ceremony in the park - now known as Educators Green - where the old Quincy High School stood near the entrance of the new school on Coddington Street. The nearly 10-foot high monument consists of an apple on top of two stacked books - "The Complete Works of Shakespeare" and "Life and Physical Science." The plaque honoring McDonald sits several feet in front of the sculpture.

"This space we dedicate here today is a testament to the recognition of the important role of public education and of our public school educators here in Quincy," said Quincy Education Association President Allison Cox. "Every day, teachers are entrusted with our community's most precious resource - our children. Generation after generation, our public school educators bring hope to our children, hope to our community and hope for our future. What better way for the city to honor our educators, both past and present, than with this beautiful space."

McDonald graduated from Quincy High in 1952 and went on to Harvard University. He returned to Quincy High School in 1960 as an English teacher and was named the head of the English department in the 1970s, a post he held for more than 30 years. He retired in 2002 and passed away in 2013.

School committee member Emily Lebo initially proposed the monument to be dedicated to McDonald, but Mayor Thomas Koch said it was decided to honor all teachers in the city.

"Today we are singling out a person, Bruce was certainly the best in his field, but we thought it (monument) should be in honor for all educators," Koch said, adding, "Each of us has had that special teacher or two that gave us that extra boost and made a difference in our life."

Lebo said she had the privilege of working with McDonald for 19 years, calling him "persnickety" at times but a champion of innovative teaching.

"He was demanding of himself and his teachers," she said. "Yet he also allowed his teachers to be innovative and to take risks with new or alternative strategies."

She noted that McDonald helped build programs for SAT and advanced placement courses and created the first true inclusion program to "ensure that all students at Quincy High School had access to English curriculum."

Lebo recalled how one of McDonald's former English students came back several years after graduation to thank him for the way he was taught.

"Bruce told him that 'I didn't teach you anything, I made it possible for you to learn,'" she said.

The current director of English, Mike Ellis, related how groups of former students checking out the new Quincy High School shortly after it opened in 2010 would ask him how long he had been teaching there. After he answered and they had figured when he started, Ellis said he inevitably would then be asked if he knew Bruce McDonald. He would tell them, "Yes, as a matter of fact I did."

"Then the stories would

A PLAQUE honoring the late Quincy High School teacher Bruce McDonald and Quincy teachers highlights the new Educators Green.

start," Ellis said. "Every group had people in it who would happily tell me stories about Bruce - things he had done, things he had said, ways in which they believed he had changed their lives. That's why I know that for thousands of former students of this school that covered 40 plus years, the name Bruce McDonald and Quincy High School are synonymous, stitched together forever in the fabric of their memories."

Ellis also said that McDonald's life "as a student and as a teacher was immersed in words." He said that there are two groups of people present; those who knew him and those who did not.

"If you, like me, were blessed to know Bruce, then I don't need to tell you the 1,001 reasons why he is worthy of this honor," he said.

Ellis went on to tell his fellow teachers that McDonald truly believed that "his life was more enriched by knowing you than yours was by knowing him."

Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro called McDonald an "extraordinary teacher" and praised his tenure as director of the English department.

"He had high expectations for students and staff," said DeCristofaro. "He was the perfect leader."

The monument was sculpted by Ryan Ackerman of Quincy, the grandson of 91-year-old Ed Monti of West Quincy, the well-known granite sculptor. Monti and his wife, Adele and daughter, Donna, were in attendance at the ceremony.

Granite from the Stoney Creek Quarry in Connecticut was used to create the monument. The Merrymount Park fountain was also created by stone from the same quarry.

Ackerman said it took him four months to create Educators Green monument, explaining that the planning and design for it began about a year ago. He said he was pleased with the results.

"This is the first time I've seen it since it was pieced together," Ackerman said proudly as he looked at his work.

NQHS Teacher Cara Pekarcik Bound For Antarctica

By SCOTT JACKSON

When the new school year starts in September, Cara Pekarcik, a biology teacher at North Quincy High School, will be thousands of miles away in a research vessel in the Southern Ocean off the coast of Antarctica.

Pekarcik, who has taught at North since 2006, will be taking part in a six-week PolarTREC (Teachers and Researchers Exploring and Collaborating) expedition starting in early September and continuing into October. PolarTREC, a program managed by the Arctic Research Consortium of the U.S., will send about a dozen educators from across the country on research expeditions to Alaska, Greenland, Siberia and the South Pole this year.

Pekarcik's six-week research trip will leave from Punta Arenas, Chile, and head to the Southern Ocean and the coastline of the Western Antarctic Peninsula via the Drake Passage aboard the research vessel Nathaniel B. Palmer, a 308-foot-long icebreaker. She will be joined by university researchers, who she will work with to study diatoms, a type of sea algae.

"I'm going to be working with researchers from URI, Old Dominion University and the University of South Florida. We're going to be doing water sampling in various locations in the Southern Ocean to study diatoms," Pekarcik explained in a recent interview.

"Diatoms are like a photosynthetic algae, so they're part of the basis of the food web in Antarctica. They photosynthesize and it just keeps building up from there. One of the things the researchers are interested in finding out more about is how these diatoms are able to sustain life there with such a low amount of iron.

"We're going to be doing a lot of different experiments, a lot of water filtering and water sampling to be able to collect as much as we can while we're there to bring back to the lab and grow samples and work with them again in the future."

Pekarcik said she began applying for the PolarTREC program six years ago, because she was looking for a chance to conduct research and bring that experience back into the classroom. While PolarTREC has expeditions in the Arctic and Antarctic, Pekarcik was intent on traveling to the latter.

"Antarctica is one of those places — it's so far away, it's so different and unique in terms of the animals that live there, the climate, and that level of unknown and maybe a little danger and excitement," she said. "I decided the Arctic might be easier for me to get to on my own versus the Antarctica. It's not really easy to get to Antarctica, so if you can find a way and someone is willing to take you there, then I'll go with it."

Last fall, Pekarcik learned she had been selected for the research mission in the Southern Ocean, and in February traveled to Fairbanks, Alaska, for a week of training at PolarTREC's headquarters.

"I got the official word in November and traveled to Alaska in February for training with PolarTREC and learned about what my role as a PolarTREC teacher will be, what my responsibilities are, the expectations for me in terms of lesson plans and how I'm going to bring this back to the community," she said.

As she prepares for her trip to Antarctic, Pekarcik is also making arrangements for the students in her classes next year, because she won't be returning to NQHS until late October.

As part of those arrangements, Pekarcik and the URI researchers who will be joining her on the research trip gave a recent presentation to her current and future students about the expedition — including samples of the diatoms the group will be studying.

"I think it's a good way to get them excited about it and sort of start to get them involved," Pekarcik said.

Those students — and others in the community — can follow the research expedition through a journal page on the PolarTREC website at polar trec.com/expeditions/southern-ocean-diatoms. She also has a Facebook page for the trip, "Ms. Pekarcik in Antarctica," and a Twitter page @MsPekar cik.

At one point during her trip, Pekarcik will be able to give an online presentation on the research mission via satellite phone, which she said her students would be able to view. Unlike other teachers on PolarTREC trips who can video chat with their students on a regular basis, Pekarcik said she wouldn't be able to do so from the Palmer.

At North, Pekarcik teaches tenth grade biology as well as marine science and zoology, both of which are electives for upperclassmen. Pekarcik plans on incorporating facets of her trip into her lesson plans.

"We've already started talking about incorporating things like some of the online tools the researchers use for things like graphing for visualizing their data, ways in which we incorporate cell growth into the curriculum... For the biology students, some basic biology about cell growth," Pekarcik said.

"The marine science kids, they're going to focus a lot while I'm away on plankton and diatoms, so they're going to kind of mimic what I'm going to do in Antarctica, but here in Quincy — kind of getting a sense of how it's similar but how it's different. Hopefully that will help them learn a little bit more about the food web here off the coast."

Pekarcik intends to reach out to students in the school system, and the community at-large, before and after her trip to share her experience.

"I hope to have before I leave this summer at least one presentation just to get everyone back to remembering 'Ms.P' is leaving and she is going to the Antarctic. I'm hoping I can get everyone together — at least have it open to the community as a prequel," Pekarcik said.

"When I come back there will definitely be outreach programs for students at all levels — I hope to be able to reach out within the community and also to outside communities for all levels — but also for the public as well.

"I want to be able to bring a lot of this information back, whether it's about Antarctica in general, it's about what I do in the classroom, or even about changes that are happening in the Arctic and Antarctic — climate change issues — because that's part of the basis of why we're going."

Pekarcik has no immediate plans for future research trips, but is exploring other opportunities that may be available to her.

"There are many opportunities for teachers that are out there, including a Teacher at Sea program with NOAA. Now that I have started to become in the PolarTREC world and meeting other teachers, I'm learning about lots of other experiences that are out there," Pekarcik said.

"A lot of them take place in the summer — It's very rare you get an opportunity to leave in the middle of the school year and I'm very fortunate that my administration, everybody, has been so supportive of this. Most of the others would probably be during the summer; I definitely look for them and always look for opportunities to keep myself involved in the science community."

Katryna Veasey: Special Athlete, Better Person

By BILL GRIFFIN

She is a better person than she is an athlete.

This is a tribute that is larger than most. It is remarkable because Quincy's Katryna Veasey has played out a sporting life for four years at Archbishop Williams which is richer than the stuff of dreams. Yet when her coach speaks of her, he speaks of something more enduring than sports.

"I've coached hockey for 30 years and softball for 10. Katryna is one of the best people I have ever coached," said softball coach Bill O'Brien. "She is a great athlete. She could play any sport she wanted, but what I'll remember most is the person, not the athlete."

To appreciate the meaning of what O'Brien says, consider the athlete. Then, think of how good the person must be. Veasey played on varsity in three sports for four years. She played 12 varsity seasons of volleyball, basketball and softball. In those 12 seasons, her team made the tournament 12 times.

She was a three-sport captain as a senior. She was a two-sport captain as a junior. She was a seven-time all star in three sports in the Catholic Central League, one of the toughest conferences in the state. In an age of specialization, she played three sports, and she played them on the highest level.

She will play volleyball in college at Regis. She played basketball on the floor of the Garden for four years. She started in a state championship game. Her team won four sectional titles, two state crowns and advanced twice to the EMass finals.

She socked a memorable home run early in her softball career against her hometown Quincy team at McCoy Field. She put a grand finishing touch on a singular career by driving home the winning run in a 1-0 victory over Dighton-Rehoboth in the first round of the sectional tournament.

"The home run against

QUINCY'S KATRYNA VEASEY has left a remarkable sports legacy at Archbishop Williams High School. The 2016 graduate excelled for four years in three varsity sports – volleyball, softball and basketball – and was honored as the school's Female Athlete of the Year in 2016.

Quincy is one memory I'll always enjoy. It was my first grand slam, it was against my hometown team, it was exciting," said Veasey.

She went where few athletes go. She played in the biggest of moments in the biggest of games on the largest stages. Yet, when she reflects on it all, she thinks not of the games, but of the people she met and touched over the past four years.

"I realize I had a special opportunity, one that most athletes never get. I was lucky. I'm very grateful for that," she said. "What matters to me most was the people I met: My coaches, co-captains and teammates. The fun came from sharing the success with them. I love my teammates."

"She is a leader and a student of any game she plays," said O'Brien. "She studies her opponent. She only has to see an opponent once, and she knows how to attack her. If kids had questions, they went to Katryna. Her leadership is off the charts."

She was an outside hitter in volleyball, a forward in basketball, and a shortstop in softball. She never wavered in her love for all three. It was not easy. Volleyball is her best sport, the one she will play in college. These days, an athlete does not stop playing her No. 1 sport when its season is finished. She didn't play basketball and softball instead of playing volleyball. She played basketball and softball along with playing volleyball.

"I played club volleyball and basketball at the same time in the winter," said

Veasey. "If there was a conflict between the two, I went to the basketball game because that was my first commitment during the winter season. I never thought about giving up basketball. I've been playing basketball since I was 10 years old."

Veasey is an honor-roll student. She played three sports and did her work in school. She also played two sports at the same time and flourished in the classroom. There were days which did not contain enough hours.

"It did teach me about time-management skills," she smiled. "Sometimes, I'm not as organized as I should be. It was good for me."

Her senior year in basketball was a satisfying one. Archbishop Williams won the state title her junior year. Alanna Gilmer and Jaylen Williams, two Division 1 college players, graduated from that team. It was a huge loss, a loss which would stagger most teams. But the Bishops spread the ball around, and Veasey and Victoria Dean captained one last ride to the Garden, a fourth straight berth in the EMass finals before falling to Bishop Fenwick.

"I know some people doubted us, but I had confidence my teammates would step up and improve. Our coach (Matt Mahoney) was great with us," she said. "It was satisfying. Alanna and Jaylen were great players. They got a lot of credit which was fine. But it was good to see the whole team, all the players get the credit in my senior year."

She finished her time in high school by hitting .358. She had 19 RBI, scored 16 runs and belted five home runs. She also played a near flawless shortstop. In her final two years, at the busiest and most demanding position on the field, she made a total of four errors. This is a special player.

"She has great range and good hands, but her arm sets her apart. She has a gun," said O'Brien. "Even if she just knocks down the ball, she can get the runner because her arm is so strong. That is unusual at shortstop because it is a long throw."

This has been the time of girls who played varsity in three sports for four years. North's Marissa McGue and Quincy's Gabby Jerahian played soccer, basketball and lacrosse for four years. Quincy's Nicole Jorgensen started in volleyball, basketball and softball for three years. In her senior year, she started in volleyball and basketball, and threw the javelin in track.

There was a time when the four of them – McGue, Jerahian, Jorgensen and Veasey – played on the same team. Imagine.

"We played together in youth sports," said Veasey. "There was a lot of laughs, a lot of good times. It wasn't as competitive when we were younger. We still keep in touch. One of the best parts of sports is the strong friends I've made. Playing three sports gave the chance to make more friends."

Her coach, Bill O'Brien, knows all this well. When he thinks of Katryna Veasey, he will remember the person first. Then he will remember the athlete. It will be a fine memory.

Bill Dunn Jr. Road Race Saturday

The Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 25 in Houghs Neck.

The event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other. This is the 10th year the road race is being held and each year the support and participation is remarkable.

Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a 5-mile run or 2-mile walk beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for 1st Place Male/Female Runner and 1st Houghs Neck Resident Male/Female Runner.

The first 300 people to register will receive a free race T-shirt.

Proceeds from the event benefit the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship which has provided scholarships to Quincy High School students, donations to Childrens Hospital, Manets Youth Football and other local organizations.

The registration fee is $30 for runners; however, for those who sign up before June 20th, the registration fee is $25. The registration fee is $20 for walkers prior to June 20th, after June 20th the fee is $25. Children walking are free.

Registration forms are available on line at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Dr., Quincy, MA 02169. Register also online at www.active.com or www.coolrunning.com.

Morrisette Wins Two For 'Sully'

Ceremony Remembers Assistant Coach John Sullivan; Team Downs Cohasset In Doubleheader For 5-0 Start

By BILL GRIFFIN

If ever there were two games Morrisette wanted to win, it was the doubleheader against Cohasset at Adams Field Sunday night.

Morrisette held the night in honor of assistant coach John Sullivan who died suddenly in November. Sullivan coached at Morrisette for 10 years. His family was honored with a ceremony between games. Two ex-teammates stood with the family on the field. Head coach Steve Maze told fine stories about his close friend. Rows of seats filled with players he had coached and lives he had touched.

Post 294 supplied the perfect touch to the night with a sweep. In the first game, Pat Keohane cracked three triples and Owen Lynch pitched six strong innings as Morrisette rolled to a convincing 11-5 victory.

In the second game, Shawn Kelley (a screaming double), James Mocchio, and Troy Shepherd drilled clutch hits in a three-run eighth, and Josh Helfrich struck out the final batter with the bases loaded to carry Morrisette to its third extra-inning win and a 5-0 start with an 8-6 victory over Cohasset.

"I looked at the schedule at the beginning of the season, and I knew this was the night we wanted to have a ceremony for Sully," said Maze. "We both had great respect for Cohasset. (Cohasset coach) Scott Arnold goes back to when Ray Cattaneo was here. It was a Sunday night, and it was easy for Sully's family to be here."

"To win the two games meant a lot to me and lot to people who came tonight."

Sullivan's mother Sheila, his father Jack, his stepmother Dianne, and his sister Julie walked onto the field between games. Helfrich, Shepherd, and Joe Brady presented flowers to Sheila, Dianne and Julie. Bill Walker and Bryan Linsky, two of Sullivan's teammates from North, joined the family. Sullivan is a member of the North Quincy Hall of Fame. Maze spoke and brought alive the memory of his friend. Jack threw out the first pitch.

"I think I rehearsed what I was going to say 25 times, and every time I broke down. But tonight, I knew I needed to hold things together," said

Maze. "Sully was the first person I called when I got the job. We were together for 10 years. If I needed to talk about baseball or about life, he was always there. I miss him dearly."

The foundation of the sweep and Morrisette's sweet start has been a balance of hitting, pitching and defense. Post 294 scored 38 runs in its first five games. They had 19 runs and 24 hits in the sweep over Cohasset. Keohane was a terror in the No. 3 slot with five hits (four for extra bases) and four RBI in the doubleheader, but this is far more than a one-man show.

FACET JOINT SYNDROME

"Facet joint syndrome" is inflammation of the connections between the bones of the spine (vertebrae) that provide the spinal column with flexibility. Aside from allowing the spine to bend and rotate, they also prevent the back from slipping too far forward or twisting without limits. When these joints become swollen due to osteoarthritis or injury, it can lead to pain in the neck and may even cause headaches and difficulty moving. If the affected joints are in the back, pain may arise in the lower back, buttocks, or thighs when bending backward and rotating. The goal of chiropractic treatment is to alleviate pain by identifying the dysfunctional joints and unlocking them, which is accomplished with gentle and precise manipulation.

People who suffer from this problem typically complain that they walk in a hunched over position, and some complain that they have to turn their entire body to look over to the right or left. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can help you evaluate your situation and decide together what procedure is right for you. You can trust the expertise we provide at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Now is the time to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. Because facet joint syndrome may recur, periodic check-ups are recommended.

Red Raider Football Alumni Award Four Scholarships

By HELENA SKINNER

The North Quincy High School Red Raider Football Alumni Association recently presented scholarships to graduates of the NQHS Class of 2016.

Aidan Brown and Conor Pound received NQHS Alumni Football Scholarships and Emily Anglehart and Savannah Flynn received NQHS Football Alumni Student Athlete Scholarships.

Brown was selected varsity football captain senior year. He played football all four years and was also a member of the track team. In 9th and 10th grade he played JV basketball as well. He was named to the All-Star Patriot League for football in both junior and senior year and was named Patriot League All Scholastic his senior year. Aidan plans to attend University of New Hampshire in the fall.

Pound has played on the NQHS football team all four years and started on varsity during his sophomore year. He has also been a member of the basketball team starting on varsity his junior year and was elected captain during senior year. Conor plans to attend Bridgewater State University in the fall.

Anglehart is a passionate soccer player and was on the NQHS team all four years. She was also a member of the softball team. Emily would like to use her love of athletics and fitness to pursue a career in physical therapy and will be attending Dean College in the fall.

Flynn has played both varsity hockey and lacrosse while at NQHS. She served as captain of the varsity hockey team senior year and made the varsity lacrosse team her sophomore year. Savannah plans to attend Franklin Pierce University in the fall.

everybody came to the party. Mocchio had three hits, two runs scored, and played an excellent centerfield.

Keohane and Kelley had a double, single, an RBI, and a run scored. Tim Keohane had a pair of hits and an RBI. Shepherd had a single and an RBI. Helfrich added a double, two runs scored and an RBI. Brendan McDonald and Martin McCormack each scored runs.

In the opener, Shepherd had two hits and an RBI while Tim Keohane chipped in with a single and two RBI. Helfrich had a double and an RBI. McCormack scored a run. That's eight players contributing to the offense. That is what coaches dream about.

"Right through the order, we've hit the ball well in our first five games. I'm very pleased with the way we've played so far," said Maze.

And they also pitched. Lynch combined a good fastball with an excellent curve to give eight hits, two earned runs and struck out four over six innings in the opener. Kelley finished it with an impressive 1-2-3 seventh.

In the second game, righty Matt Eagles battled through six innings, allowing eight hits, five runs while fanning three. He had a good fastball. He threw strikes. He only gave three earned runs, one walk, and allowed his defense to help him. Helfrich was terrific with men on base. He stranded two in the seventh, escaping a first-and-third jam with two harmless ground balls. In the eighth, with the bases loaded and the tying run at second base, he simply overpowered Owen Gates with a fastball for the final out.

"Josh has experience pitching legion ball. No matter what the situation is, it doesn't bother him. He's our big gun in the late innings," said Maze.

The defense has been good. Morrisette entered the Cohasset doubleheader with three straight errorless games. Post 294 wasn't quite flawless against Cohasset, but they made the plays with men on base late in the second game. In the opener, McCormack was exceptional at shortstop. In the second game, Shepherd made the play of the night with a diving stab of a shot to his right over the third base bag in the second. His throw was a touch low, but Helfrich dug it out to complete the defensive highlight of the game.

It was a memorable and rewarding night. Morrisette honored a great coach. Post 294 won two games. Steve Maze told a funny story about a good friend.

"Sully always took care of the off-season organization," said Maze. "I had to do it this year. I texted the other coaches. We decided to meet at Bugaboo Creek which was absolutely Sully's favorite place. When we got there, it was closed. I couldn't believe it. I figured Sully was having a laugh on us up in heaven somewhere."

If he was looking down Sunday night, he had a smile and a laugh as well. His team not only played two. They won two. It doesn't get any better than that.

on Aug. 21 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., with a rain date of Aug. 28.

John Brothers, the executive director of Quincy Asian Resources Inc., which hosts the annual event, said this year's August Moon Festival is moving from Hancock Street in Quincy Center to the parking lot of the North Quincy MBTA station, because of ongoing construction in the downtown.

The event is free to the public and includes food, entertainment and cultural activities and displays. It is among the largest one-day events on the South Shore, drawing in more than 10,000 attendees in recent years.

Brothers said he plans to work with several businesses in North Quincy to provide parking for festivalgoers.

The event was held at the North Quincy MBTA station as recently as 2003, before moving elsewhere. Brothers said the event is "all set in theory" to utilize the parking lot at the station this August.

"We're waiting for the final OK from them (the MBTA) after they pass it around to all concerned parties," he stated.

Scheele said the city would work with-QARI if the MBTA does not give final approval to use the North Quincy station.

VISTA Heading To Germantown

By JOHN GALLUZZO
Development Writer
South Shore YMCA

Late last year the South Shore YMCA received the good word: a VISTA would be heading for Germantown.

This May, South Shore Y staff flew to Miami for three days of training on how to supervise a VISTA member, what is expected of them and for them, and much more. The staff member met with other soon-to-be VISTA supervisors from all around the United States, and even a few others from Massachusetts. This August, the VISTA will finally arrive.

Who is the VISTA? That has not been determined yet.

What is a VISTA? Well, that, at least, is something that can be explained.

Back in 1965 the federal government launched the Americorps VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) program with the notion of attacking the myriad problems of poverty in the country at its roots. Moreover, it asked for its members — technically not volunteers — to take on that work while being paid a poverty level salary. In that way, the VISTAs, or VISTA members, could better understand the issues being faced by the people they were helping.

But there was a catch. A VISTA member working in a community was not allowed to provide direct service in any way. Instead, they built capacity for nonprofit organizations. That structure still holds true today, more than 50 years since the program's founding. VISTAs work behind the scenes, creating partnerships, building infrastructure, helping the organizations grow. When they are done with their first year of service, they can re-up on site, or move onto another project, for as many as five years. But whatever their decision, hopefully by the end of that year in service the VISTA has left behind something tangible in the form of ideas, programs, databases, evaluation systems and more, that the next VISTA can pick right up to continue the work.

While the South Shore YMCA does not know who the VISTA is yet personally, it knows generally who it may be. VISTAs tend to be recent college graduates, a few more being women than men. Then again, they may be retirees looking to give back at the other end of their careers. They almost all have previous volunteer experience, and many have a passion for nonprofit work.

And the South Shore Y knows what the VISTA will be doing when he or she arrives later this summer. The Germantown Neighborhood Center sits at the heart of Quincy's poorest neighborhood, a place where kids, especially, can use creative supports of many kinds. In the neighborhood center is one of those creative places. The Salah Foundation Music Clubhouse is equipped with everything needed to deliver music instruction — in guitar, bass, drums, voice and studio production — on an ongoing basis. And, thanks to several funders, like the Music Drives Us Foundation, House of Blues Music Forward Foundation, the Music & Youth Foundation, and the City of Quincy and the CDBG program, the clubhouse is staffed with instructors who can teach the necessary lessons. When the Y's VISTA arrives, the task at hand will be capacity building for the clubhouse: examining current programming and suggesting alternatives; creating evaluation systems for the clubhouse programs and staff; recruiting volunteers to help the kids learn and grow; creating a mentoring system; and more. The VISTA will work as a member of the Music Clubhouse team, behind the scenes, to help the clubhouse grow. More than music, the clubhouse is a place where skills are learned and horizons broadened, providing pathways to future careers.

The VISTA assignment description will soon be posted, and the applications accepted. This summer, one VISTA will begin their year of service with the goal of leaving behind something that will last ten times as long, if not more. For more information on the Americorps VISTA program, please visit www.my.americorps.gov.

The South Shore YMCA is a charity serving eleven local communities: Quincy, Randolph, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Hanover. For information on how to support its work through volunteering or donations, contact Mary Orne at morne@ssymca.org or 781-264-9400 ext. 3306.

Proposed Ordinance Could Lead To Dog Parks

By SCOTT JACKSON

A proposed ordinance pending before the City Council could set the stage for new dog parks in Quincy.

The ordinance, introduced by Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, would allow the Park and Recreation Board to designate areas where dogs would be allowed to run and play off-leash. The dogs would need to be supervised in the designated dog park.

On Monday, a public hearing was held on the proposed off-leash ordinance. The council's ordinance committee did not take up the matter during the meeting that followed.

Frank Taylor, a Winthrop Street resident, was the only resident to speak at the hearing and voiced support for the new ordinance; three other residents wrote letters in support of the change.

Taylor underscored the benefits provided by allowing dogs to play off-leash in designated dog parks. He said studies have shown communities with dog parks have fewer nuisance dogs, and helps dogs become less fearful of people and other animals, leading to a smaller chance of attack.

Dog parks can also be beneficial to people, Taylor added.

"The residents are the ones who benefit the most from dog parks," he said. "An off-leash dog park will help encourage residents to exercise. It also fosters a new sense of community. They have their own responsibilities within it. It creates more responsible dog owners."

Church On The Beach Sunday Mornings

Christ Church Mobile Ministries in conjunction with Union Congregational Church of Wollaston announces "Church on the Beach" on Sundays beginning at 8 a.m.

Bring a beach chair or a blanket and if the tide's right take a swim after the service.

The service is brief, Christ-centered and there is no offering.

Rev. Martha Swanson will be the preacher this week and pastor Jack Swanson will say some prayers. For more information call Union Congregational Church at 617-479-6661.

OBITUARIES

Daniel L. Harrington, 83

A funeral Mass for Daniel L. Harrington, 83, of Arizona will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Saturday in St. John the Evangelist Church, North Cambridge.

Mr. Harrington died June 3.

Mr. Harrington, son of Mildred Collins Harrington and Daniel L. Harrington Sr., was born in Boston on Dec. 28, 1932. He attended St. John's Elementary School in Cambridge and Quincy High School. He graduated from Northeastern University in Boston with a Bachelor of Science degree in business. Mr. Harrington retired from Verizon Communications, completing a 36-year career in telecommunications installation, repair and marketing.

He is survived by his wife of 29 years, Gloria LeClerck Harrington, three sons Daniel, Michael and Stephen, sisters Patricia Cyr (Somerville) and Mildred Ennis (Billerica), a brother John Harrington (Arlington), plus numerous grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

Mr. Harrington was an avid Boston Red Sox and New England Patriots fan.

DANIEL L. HARRINGTON

He enjoyed traveling, antique Mercedes cars, collecting John Wayne western memorabilia, home improvement projects and caring for his beloved Maine coon cat - Teddie.

A one-hour viewing will be held at the church prior to the funeral Mass. Inurnment following in St. Patrick's Cemetery in Watertown.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Joseph's Catholic School, 750 Bill Grey Rd., Cottonwood, AZ or to the Verde Valley Humane Society, 1520 West Mingus Ave., Cottonwood, AZ 86326.

An online guestbook is available at westcottfuneral-home.com.

A celebration of life and 80th birthday for Robert "Bob" Parker Johnson, 79, of Quincy will be held Sunday, June 26, from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Elks Club, Quarry Street, Quincy.

Mr. Johnson died Jan. 23, 2016. He was joyfully spending his twentieth plus winter in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, when an incredible opportunity presented itself. Great benefits, reunite with friends and family, an eternity of sunshine - it was not something he could pass up.

Mr. Johnson lived a very full life and it all began June 27, 1936, when he was born to Sulo and Pauline Eleanor (Parker) Johnson. A lifelong Quincy resident, his youth was spent growing up on California Avenue in West Quincy where the quarries provided him with many enjoyable summers of swimming. In the winter he could be found shoveling snow from the outdoor basketball courts at the "Y" just so he could practice. Mr. Johnson was a graduate of Quincy High School and went on to receive an Associates Degree in business management from Newbury College.

Mr. Johnson was a great friend. He made many friends in his lifetime from all over the globe. He cherished those friendships and all of the great times he had shared. It was through his friends that he was given a few nicknames. Many knew him as "Gopher" or "Parker."

A true patriot, Mr. Johnson proudly served his country as a member of the U.S. Navy onboard the escort destroyer Fred T. Berry. He received an honorable discharge in October

Robert Parker Johnson, 79

ROBERT PARKER JOHNSON

1962. He loved sharing stories of his time in the Navy, particularly how he made extra cash betting guys he could and would jump off the ship to the water below. Those summers spent at the quarries had paid off handsomely!

Upon his discharge from the Navy, Mr. Johnson worked at the Fore River Shipyard as a clerk. An ambitious young man, he held down many part-time jobs to help himself get ahead. He proudly worked for the city of Quincy Recreation Department from October 1961 to April 1971. Mr. Johnson also worked as a bartender at the now defunct Palmer Pub and he squeezed in a few odd nights working at a package store in Dorchester. He was eventually hired by the Seiler/Sodexo Corporation where he eventually became a senior computer programmer/analyst. He worked just over 24 years for them from February 1974 until he retired in October 1998. For a short time after he worked part-time as a contract programmer updating systems by converting older computer language to newer versions. He also did some part-time census work.

Mr. Johnson married his one true love Carole Anne Marie Flood of Pembroke on June 22, 1958. He was extremely proud of their three children and their families, Robert Parker Johnson Jr., QFD, and his wife Dawn of Whitman, John Raymond Johnson and his wife Melinda of NJ, and Barbara Jean (Johnson) Smyth and her husband Paul, BFD, of Braintree. He was blessed with seven grandchildren and 11 nieces and nephews.

Never a quitter, Mr. Johnson was also married to Virginia Ricciardi and he would eventually meet and marry Susan Deegan.

Mr. Johnson was a simple man. He was honest, had a great sense of humor and a strong determination. Mr. Johnson's signature every day look was all his: collared Polo shirt, Bermuda shorts, if it was chilly maybe a light sports jacket - all of which were always paired with a Boston Red Sox baseball cap, his glasses and that memorable smile of his.

An avid sports fan, Mr. Johnson proudly followed all of our local teams. He loved the Red Sox, Bruins, Celtics, Patriots and the Revolution. It must be said his favorite sport was basketball. He played basketball at an early age for the Adams Shore School. He went on to play varsity basketball at Quincy High School. After high school, Bob continued playing basketball where he played on a number of teams in numerous organized leagues. Bob loved the fact that he also played semi-pro ball for and against some of the best players around.

Mr. Johnson was an active member for 51 years of the Quincy Lodge of Elks #943 joining in March 1966. He proudly served as treasurer/finance officer for four years when the Elks were located in Quincy Square. He was an honorary founder and permanent benefactor of the Elks Foundation. He was awarded Lifetime Membership in August 2001.

He forever remained loyal to the U.S. Navy and was an active member of the Tin Can Sailors organization who work to preserve U.S. Naval Destroyer History. He was also an active member of the American Legion.

Mr. Johnson was very generous. He donated to a number of charities for years. He annually donated to the American Cancer Society, the Newbury College Alumni Annual Fund, the International Association for Medical Assistance to Travelers, and to many of the Elks charitable events.

Mr. Johnson loved to travel and he traveled extensively. He visited each of the 50 United States. He traveled numerous times to Europe and visited many European countries. He visited his son and his family in England often. He would love to tell of how he had breakfast in London (England), lunch in Calais (France) and had supper in Oxford (England). He also traveled throughout South America and Canada. In his travels, he had developed a special fondness for Mexico, particularly Puerto Vallarta where he had spent his winters for 20 plus years. He had hopes of one day traveling to Australia and New Zealand.

We want Mr. Johnson to know he did a great job here on Earth and wish him a safe journey. We will always remember his smile, his warmth, his energy, his love for life, family and friends. He worked very hard all his life and lived every spare moment to the fullest. He truly made a difference in the lives of many and he will be missed.

Mr. Johnson would have been 80 on June 27, 2016. We would like you to join us and celebrate Bob's wonderful life and his 80th birthday together. Dress casual please!

Internment will be private.

Finally, the family asks that in lieu of flowers and in honor of Mr. Johnson you remember how great the gift of life and all it offers and don't cry because it's over, smile because it happened!

Affordable Housing

struggling to hold on to our houses and pay the increases in our taxes. We don't want our children to leave this town; we want them to be able to find housing in this town, because they worked for it and so did we."

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, a member of the Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee, said affordable housing would benefit teachers and other municipal employees, workers at non-profit agencies, seniors, and young professionals among others who are being squeezed out of the city by rising housing costs. The investment in Quincy Center, he added, should benefit all.

"Public investment and/or the sale of valuable public land to private developers cannot exclusively be for the benefit of one affluent class of residents alone," Bennett said. "It's not just. The judgment of history is that in the long run, such policy is never wise policy."

Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs, noted the city's new housing production plan says 40 percent of residents are cost-burdened by housing.

"The need for affordable housing is not a new issue in the city. It's not a new issue for us. We have seen it for at least 20 years," Strollo told the council. "I know you support the downtown development. We did too, and we think we can balance the downtown development with creating more units."

Two members of the four-person URDP citizens advisory committee signaled their support for the proposed amendment Monday — David McCarthy, a former School Committee member, and Maralin Manning. The advisory committee has endorsed the change.

McCarthy said the change would help spur the redevelopment of the Hancock Lot.

"The Hancock Lot really is a key to unlocking the downtown," he said. "It gives the city the ability to go in and spend some money to revitalize to the point where developers are going to line up to want to build in that area. It gives the city the opportunity to begin to plan public plazas and parking structures."

"We truly support, as a group, this amendment," Manning added.

File & Suspend Even With These Changes

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

You probably heard that changes in the law now affect the way you file for certain benefits. These changes place limits on when voluntary suspension and reinstatement can begin for you and your family members who might also be entitled to benefits on that record. This is not the demise of "file and suspend." It's still one of your best tools for boosting your Social Security benefit after you reach your full retirement age.

The Bipartisan Budget Act of 2015 made changes to the Social Security claims filed by married couples. The law affected an unintended loophole primarily used by married couples to gain more money.

If you're full retirement age or older and apply for Social Security retirement benefits, you can suspend your benefits for any amount of time up to age 70. You may do this to earn "delayed retirement credits," which result in a higher benefit payment when you turn 70 or when you request reinstatement of benefits, whichever comes first.

Under the new law, when you submit a request to suspend your benefits to earn delayed retirement credits on or after April 30, 2016, you will no longer be able to receive spouse's or widow(er)'s benefits during this voluntary delay period. In addition, if you suspend your benefit, any benefits payable to your spouse and children on your record (except for a divorced spouse) will also be suspended for the same time period.

There is an exception. A request for voluntary suspension will not suspend a divorced spouse's benefit. Also, your divorced spouse can receive benefits on your record during this voluntary delay period.

Remember, you can still plan and make the most of your retirement benefit by filing and suspending. These new rules don't prevent you from doing what's best for you and your family. We have a wealth of retirement information at www.socialsecurity.gov/planners/retire.

For more information and answer to your questions about these changes in the law, go to www.socialsecurity.gov/planners/retire/claiming.html.

Jean Bates, 89

A funeral for Jean Bates, 89, of Quincy was held Tuesday in Faith Lutheran Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Bates died June 13 at South Shore Hospital following a sudden illness. She was the beloved wife of 60 years to the late Thomas G. Bates, Jr.

Raised in Holbrook, she was a daughter of the late Robert P. and Edith E. (Stewart) Seeliger. She had made her home in Quincy for 70 years where she was a longtime, active member of Faith Lutheran Church, and a founding member of the Quincy Neighborhood Housing Association.

Mrs. Bates owned and operated the South Shore Car Wash on Centre Street in Quincy from the early 1980s until present, and had previously worked as a real estate agent in and around Quincy.

Mother of Paul R. Bates and his wife Nancy of Quincy. Loving grandmother of Lisa Bates-Coleran and her husband John, Jeremy Bates, Chad Bates and Craig Keefe and his wife Danielle, and great-grandmother of Chelsea Bates and Aric Rhodes. She was the sister of the late Arlene Nute and Betty Jane Marshall.

The Rev. Heidi Johnston, the church's pastor, officiated the funeral.

Funeral arrangements were made by Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Interment private.

Memorial donations may be made to the Faith Lutheran Church Memorial Fund, 201 Granite St., Quincy, MA 02169

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You clever Ewes and Rams love nothing more than to rise to a challenge. So, by all means, if you feel sure about your facts, step right up and defend your side of the issue.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've done some great work recently. Now it's time to reward yourself with something wonderful, perhaps a day at a spa or a night out with someone very special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You love to talk, but don't forget to make time to do a little more listening; otherwise, you could miss out on an important message someone might be trying to send to you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect indicates some uncertainty about one of your goals. Use this period of shifting attitudes to reassess what you really want and what you're ready to do to get it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your social life is picking up, and you'll soon be mingling with old friends and making new ones. But 'twixt the fun times, stay on top of changing workplace conditions.

VIRGO (August 23 September 22) A trusted friend offers understanding as you vent some long-pent-up feelings. Now, move on from there and start making the changes you've put off all this time.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might well feel uneasy as you face a difficult situation involving someone close to you. But you know you're doing the right thing, so stick with your decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're a good friend to others. Now's the time to allow them to be good friends to you. Rely on their trusted advice to help you get through an uncertain period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family and friends are always important, but especially so at this time. Despite your hectic workplace schedule, make a real effort to include them in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That project you've been working on is almost ready for presentation. But you still need some information from a colleague before you can consider it done.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't let those negative attitudes that have sprung up around you drain your energies. Shrug them off, and move ahead with the confidence that you can get the job done.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hardworking Piscean. A nice, refreshing plunge into the social swim can recharge your physical and emotional batteries.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to travel and be with people. You probably would be happy as a social director on a cruise ship.

United First Parish Church Closes Permanently To Vehicular Traffic
at 9:18 P.M. Friday, June 24, 2016

THE LAST MOTORIST to drive on Hancock Street between City Hall and United First Parish Church (photo above) was Paul Hines, an assistant city solicitor, who drove his black 2009 GMC Yukon Hybrid SUV with his two sons, Liam Hines and Brendan Hines, and two nephews, Dan Andrews and Sean Andrews, past the historic buildings at 9:18 p.m. Friday, June 24. After the drive, Hancock Street from Washington Street to Temple Street (between the two historic landmarks) was closed permanently to vehicular traffic. The area is now under construction for the new Adams Hancock Green. About eight hours after the roadway was closed, a new traffic pattern opened allowing vehicular traffic in two directions past United First Parish Church on Washington and Temple Streets. The photo in the lower left shows two-way traffic at Hancock and Temple Streets in the 1300 block of Hancock Street. Temple Street had been a one-way for decades. More coverage Pages 4, 16 and 17.

Pilot Ferry Service Coming To Squantum This Summer

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will test the waters this summer for ferry service between Squantum Point Park, downtown Boston and the Boston Harbor Islands.

Quincy is partnering with the town of Winthrop on the pilot program, which is scheduled to launch in August and continue into September. Quincy has been without ferry service since September 2013, when the MBTA closed its terminal at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Winthrop began its own, non-subsidized ferry service this year, and has a 70-passenger vessel that will be used during the trial run.

Chris Walker, the director of policy and information for Mayor Thomas

Koch, announced the pilot program at Monday night's City Council meeting. The operating details for the ferry service — including the schedule and number of trips — are still being ironed out, he stated, and a community meeting would likely take place before the pilot program begins.

"This is truly a tremendous opportunity and will provide critical operational data as longer-term, regional ferry service planning continues," Walker said.

The council on Monday approved in an 8-0 vote a $100,000 appropriation from the city's waterways improvement fund for rehabilitation work at the Squantum Point Park pier necessary before the ferry service can begin.

"This is a terrific opportunity for the city," said Ward 6 Councillor William Harris, whose district includes Squantum and Marina Bay. "It's a great opportunity for my ward."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said Quincy should be exploring water transportation as a way to reduce vehicle traffic on the congested roads that lead into Boston.

"This is a real victory for the city," she said.

Walker said the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation will provide a $50,000 grant for the rehabilitation work. Sen. John Keenan and Rep. Bruce Ayers — who were both in attendance for Monday's meeting — are also working to secure $100,000 in funding that would reimburse the city for its appropriation, or provide for additional rehabilitation work.

"It's a small step, but it's a small step in the right direction," said Ayers, who represents Squantum and Marina Bay on Beacon Hill.

Keenan said the information gathered during the pilot program would help state officials who are in the process of putting together a master plan for Squantum Point Park; improvements to Commander Shea Boulevard could be included as part of the larger plan. The 46-acre park, operated by the DCR, has been open to the public since 2001.

Joe Newton New Assistant City Clerk

NEW ASSISTANT City Clerk Joseph Newton was sworn-in Monday night after his appointment was unanimously confirmed by the City Council. Newton, a former Ward 6 councillor, most recently served as the director of operations for the Department of Public Works. Pictured with him are (from left) his wife, Laura; daughter, Abigail, age 11; son Michael, age 9; and City Clerk Nicole Crispo. Crispo had served as the assistant city clerk prior to her April appointment to her current post.

Council OKs New Quincy Center Plan

City New Master Developer

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night approved a new plan for the redevelopment of the downtown that sets the stage for Quincy to serve as the master developer for the project.

The council on Monday voted 8-0 to approve the fourth amendment to the Quincy Center Urban Revitalization and Development Plan, which Mayor Thomas Koch had introduced in May.

The latest iteration of the URDP calls for $128 million in public investment to spur private development projects at the Hancock Lot and the former site of the Ross Garage. The money would be used for infrastructure improvements, pedestrian plazas, parking structures, and the acquisition and demolition of several buildings.

The URDP amendment provides an outline for actions the city plans to take, and was needed after Koch dumped previous master developer Street-Works in 2014. Further council votes are required before any city funds are allocated, and development projects need Planning Board approval.

City councillors and members of the public had expressed trepidation about a potential lack of affordable housing in Quincy Center during a public hearing last week on the URDP.

After that public hearing, members of Koch's administration worked with the council to insert language in the URDP amendment reaffirming the creation of housing opportunities "available to a variety of age and income groups including elders, young professionals and working people" as a goal for the downtown redevelopment.

Teen Mothers Program No Longer Offered

By TOM GORMAN

For nearly four decades, more than 300 teenage mothers were able to finish high school thanks to a program offered by the Quincy Public Schools.

The five students who graduated this month will be the last of the Teen Mother Program. Because of the lack of enrollment for next year, the program will not be offered.

"For the first time in 38 years, we will not have the Teen Mother Program," School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro told the school committee on June 15. "It was always our goal to go out of business after some period of time."

DeCristofaro noted that teenage pregnancy is on the decline statewide and across the country.

"If you look at the national and state statistics, there are fewer teenage pregnancies," he said.

The program that started in 1978 was a national model, known for counseling and educating pregnant teenagers and helping them complete coursework to FINAL SECTION of the Ross Garage came down Saturday, ending a month-long demolition process. The garage, which opened in 1972, closed for good May 23. The site will be paved over and turned into a new 200-vehicle surface lot, which is expected to open in the fall. The city has targeted the Ross Garage site and the surrounding area for future development – including new parking structures with room for more than 1,000 vehicles – as part of the Quincy Center Urban Revitalization and Development Plan.

GOLD STRUCTURED PIECES

Gold may never go out of fashion, but it does take on different forms, which is what makes it such an exciting precious metal. While we have all become used to seeing gold chains and bands, the latest style is more architectural in nature. Gold "structured jewelry" combines geometric forms, planes, volumes, solids, and voids into harmonious configurations that can prove to be as compelling as any sculpture found in a museum or modern piece of architecture. While these pieces may be minimalist in nature, their clean lines can encompass expanses of gold configured in geometric and organic forms. The resultant pieces are startling to look at and exciting to wear, as each piece is a statement itself.

When most people think about gold jewelry, the first thing that comes to mind is yellow gold. However, craftsmen have been creating other gold colors for centuries. You'll find new and vintage gold jewelry in white gold, rose gold, and even green gold at Rogers Jewelry. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. To learn more, please call 617-773-3636, or stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On July 14, 1881, Sheriff Pat Garrett shoots Henry McCarty, known as Billy the Kid, to death at the Maxwell Ranch in New Mexico. Garrett had been tracking the Kid for three months after the gunslinger escaped from prison only days before his scheduled execution.

- On July 15, 1903, the newly formed Ford Motor Company takes its first order: an $850 two-cylinder Model A automobile with a backseat. The car was delivered a week later. The Model A could accommodate two people side-by-side on a bench; it had no top, and was painted red.

- On July 12, 1933, the first three-wheeled, multi-directional Dymaxion car designed by Buckminster Fuller is manufactured in Connecticut. It had a steel chassis and a body made of ash wood, covered with an aluminum skin and topped with a painted canvas roof.

- On July 11, 1945, the Soviet Union promises to hand over power to British and U.S. forces in West Berlin. Although the division of Berlin into zones of occupation was seen as temporary, the dividing lines quickly became permanent.

- On July 13, 1955, nightclub owner Ruth Ellis is convicted of murdering her boyfriend, playboy race-car driver David Blakely. Ellis was later executed by hanging, becoming the last woman in Great Britain to be put to death.

- On July 17, 1967, Jimi Hendrix drops out as the opening act for teenybopper sensations The Monkees. The booking of psychedelic rock god with the made-for-television Monkees was the brainchild of Hendrix's manager, Mike Jeffery.

- On July 16, 1995, Amazon officially opens for business as an online bookseller. Within a month, the fledgling retailer had shipped books to all 50 states and 45 countries. Amazon eventually morphed into an e-commerce colossus, selling everything from groceries and furniture to live ladybugs.

Hancock Street History

It was eerily quiet as dusk turned into night in Quincy Center last Friday evening.

For about 15 minutes around 9 p.m. there was no traffic on Hancock Street between City Hall and United First Parish Church. Only a handful of folks stood on the sidewalk to witness history.

Heavy equipment moved concrete jersey barriers on Hancock Street near Washington Street blocking southbound traffic. Assembled media found vantage spots to record the moment.

Then, like the crystal ball that falls in Times Square every New Year's Eve, anticipation grew as Paul Hines climbed into his black SUV with two of his sons and two of his nephews. The vehicle was parked inside the barrier in front of McIntyre Mall.

He hit the ignition, threw the car in gear and slowly drove a few hundred yards down this stretch of Hancock Street. It may seem a little corny or exaggerated but it was a history-making moment. In a larger scope, this snapshot of time signaled the beginning of a new era in the downtown.

It was the final vehicle trip between City Hall and United First Parish Church. Forever. An area that's accommodated cars and other vehicles for more than 100 years ceased as a public roadway at 9:18 p.m. on Friday, June 24, 2016.

Hines slowly drove his black 2009 GMC Yukon Hybrid SUV between the church and City Hall — his sons and nephews waving their outstretched arms from rolled down windows. He stopped briefly just before Temple Street and then continued south on Hancock Street toward Granite Street.

The ride was over. And with it a chapter in city history.

As Hines drove away, work crews sprung into action for the next phase in the downtown. More concrete barriers were placed near Washington and Hancock Streets. Traffic lights were rigged on poles at intersections. Crews prepared to paint lines for the new traffic configuration around the church.

Eight hours after it was closed, a new traffic pattern opened around 5 a.m. Saturday morning. Vehicular traffic now travels in two directions around the historic "Church of the Presidents" on Washington Street and Temple Street.

Ending Hancock Street as we know it in front of City Hall and the church will pave the way for a new public park known as the Adams Hancock Green. On Monday morning, construction crews were scattered throughout this block as the project got underway in earnest. Asphalt was ripped up as workers dug holes and trenches laying the groundwork for the new park.

Mayor Thomas Koch, a driving force for the new park, says the park will be a more dignified setting for the historic church — the only church in the U.S. where two U.S. Presidents — John Adams and John Quincy Adams — and their wives First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams — are entombed in the church crypt.

The days of the church in the midst of a traffic rotary are over.

But more than that, park proponents see this green as helping release the downtown's untapped potential as a destination for residents and visitors alike.

If you take a walk down Hancock Street in this area of the downtown, you can get a sense of how this park will join City Hall and the church as well as historic Hancock Cemetery.

The old roadway asphalt will be replaced by a beautiful green space featuring water elements, cobblestones and trees. The site will be book-ended by two oversized bronze statues of Founding Fathers and native sons John Adams and John Hancock.

There's no question this park will enhance the aesthetics of the downtown.

How can it not?

But many wonder how will the new traffic pattern ultimately impact this area of the square.

On Monday, two-way traffic around the church appeared to be flowing fairly well. There were police officers helping direct traffic and pedestrians in the area. So hopefully this is a good sign of things to come.

There's also been some discussion about the new driver and pedestrian lights on Washington and Temple Streets. They are designed to keep traffic moving safely while responding to a pedestrian's desire to cross in a crosswalk.

It is imperative that the public — both drivers and pedestrians — learn and adhere to the new light configurations. But just as important for public safety is obeying the 30-mph speed limit.

Quincy Center is not the Indianapolis Speedway. It's not the Southeast Expressway, either. Please slow down here. There are many pedestrians in this area of the city and there will be many more with the proliferation of residential apartments in the immediate area.

If you're a driver heading through Quincy Center, be mindful it may take a little extra time with a few more light cycles. And there are other roads that ring the downtown like the Burgin and Hannon Parkways that may be better options for expedited travel.

Pedestrians should also be aware that some crosswalks have moved and walk lights should be activated to cross the streets. Be sure a motorist is stopping before you step from the curb into the crosswalk, too. And don't forget to look both ways for traffic in each direction.

The downtown changed over the weekend and continues to evolve. It's an adjustment for sure.

Let's hope there is a renewed sense of safe driving and pedestrian walking, too.

WHILE YOU COULD say Paul Hines "won the gold" as the last driver on Hancock Street between City Hall and United First Parish Church, there were other "medals" awarded that historic night.

The "silver" went to Don Uvanitte of Eastern Insurance who was the second to last person to drive down Hancock Street. In the passenger seat was good friend Gerry Mullen of Houghs Neck.

And taking the "bronze" as the third to last person to motor down Hancock Street was John Sullivan of the Quincy Department of Public Works.

"CHRISTMAS IN JULY" to benefit the Salvation Army Thursday, July 28th is still looking for volunteer bell ringers. The fundraiser will take place outside The Quincy Sun office from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. July 28th.

If you would like to help raise at least $100 during a specific hour with a cash or check donation or ask friends and work colleagues to help with the fundraising please email me at thequincysun@verizon.net.

We still have some openings left.

We also want to thank the following folks who have already signed up:

Mayor Thomas Koch, Don Uvanitte, John Pasciucco, Amy Huber, Joan Keohane, Karen Giovanniello, John McManus, Maralin Manning and Barbara Clarke (all members of the Salvation Army Advisory Board); Bette Campbell, Quincy Access TV; Peter Tsaffaras, Quincy College; Amy Morin, Baker Braverman & Barbadoro P.C. Law Firm, Frank Trainer of Commonwealth Building Inc. and Carolyn Freeman.

Money raised at the kettle stand out will help the Salvation Army provide a variety of services including food pantry and emergency needs.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 postcard view of the old Quincy Point Congregational Church that was on the corner of Washington and South Streets. It was first erected in 1838 as a one-story Methodist church. It became a Congregational church in 1884 and a year later it was raised 10 feet and a vestry, kitchen and stage were constructed beneath it. In 1900 the Fore River shipyard began operation nearby and the church eventually became surrounded by industrial businesses. In the 1940's, under the direction of their new pastor, Rev. Bedros Baharian, the parish decided to raise the money to move a half-mile up the street to the corner of Abbey Road. In 1949 the 111-year-old original upper level of this church was lifted off the bottom addition and moved on rollers up Washington Street onto a new foundation. Then the building was extended, covered with bricks, a new roof and refurbished with wood trim inside. The new site also included a new parish house, social hall, offices and classrooms and a new steeple extending up 96 feet was erected at the front of the church. You would never know that the present church has a 178-year-old building as its sanctuary. And today the corner of South and Washington Streets is home to an automobile lubrication firm, but a marker placed there by Rev. Baharian in 1950 denotes it as the site of the church's original home. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Uncontested GOP Primary Slate

Massachusetts Republicans picked a slate that is expected to run uncontested in the Sept. 13 primary. The stakes are high because a U.S. Senate seat that has been Leverett Saltonstall's since 1945 will have a new occupant in 1967 and because the state's Constitutional Officers will be elected in November for four-year terms for the first time in the state's history.

The Republican nominees included Governor John Volpe for re-election as governor; for Lt. Governor, Francis W. Sargent; Attorney General Edward W. Brooke for U.S. Senate, and Lt. Governor Elliot L. Richardson for Attorney General. The ticket was rounded out to include Raymond Trudel, Secretary of State, Joseph Fernandes for State Treasurer and John Buckley for State Auditor.

QUINCY HOSPITAL'S NURSING SCHOOL RE-ACCREDITED

The Quincy City Hospital Nursing School was accredited for another six-year period according to Hospital Director Harlan L. The six-year accreditation is the maximum attainable. The League inspected the school's facilities in March. A class of 46 students was scheduled to graduate on July 28 and 56 students were scheduled to enter the school Sept. 14.

COUNCIL, SCHOOL BOARD CLASH OVER DRAIN PROJECT PAYMENT

A drain which crosses Faxon Field near the new Vocational-Technical School is the latest cause for friction between the city council and the school committee. Some $72,000 was spent on the drain project and charged to the School Construction Account when it should have been charged to the city account. The school committee wanted the money back. The council balked at paying back the monies.

'Spot An AED' Contest Draws 200 Submissions

February vacation week marked the beginning of the "Spot an AED (automated external defibrillator) contest" where the Quincy Fire Department in collaboration with the City of Quincy, Brewster Ambulance, eSociates and the PulsePoint Foundation conducted a crowdsourcing campaign using social media, web outreach, public service announcements (PSAs), postcard distributions and poster displays to request members of the public to share photos and location information of automated external defibrillators (AED) in Quincy for a chance to win an Apple Watch.

Quincy Fire reports the "Spot an AED contest" generated an impressive response of about 200 crowdsourced AED submissions in Quincy. These AEDs are now available for the Quincy Fire Department and Brewster Ambulance to verify. In addition to helping Quincy Fire build an AED registry that supports easy public access to defibrillators, the AED contest has made it possible for the City of Quincy to apply for the MA Department of Public Health and the American Heart Association's HEARTsafe community designation.

Quincy Fire wishes to thank all participants for sharing AED information and would like to recognize the following participants: Jill Stone, Alice Gatua and Michael Kwang for each contributing over a dozen AEDs. Quincy Fire congratulates the "Spot an AED Contest," Apple Watch grand prize winner, Kristian Fadrigalan for submitting over two dozen AEDs.

Members of the community can now visit, SmartFirstAid.org to sign up to receive launch updates for a smart first aid app that provides good samaritans with life saving first aid and AED location information during that critical window of time in an emergency when every second counts.

The American Heart Association estimates that immediate cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and early defibrillation with an AED can more than double a victim's chance of survival.

Thanks To All Who Contributed To City's First Inclusive Playground

I wanted to thank all of the people who participated this past Thursday night on the quest to bring to fruition the City of Quincy's first all-inclusive playground.

This project is a component of the Fore River Field revitalization project, which is currently underway to improve the ball field and the surrounding area. The addition of an environment where every child, regardless of their physical abilities, will be able to play with their peers is truly remarkable.

There were many hands that touched this project and I'd be remiss if I didn't thank both Dan Quirk of Quirk Auto and Jay Cashman of Cashman Construction for their individual contributions of $10,000 each towards this project. In addition, I'd like to thank the business community for their support, especially Quincy Point's NeighborWorks for their $5,000 contribution.

What I witnessed this past Thursday night was a community rallying together to achieve a goal- donating raffle items, purchasing tickets, making donations, and showing up to lend a hand, but most importantly putting the needs of the city's children first. This experience makes me proud to work on behalf of this great city we all love so much. I can't sum up in a paragraph or two the amount of gratitude and joy I have for everyone - so I will end by saying - we did it, we did it! God bless you and your families

Ward 2 Field Day July 4th

Ward 2 will hold its annual 4th of July Field Day Event, on Monday, July 4th, weather permitting, at Fore River Field, 16 Nevada Rd., at 10 a.m.

The field day will feature races, ice cream and face painting. Trophies and ribbons will also be awarded.

All Ward 2 residents and their families are invited to attend. This event is sponsored by the Ward 2 Civic Association.

Historical Society Trip July 21 To Isle Of Shoals, Kittery, ME

Quincy Historical Society will sponsor a summer trip on Thursday, July 21, to the Maine - New Hampshire Coast, featuring a cruise around the historic Isle of Shoals and Portsmouth Harbor.

The tour bus will depart the Adams Academy at 7:30 a.m. and arrive in Kittery, Maine, at approximately 10 a.m., for an hour of shopping at the Kittery Outlets.

Lunch will be at Warren's Lobster House, located on the harbor. The lunch entree is a choice of fresh filet of haddock with Ritz Cracker topping or a 10-ounce grilled top sirloin steak.

The centerpiece is a 2 3/4-hour afternoon cruise with the Isle of Shoals Steamship Company around Portsmouth Harbor and out to the Isle of Shoals.

The 10 small islands comprised in the Isle of Shoals have a history dating back to the Native Americans. They drew the attention of Captain John Smith when he sailed the New England coast and served as stations for fishermen from Europe. Smuttynose Island has a role in the legend of Blackbeard, was a resort for famous 19th century authors, and was the site of two notorious murders.

The islands provide a range of picturesque features, both in their rocky natural and in their buildings like the 150-year old Gosport Chapel and the 19th century Appledore House hotel.

The cruise will be back at dock at 4:45 p.m. The tour bus should return to the Adams Academy by approximately 7 p.m.

The price for this trip is $83 per person for Historical Society members and $88 per person for non-members. To register, or for more information, contact the Historical Society at 617 773-1144.

Abigail Coughlin Presented JDRF Kids Walk Award

For the first time this year, the Quincy JDRF Kids Walk committee has created the "Banting and Best" award to the Quincy Public Schools student top fundraiser (excluding committee members' children) for the 2016 JDRF Quincy Kids Walk to raise money for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

This year's recipient is Abigail Coughlin, a student at Quantum Elementary School.

The award is named for Dr. Frederick Banting and Charles Best who together discovered insulin in 1921. The initiative, perseverance and creativity of Dr. Banting, a Canadian physician and Charles Best, an American biomedical scientist changed the diagnosis of Type 1 Diabetes from that of a certain death sentence to an ongoing treatment option that prolonged the life of millions of diabetics and gave them their first treatment option that enabled them to live. Before this discovery, all of those diagnosed with this disease died within 1-3 years.

Abigail was recognized not only for her fundraising, but in showing initiative, creativity and inspiration in all of her efforts. While Abigail has been a long-time supporter for past Kids' Walks, this year she stepped up her fundraising efforts by using t-shirts donated by her family to raise money. She reached out to Ward 6 Councillor William Harris and secured a donation that she used to have the shirts stenciled with Quantum Pride logo sold these in her community. She was a familiar presence at neighborhood events and using the sale of these t-shirts and JDRF bracelets was able to raise $433.

The award was presented to Abby at Quantum Elementary by Walk chairperson Jennifer Amendolare and the principal of Quantum Elementary, Stephen Sylvia. Abigail is the daughter of John and Andrea Coughlin of Quantum.

WHAT'S COOKING

with
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Eggplant With Rice

By MARIE

Today's recipe combines eggplant with rice. Rice is one of those things that is just so good and versatile no matter what it is combined with.

This rice dish is made with eggplant and crushed tomatoes and together the combination is delicious. This dish is even good when served cooled.

RECIPE

1 eggplant (about a pound)
2 tablespoons of butter
1 small onion chopped
1 garlic clove mixed
Salt and pepper to taste

1 cup of crushed tomatoes
½ cup cooked rice
1 cup of chicken broth

Cut off ends and peel eggplant and cut into ½ inch cubes, this should equal about 3 ½ cups and set aside. Melt butter in sauce pan and add onion and garlic stirring until onion is wilted.

Add eggplant, salt and pepper, stirring well and then add crushed tomatoes. Cook for about 15 minutes and add the rice and chicken broth. Cover and bring to boil and lower heat. Stir and simmer for about another 10 or 15 minutes.

Suzie's Grain-Free Turkey Meatballs

By SUZIE

These meatballs are really, really good. I have a couple of secret ingredients for these. I learned them from two different chefs.

One is the addition of Dijon mustard, which seems odd for Italian style meatballs, but really add an important enhanced flavor. (They will not taste like mustard, don't worry!).

The second is baking soda! Yes, just 1/4 teaspoon per pound of ground meat makes the meatballs lighter, and more tender. Really!

Another is coconut flour instead of breadcrumbs. This along with the egg is the binder for the meatballs. Coconut flour is very versatile, is tasteless in this recipe (Your meatballs won't taste like mustard or coconut!!). I hope you like them!

RECIPE

1 pound ground turkey

1 large egg
1 shallot, minced
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons tomato paste
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard (secret ingredient)
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon coconut flour
1 teaspoon sea salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon baking soda (secret ingredient)
2 tablespoons grated Romano cheese
1/2 teaspoon dried basil
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano

Combine all ingredients well. Form into balls (I like to use an ice cream scoop as of late) bake at 375 degrees on a parchment paper lined cookie sheet for about 20 minutes or so, depending on size.

Serve with your favorite tomato sauce.

Spice Cake With Two Substitutes

By MARIE

I have made this spice cake dozens of times through the years. This time I added two different ingredients and it came out equally delicious.

I used confectioner's sugar instead of granulated sugar and used oatmeal along with gluten-free baking flour instead of regular flour for family members who cannot eat gluten.

RECIPE

1 cup raisins
2 cups water
1 cup of gluten free baking flour
¾ cups oatmeal
1 cup confectioner's sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg

½ ginger
½ teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 stick of butter

In a medium pan put two cups of water along with the 1 cup of raisins and bring to a boil for 5 minutes, stirring occasionally and then turn heat off.

Add stick of butter and let cool for 5 minutes. Now add all of the spices, baking soda and confectioner's sugar.

Stir until well blended. Then add dry ingredients (flour and oatmeal) blend until well mixed.

Pour into either a greased loaf pan or cake pan and bake at 350 for 30 - 35 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Melanoma Topic At Kennedy Center July 20

Ruth Jones Kennedy Center, 440 East BSN,RN,BC,CP-FS, Public Health Nurse Educator for the Quincy Health Department, will lead a discussion on melanoma Wednesday, July 20 at 10 a.m. at the Squantum St., Quincy. Melanoma is the most serious type of skin cancer. It develops in the cells (melanocytes) that produce melanin, the pigment that gives skin its color. Jones will discuss symptoms, treatments and prevention.

Quests, Storytime And LEGO At Crane Library July 1 - 6

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane
Public Library

The following activities for children are scheduled at the Thomas Crane Public Library the week of July 1 - 6th.

Summer Library Quests

This summer, turn a walk around the library into a scavenger hunt. In the Children's room at the Main Library or at the North Quincy Branch, children can follow directions to hunt for letter clues to spell out a mystery phrase.

Younger children can search just in the Children's Room; older kids age 10 and up can try their luck with a puzzle that allows them to explore all the floors of the library. This is aimed at children who are able to read, but can be enjoyed by younger ones with the help of a parent.

New quests will be available at the Children's desk for July and August; you can work on them anytime during the month.

Art-to-Go

Mon., Main Library;
Tues., Adams Shore;
Wed., Wollaston; Thurs., North Quincy

Drop in from 2 to 4 p.m. up to age 8

Art-to-go is a 10-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch. Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2:00-4:00 pm to make this week's craft. Craft for the week of July 4th - Mini basketball hoops.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

LEGO Building at Wollaston

Stop by the Wollaston branch library any time from 1:30 - 4:30 p.m. on Tuesday, July 5th for free-play LEGO building. Grab some LEGO bricks and build a boat, a spaceship, a double-decker couch - anything you want, then toss them back and try to make something else. LEGOs must be returned by the end of the program, sorry!

Parents please note these are regular LEGO, not DUPLO and are not appropriate for smaller children.

"Let's Play Together" Pajama Storytime

Join Storyteller Diana Kane in the large meeting room at the Main Library on Wednesday evening July 6th at 6:30 p.m. for "Let's Play Together," pajama storytimes designed especially for children ages 2-5 and their parents. Come see Ms. Diana for 45 minutes of interactive stories, partner dances, playing in a band and singing together.

This program is designed for adults and children ages 2-5 to enjoy stories and songs as a family. This is a great time for you and your children to sing, dance, listen and talk with each other.

Sponsored by the Quincy Cultural Council.

This summer from June 27th through August 31st track your reading online with our new summer reading game. Sign up, log books, and complete challenges. You might even win a prize!

This program is for children up to age 12, teens are invited to join our teen summer reading program.

North Shore Music Theatre Day Trip Sept. 1

Following lunch the lights dim as Jody Ebling performs her musical tour of a "Tribute to Broadway."

Her show includes favorite Broadway show tunes as well as novelty songs with lots of room for audience participation. Before leaving Cape Cod there will be a visit to Pairpoint Glass for an interesting demonstration of the age old art of glass

Claire O'Neill Completes College Internship Requirement

Claire O'Neill of Quincy, a psychology major at Colby-Sawyer College, recently completed the college's internship requirement at Division of Children, Youth and Families in Claremont, N.H., during the spring semester.

Internships are field experiences designed to provide a student learning opportunity under collaborative supervision between Colby-Sawyer College faculty, staff, and work site professionals.

Fentanyl - A Public Health Crisis

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

With the recent fentanyl overdose death of pop idol Prince, once again the spotlight focuses on the drug that medical experts refer to as the new heroin, but deadlier.

Fentanyl has been around since the 1960s, and its potency works miracles, soothing extreme discomfort. Fentanyl is a powerful pain-killing narcotic that is about 80-100 percent more potent than morphine. Prescriptions such as Actiq, Duragesic and Sublimaze include fentanyl. Medical practitioners prescribe it to treat patients with severe chronic pain, cancer patients or patients in serious discomfort who have developed a tolerance to other opiates.

Fentanyl is incredibly strong, and abuses of this drug especially can be fatal. The drug is identified as being 25 to 50 times more potent than heroin. In 2014, doctors wrote 6.65 million fentanyl prescriptions for people dealing with severe chronic pain. Unfortunately, an illicit version of the drug is flooding into communities nationwide, with the Drug Enforcement Administration describing it as a public health crisis.

Smuggled into the US from Mexico, illegal fentanyl can be sold on its own, disguised as prescription pills, or cut into heroin. This drug is so potent that even minute amounts can kill a person. More than OxyContin, Vicodin, or other familiar opioid painkillers, it's fentanyl that's joining with heroin to make Massachusetts' opioid crisis particularly virulent. Cheaper and easier to manufacture, fentanyl has silently replaced other opioids in unlawful drug trade, and whether addicts know it or not, in some states, is killing a greater number of people than heroin.

Here in Massachusetts, the latest numbers from the Department of Public Health are equally alarming. Statewide, over 50 percent of all overdose victims who got toxicology screens in 2015 had fentanyl in their systems. Fentanyl now contributes to roughly half of all opioid-related deaths in Massachusetts, which is a component of what makes Massachusetts' opioid epidemic so unique from the rest of the country. Like all opiates, fentanyl increases the dopamine levels in a person's brain to produce a state of euphoria, a reaction only magnified when mixed with heroin, hydrocodone, or other illegally-sold prescription painkillers.

In contrast to other opiates, fentanyl is exceptionally fast-acting, when you inject it intravenously, it begins to affect you before you're even done giving yourself the shot.

For many, particularly our youth, opioid addiction may start when a health care provider prescribes opioids following an injury, through having access to pain medication in the family medicine cabinet, or by obtaining the medication from friends. The intent of these treatments when prescribed and taken appropriately are for effective relief of severe pain, however when they are misused and abused it can lead to considerably negative outcomes, including addiction, overdose and death.

Recent national data suggests that those who misuse prescription opioids may be more likely to use heroin, which is easily accessible, cheap on the streets and has drastic and long-term impacts.

Many people are disinclined to believe that a child or loved one may misuse opioids or be addicted to one of these drugs. However, anyone who experiments with any of these powerful medications is at risk for undesirable consequences.

The symptoms of drug misuse and addiction can vary depending on the person and the drug being misused. Some of the warning signs include:

- Pills or medicine bottles missing from your home
- Taking medicine in excess of how it was prescribed
- Abrupt changes in their finances
- Dramatic mood changes
- Lower grades or poor performance at work, changes in friends, or changes in sleep or appetite
- Loss of concern about appearance
- Physical signs such as fatigue, confusion, weight loss, slurred speech and dizziness

As a parent, some of the most effective things you can do are, talk to your kids about opioids, discuss alternatives to opioids with prescribers, and take precautions to ensure that kids and other family members do not have access to opioids. It is imperative to be clear with your expectations about drug and alcohol use and follow through by supporting beneficial decisions that your loved ones make.

At home, take a regular inventory of medicines kept in your cabinet that have the potential to be abused. Keep medicines in a secure location and dispose of any unused prescription drugs. Unused medicines can be dropped off at secure medicine drop off boxes at many locations across Massachusetts. Do not flush medicines down the drain unless the label or accompanying patient information specifically instructs you to do so.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, removing medicines from their containers, crushing them and mixing with coffee grounds or kitty litter, then placing mixture in an unmarked container like a sealable bag and throwing that in the trash is an acceptable way of disposing them.

A major challenge for those who have an addiction to drugs or alcohol is confronting and overcoming stigma. Stigmas are imposed by society, communities, friends and family members and can initiate massive feelings of suffering and discrimination. Addiction is a disease that can be treated with suitable medical intervention. We may not be able to change overnight the way society feels about people with alcohol and drug problems, but we can all work to change the perception of the addict. They are our parents, our spouses, our kids, our grandchildren and our friends.

If you suspect that your child or a loved one has a problem with prescription opioids or heroin, talk with your local law enforcement agency, or call the MA Substance Abuse Information and Education Helpline at 1-800-327-5050 for free and confidential information about substance abuse, education and counseling resources for adolescents, families and adults.

YMCA Thingamajig Invention Convention Coming To Quincy

By JOHN GALLUZZO
Development Writer
South Shore YMCA

This spring the South Shore YMCA received the good word: Thingamajig® was coming to Quincy!

As winners of an internal competitive grant opportunity, the South Shore Y was chosen as one of ten sites around the United States, out of the more than 900 YMCA associations, to be granted $5,000 to hold a summer-long recyclables invention challenge for kids from age 5 to 14, culminating in a final gathering on August 20.

The news that Quincy would be home to the first ever Massachusetts Thingamajig was celebrated in an April 13, 2016, press release from The White House on President Obama's call for this generation of students to embrace STEM education and use their inherent ingenuity to "tackle the grand challenges of our time": "The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO), in collaboration with the YMCA of the USA, will help 10 new host cities around the country expand Thingamajig, a program developed by the YMCA of Metropolitan DC. These cities will create programs, seminars, and tools that assist students in connecting STEM education with real-world problem solving skills. This partnership builds on the last 2 years of expansion across YMCA of the USA, which reaches over 100,000 youth—with a focus on low-income and underrepresented youth—in 48 states and Washington, D.C."

In 1994, YMCA of Metropolitan Washington created Thingamajig®, an Invention Convention, where youth watch their creativity take flight. Each year, in preparation for the event, children receive a list of invention challenges, all centered on finding practical solutions to everyday problems.

Over the years, the event has evolved into the largest STEM-related convention in the area, drawing 4000 youth ages 6-14, many of whom come from low-income and disadvantaged families. The Washington D.C. area Thingamajig®, which is held the last Thursday in July, is open to all children in the metropolitan region as well as those enrolled in YMCA day camps. The rules restrict teams and individuals to using only recycled materials for their projects and spending no more than $20.

This summer, thanks to the grant, campers at the many day camps of the South Shore YMCA, led by the science education team at the Y's South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, will join the Thingamajig® movement.

Youths will be challenged to come up with problem-solving projects and given the chance to present their inventions at an end-of-summer celebration of imagination and resourcefulness, gearing them up for a triumphant and confident return to school in the fall.

The South Shore Y's Thingamajig® Invention Convention will be held on Aug. 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Eastern Nazarene College, where kids will participate in hands-on exhibits, challenges and workshops. All kids from ages 5-14 are welcome to enter, whether enrolled in South Shore YMCA summer camps or not. To register, and for more information, please visit www.ssymca.org or contact Chris Jacobs, Executive Director of the South Shore Natural Science Center, at cjacobs@ssymca.org or 781-659-2559. The specific challenges will be revealed during the registration process.

The South Shore YMCA is interested in partnering with organizations hoping to help push STEM education forward, including businesses willing to donate recyclable materials, to provide hands-on activities the day of the event, or even prizes for the kids competing in the challenge. Please contact Chris Jacobs for more information.

The South Shore YMCA is a charity serving eleven local communities: Quincy, Randolph, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Hanover. For information on how to support its work through volunteering or donations, contact Mary Orne at morne@ssymca.org or 781-264-9400 ext. 3306.

Fall Registration for Afterschool Programming Underway

Quincy elementary school students in grades K through 6 can join the fun from dismissal until 6 p.m. at one of four sites. Curricula range from the CATCH program to Second Step, to STEM.

For more information, contact Kate Morrison, Director of Afterschool Programs, at 617-481-4477 or kmorrison@ssymca.org.

GRAPHICS SHOW what happens to stormwater - rain that falls onto buildings, roads, green space and water bodies. The more impervious the surface - the greater the runoff. Stormwater that runs off driveways and other impervious surfaces is a big concern since that water finds its way into the stormwater drains (catch basins) on the street. On its way to the catch basin, it picks up oil and other wastes from driveways, pet waste that has been improperly discarded, pesticides, herbicides - even cigarette butts carelessly disposed of in the street.

Channeling Environmental Activist Lydia Goodhue What Is Stormwater, Where It Goes, Making A Difference

By MAUREEN MAZIRIMAS

Lydia Goodhue was an environmental activist from Wellesley at a time when Boston Harbor was often compared to an open cesspool. Before the creation of the MWRA and the ultimate cleanup of Boston Harbor, Mrs. Goodhue urged sewer users to understand the ramifications of careless disposal of materials into one's toilet and sink. In the 1980s, she penned an article for the Wellesley Townsman entitled, "Do you know where your sewage is tonight?" People are much more informed today about their sewer - but know little about what happens when materials are disposed of into a catch basin. So, now I ask you...

"Do you know where your stormwater is tonight?"

WHAT IS STORMWATER?

Stormwater is simply rain that falls onto buildings, roads, green space, and water bodies. For us, it does not affect Quincy's drinking water, which is supplied by the Quabbin Reservoir owned and operated by the DCR.

So, suppose it rained last night - what happened when that rain hit the ground? Some of it fell in your yard and helped your lawn and flowers grow. Some of it was absorbed into the atmosphere. Some, of course, went directly into the Harbor, the marshes, the creeks, the ponds and the rivers. A lot of it fell on impervious surfaces such as streets and sidewalks, buildings, and driveways. The rain that falls on your roof, goes into your gutters, then travels to your downspouts, and then out onto the driveway. The more impervious the surface - the greater the runoff. [There are many interesting ways to mitigate some of those effects - such as rain gardens (see the DPW website for details).]

The stormwater that runs off your driveway and other impervious surfaces is a big concern. THAT water finds its way into the stormwater drains (catch basins) in the street. On its way to the catch basin, it picks up oil and other wastes from your driveway, pet waste that has been improperly discarded, pesticides, herbicides - even cigarette butts carelessly disposed of in the street. On a recent cleanup along the Neponset, volunteers found numerous hypodermic needles - many of which were just pitched into the catch basin.

Whatever is tossed down a catch basin will most probably wind up in some body of water. Some people actually throw their bags of dog poop down the storm drain thinking it goes to a sewer system. That is not the case. That excrement could wind up in your river, or the ocean, or even on your back doorstep if you have waterfront property. That's one of the reasons dogs are not permitted on the beach in the summer months because they could leave their excrement on the beach for people to step in, or it will simply wash into the ocean.

The City of Quincy, Department of Public Works has made storm drains a priority in its literature. Those publications include the following:

THE STORM DRAIN DOES NOT LEAD TO A TREATMENT FACILITY

Stormwater drains & sanitary sewers

There is a big difference between stormwater drains and sanitary sewers. Both are separate and distinct, both are underground and both play a crucial role in the health and safety of our residents. The sanitary sewer system starts outside your home and carries waste from your sinks and toilets to the Deer Island treatment facility in Winthrop.

The Stormwater drain system collects overflow rain and melting snow from roofs, lawns, streets, parking lots, driveways and sidewalks and directs this water to designated areas for drainage into the environment. When misused both systems can have deleterious effects on our quality of life and in many cases can create major environmental hazards with long-lasting consequences.

WHAT IS THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN STORMWATER, SANITARY SEWERAGE AND POLLUTION?

A significant source of pollution from the city's stormwater is the City's sanitary sewer system leaking into the stormwater system. As is true with many New England towns, most of the city's clay sanitary sewer pipes were installed in the 1920s, and many are in need of repair or replacement. Most of the stormwater mains were installed side-by-side into existing sanitary sewer trenches in the 1940s or earlier. In order to provide a gravity-designed channel for rising ground water in big storms, the joints between stormwater pipe segments were left unsealed. While sanitary sewer pipes are sealed, as they age, they develop cracks, collapse or disintegrate. Sewage then leaks into ground water and into the cracks and unsealed joints of stormwater pipes. During storms, stormwater leaks into cracked sewer pipes, exacerbating issues with both systems.

You need not be a "tree hugger" to appreciate the value of clean water. "Clean water is everyone's business!" Pollution is a very costly endeavor. We need not look that far back in history to realize the economic and social cost that a dirty Boston Harbor brought to the residents of this area. We could not swim in it. We could not fish in it. The fish were dying off in great numbers. Even tourism suffered. There were even times when it literally stunk! Thanks to litigation initiated by the City of Quincy under Mayor Francis McCauley, Boston Harbor is now a lot healthier.

The costs to cure pollution are astronomical. That's why it makes more sense to avoid it before it happens. We need to realize that our catch basins are not sewers; we can't just dump stuff in there and expect that it's going to go off to some treatment plant and will never have to see it again.

You can make a difference

Stormwater carries pollutants like oil, gasoline, fertilizers, pet waste, sediment and trash and discharges into our beaches, ponds, brooks, rivers and creeks.

- Never dump anything down a storm drain (catch basin)
- Use fertilizers sparingly
- Use non-toxic pesticides and herbicides
- Direct downspouts into gardens
- Check your car for leaks
- Pick up after your pet
- Don't litter
- Bring hazardous waste to one of the household hazardous waste drop off events.

DEMOLITION OF THE Wollaston Theatre is expected to be completed within two weeks, a spokesperson for the building's owner said Monday. The future use of the site in Wollaston Center has yet to be determined and the owner, Michael Fang, plans to work with city officials and the community to determine its future, according to Fang's spokesman.

Wolly Owner To Work With Public On Site's Future

By SCOTT JACKSON

The owner of the Wollaston Theatre — a 90-year-old Beale Street landmark in the midst of being demolished — plans to work with city officials and the community to determine how the site will be utilized in the future.

Stephen Crawford, a spokesman for theater owner Miao Kun "Michael" Fang, said Monday the future of the parcel where the movie house — known fondly to generations of area residents as "The Wolly" — is located had yet to be determined. Fang, Crawford stated, wants to work with the community to determine the best use of the site.

"Certainly we'll be working with the mayor's office and the neighborhood to make something that fits within the overall vision for the neighborhood," Crawford said in a phone interview.

When asked if Fang planned to host a community meeting on potential uses for the site, Crawford said that had yet to be determined.

"We're just trying to get the building demolished. We haven't made any plans for the future," he said.

The razing of the Wollaston Theatre began June 13, days after the city approved a demolition permit for the building. Crawford said the demolition was expected to take another two weeks to complete.

Crawford first said Fang planned to raze the building last fall, but the demolition permit was not granted until June 10 because Mayor Thomas Koch had been negotiating with the theater owner on a potential deal to purchase and preserve the structure. In late May, Koch said the cost of doing so would be too expensive with the city facing other needs, such as roads and schools.

Residents who are interested in taking a piece of the Wollaston Theatre home with them can still do so. Crawford said bricks from the building are available on site while demolition crews are present for free; residents can ask an attendant on duty for one of the bricks at the gate to the demolition site.

Several items from the theater, including the marquee, were removed before demolition started. Their future is undetermined.

"Some of the hardware and the marquee are being preserved. What is going to happen to them has yet to be determined," Crawford said.

The Wollaston Theatre last opened its doors to the public in 2003. The building opened in 1926 and was home to a vaudeville theater before being converted into a cinema in the 1930s.

Fang purchased the property for $600,000 in 2012 from Yvonne Chandler. Chandler and her late husband, Arthur, had owned the Wollaston Theatre since 1979.

Prior to selling the site to Fang, Chandler had reached an agreement in 2009 to sell the building to Street-Works, the city's previous master developer for Quincy Center. The New York-based company exercised an option to opt out of that agreement after it was estimated that renovating the building would cost upwards of $7 million.

The Wollaston Theatre, located at 14 Beale St., is located in a Business C zoning district on an 18,790 square foot parcel of land.

David McCarthy Appointed To Quincy College Board Of Governors

Former Quincy School Committee member David McCarthy, a manager with over 32 years of security management experience and expertise, has been appointed to the Quincy College Board of Governors.

McCarthy is employed by General Dynamics Information Technology as a Global Solutions Division security director. A University of Massachusetts, Boston alumnus, he holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Criminal Justice.

McCarthy has lived in Quincy most of his life. He served on the Quincy School Committee member from 2004-2015, including vice chairman. He currently serves on the board of directors for South Shore Mental Health and on the Board of Trustees for the Carroll Center for the Blind.

McCarthy has eight children and enjoys golfing, baseball, and spending time with his family.

The Quincy College Board of Governors consists of 13 members appointed to oversee and govern Quincy College. An annual meeting of the board of governors is held during the fourth week of September and regular meetings are held at least four times annually.

McCarthy joins the board as Mary Jo Brogna retired from the Board of Governors after serving for more than 10 years.

"My recent appointment to the board is a great honor and I look forward to, in conjunction with my fellow board members, contributing to the mission of Quincy College," McCarthy said.

July 2 Open House At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

On Saturday, July 2 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., the Girl Scouts invite Girl Scouts and the public to a program at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead lawn to learn about Quincy history.

There will be crafts, stories and games.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark located at the corner of Butler Road and Hancock Street will be open for public tours Saturday, July 2 between 11 a.m. 3 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour, beginning at 11 a.m. The last tour begins at 2:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Dating from 1686, the house is 330 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. The homestead was the child home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead is operated by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation.

Groups may request a private tour by calling 617-742-3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org. More information can be found online at the homestead's website, nscdama.org.

Crane Library Outdoor Concert Series Starts July 7

The Thomas Crane Public Library will host its popular summer concerts on the lawn series in July.

Concerts will take place Thursday evenings during July from 7 to 8 p.m. on the lawn, 40 Washington St. If it rains, the concert will move inside to the library's atrium.

This year Discover Quincy is also sharing their giant lawn games, Connect Four and Corn Hole.

Here's the lineup:

July 7: The Lenny Solomon Band

July 14: Peter Kilpatrick

July 21: Boston Road

July 28: Paul Agnew with the John Capavella Quintet

July 7: The Lenny Solomon Band

Join the Lenny Solomon Band for a great evening of socially conscious country/city/blues/folk music on the lawn. Lenny Solomon's style has been compared to early Bob Dylan. He began his career in the late 1960s and has shared bills with many touring performers including Bonnie Raitt, Chris Smither, and Spider John. He is first and foremost a storyteller and his songwriting skills have earned many awards.

July 14: Peter Kilpatrick

Join Peter Kilpatrick for a great evening of original guitar-driven pop rock on the lawn. Pete Kilpatrick has been named Maine's best act four times in the Portland Best Music Awards and his music has been featured on NBC's The Office, Parks and Recreation and New Girl. He has toured with Dave Matthews Band, Jason Mraz, Guster and others, performing over 1,400 shows to date!

July 21: Boston Road

Join Boston Road for a great evening of bluegrass on the lawn. Boston Road is: Claude Galinsky, mandolin/vocals; Rick Posch, bass/vocals; Matt Valencius, banjo; Kristin Vegeto, vocals; and Pete Vegeto, guitar/vocals.

Boston Road's traditional and modern bluegrass music features a groove they call "the engine." It's the result of Pete Vegeto's rhythm guitar working with Rick Posch's standup bass and Claude Galinsky's vintage mandolin. Instrumentally, the band also features Matt Valencius' banjo. Singer Kristen Vegeto, along with Pete, Claude and Rick do the Roadsters' vocal duties, providing powerful two-, three- and four-part harmonies.

July 28: Paul Agnew with the John Capavella Quintet

Join Paul Agnew and the John Capavella Quintet for a great evening with the Great American Songbook on the lawn. Agnew is a local vocalist (Braintree) who interprets the timeless music of the Great American Songbook with meaning and authority.

With piano man John Capavella, Agnew is the co-producer and featured host/vocalist for "Songbook" a popular BCAM-TV music program that has aired since 1999. As an entertainer, Agnew makes frequent appearances at outdoor concerts, senior citizen residences and private and public events.

$12 Million In Capital Spending Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday approved more than $12 million in capital spending that will go towards the purchase of new vehicles including fire engines and police cruisers, the repair of major thoroughfares and neighborhood streets, and the purchase of two parcels on Adams Street that will be kept as open space, among other items.

The $12 million in borrowing approved Monday is part of $19.33 million Mayor Thomas Koch had proposed as the first tranche of his new five-year capital plan. The remaining $7 million worth of projects was not voted on, and could be reconsidered in the fall once the council returns from its summer break.

Of the money approved

Monday, $5 million is for the repair and reconstruction of city roads and sidewalks. Chris Walker, the mayor's director of policy and information, previously told the council $2 million would go towards major roads with the remaining $3 million spent on neighborhood streets; input from ward councillors would help determine which streets are in need of repair.

Public Works Commissioner Daniel Raymondi, during a June 13 finance committee meeting, said

Koch would have final say in determining which roads are repaired, but identified three major thoroughfares in need of work: Quincy Avenue, Burgin Parkway and Willard Street.

The $5 million for road

velopment.

Likewise, "consideration of affordable housing opportunities" was added into the list of items to be included in urban redevelopment covenants, which are negotiated between the mayor and developers proposing to build on privately held land, though it does not make affordable housing contributions mandatory.

Councillor Joseph Finn, who has proposed eliminating an exemption in the city's affordable housing ordinance that does not require downtown redevelopers to comply with its terms, welcomed the compromise language agreed upon in the URDP.

"It preserves the concept of affordable housing as a benefit, leaves open the possibility, but at the same time does not limit some of the necessary flexibility that the mayor needs, particularly in negotiating some of the particular deals moving forward," Finn said.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, who also sought to do away with the affordable housing exemption for downtown developers, had previously requested a report on the viability of giving tax incentives to developers. Palmucci had said tax incentives could be offered instead of giving those developers breaks on contributions to affordable housing and downtown infrastructure, parking and public arts funds.

William Geary, who is Koch's special counsel for the downtown, said the administration is reviewing the potential use of tax incentives.

The meeting Monday night was the council's last before breaking for the summer. Councillor Noel DiBona said it was important the new URDP passed before the recess began.

"I'm glad we got this in before the summer break, because we won't be going back into session until the middle of September—that's two-and-a-half months from now," he said. "We cannot go backwards in time. We have to push forward."

Councillor Nina Liang, chairwoman of the downtown committee, was unable to attend Monday's meeting but indicated her support for the URDP in a letter to her colleagues.

"I believe with this amendment we have made several important changes to the URDP which will result in increased public involvement and transparency to the process while not inhibiting the important work of developing and revitalizing our downtown district," Liang stated in her letter.

The redevelopment of the Hancock Lot, as envisioned by the URDP, would include a total of 283 residential units, 56,790 square feet of commercial/retail space, and a 125-room hotel. The city is planning to build a parking structure with room for at least 600 vehicles on site—in addition to parking provided by new developments—as well as a new pedestrian plaza in the middle of the site and corridors leading to that area lined with restaurants and retail space.

When it reconvenes in the fall, the council will likely be asked to vote on land disposition agreements for the first two projects on the Hancock Lot—a 15-story apartment building proposed by Peter O'Connell and a mixed-use hotel and residential building by LBC Boston. The council could also vote on the plans for the new city-owned parking garage at that time.

The redevelopment of the Ross Garage is anticipated to add 327 residential units, 96,000 square feet of retail/commercial space, 300,000 square feet of office space, and 90 hotel rooms. New pedestrian space and plazas would be included there as well, though their design is not specified in the URDP amendment. The city would also construct parking structures on site with room for more than 1,000 vehicles.

The council on Monday also voted 8-0 to approve Koch's request to use district improvement financing to borrow $1 million for design work related to improvements at the Hancock Lot, including relocating a sewer main, decommissioning the former Town Brook culvert under the lot, and the parking structure. The city had previously borrowed $40 million since 2005 in DIF money, which is paid back using new property tax revenue generated in Quincy Center.

"It was a unique program," said DeCristofaro. "We graduated well over 300 young ladies while taking care of their infants."

The Teen Mother Program was housed at Bethany Congregational Church and offered such staple academic courses as science and math as well as vocational programs including information technology and electrical. The students attended classes at both Bethany Church and at Quincy High School.

"What is available at Quincy High School is available for the teen mothers at the program," DeCristofaro said. "They (teen mothers) are considered family at Quincy High School."

He noted the program at Bethany Church provided a nursery staffed by four paraeducators. The program had several academic staff members, some also associated with Quincy High School. The program's staff included guidance counselors, a tutor and a director of special education in addition to general education teachers.

The program was funded through a combination of the school department's operating budget, state grants and fundraising efforts.

"There was an advisory board that helped to raise funds," he said.

The superintendent credited several partnerships that were formed for helping make the program successful. They included Quincy College, Manet Health, the Norfolk District Attorney's Office, the Quincy YMCA, Quincy Community Action and South Shore Hospital.

"There were a lot of community initiatives within the program," DeCristofaro said.

The superintendent pointed out that Quincy College played an important role in offering postsecondary education to the students.

"Quincy College was absolutely instrumental in helping students take that next step," he said.

Longtime director of the program, Janice Walsh, retired four years ago after being with the program for some 27 years. She started as a teacher for the program and morphed into a combination of teacher and guidance counselor.

DeCristofaro said the five students who graduated from the program this month had celebrations at both Bethany Church and at Quincy High.

"They are proud members of the Quincy High student body," he said.

In other matters: the school committee endorsed its $98.7 million operating budget for the 2016-17 school year. It was approved by the city council the week before and is $3.1 million more than this year's spending plan. DeCristofaro said $342,000 realized by several staff retirements helped offset the increase and will fund some new positions including two additional teachers.

The committee also approved $234,000 in transfers to cover shortfalls in several accounts in this year's budget that ends on June 30. The transfers were from accounts that had some surpluses and do not affect the bottom line of this year's budget.

$12 Million In Capital Spending Approved

repair was approved Monday in a 7-1 vote, with Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain opposed. (Councillor Nina Liang was unable to attend the meeting.)

The capital spending approved Monday includes $5.33 million for new vehicles and equipment.

The Fire Department plans to purchase a pair of new engine trucks, which will cost $575,000 each and will take approximately 10 months to put into service. Fire Chief Joseph Barron previously said those engines would be placed at fire headquarters in Quincy Center and at the West Quincy firehouse, and engines at those stations will be moved to Squantum and Houghs Neck. The Squantum and Houghs Neck engines would be kept as spares.

The Police Department plans to purchase six Ford Explorers to serve as marked cruisers, as well as a half-dozen unmarked cruisers and a prisoner transport van. The Explorers have a two-year lifespan as a front-line vehicle before they are moved to less busy units, such as community police.

The school system will receive two large buses, five minibuses and a wheelchair minibus; the Department of Public Works a pair of street-sweepers, two snow-fighters, as well as dump trucks, backhoes and utility trucks; the Park Department a log loader and bucket truck in addition to dump trucks and a backhoe; the Council on Aging six handicapped-accessible wheelchair vehicles; and the Recreation Department several boats and a new van.

The council approved the request for the $5.33 million for new vehicles in a 6-2 margin. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci joined Cain in opposition.

In an 8-0 vote, the council approved spending $1.4 million to purchase two parcels in the vicinity of the William B. Rice Eventide Home at 215 Adams St. - 191 Adams St. and 215 Adams St. Those parcels will be maintained as open space.

Councillor Noel DiBona said the Community Preservation Committee is set to approve up to $1.2 million in community preservation money for those acquisitions, which would offset the amount the city would need to borrow in general fund money. The community preservation account is funded by a 1 percent surcharge on property taxes.

Koch had sought $3 million in upgrades to public buildings, including several schools. On Monday, however the council approved only $310,000 in public building projects as part of the capital plan. The remaining $2.7 million in spending can still be approved at a later date.

Of the $310,000, $250,000 will be spent for design services for exterior masonry work at North Quincy High School, and $60,000 on the design of new school boilers. The money for the masonry work was approved in a 6-2 vote with Cain and Palmucci opposed, and the boiler money was approved in an 8-0 margin.

Also approved Monday was $100,000 for test borings and hazardous material work at Sterling Middle School. That passed 8-0.

Cain said he opposed the items he did because the council was not provided enough detail on the capital plan, including a price tag for the entire five-year initiative.

"I have a very difficult time supporting this tonight because we're not thinking about this in terms of the project as a whole," Cain said. "This is called phase one. How much is phase two, how much is phase three, how much is phase four, and where does that spending come over the five years of this five-year capital improvement plan?"

"As much as I understand we need this money to improve many different aspects of the departments of our city, there is no way that I can support it."

Palmucci expressed a similar concern, noting he has asked city departments in recent years to identify a list of all their capital needs and make those lists available to councillors and residents.

The items not voted on Monday include:

- $1.3 million for the purchase of computers, smartboards and other technology for city schools and $700,000 for software upgrades and the design of technology upgrades through the IT Department.

- $1 million for traffic signal improvements at major and secondary intersections, and school zones; the money would also be used to put out a request for proposal for a citywide traffic, parking and pedestrian safety study.

- $500,000 for the study, design and engineering of sea walls and flood control projects.

- $500,000 for the study, design and engineering for a new animal shelter as well as improvements to the Mound Street Beach and the Kennedy Center.

- $500,000 for a feasibility study, engineering and preliminary design of a new public safety headquarters that would house the Police and Fire Departments in the vicinity of the current police station.

- $500,000 for the study, design and engineering for the master plan of Merry-mount Park.

$1M For NQHS Gym, City Hall Annex Work

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors on Monday approved repurposing more than $1 million in unspent money from a handful of completed school window and door replacement projects to upgrade the gymnasium at North Quincy High School and for roof and HVAC work at the City Hall annex building.

Mayor Thomas Koch had sought to repurpose money borrowed but not spent for door and window replacement projects completed at five schools last summer: Lincoln-Hancock, Merrymount, Parker and Wollaston Elementary Schools and at North Quincy High School. The Lincoln-Hancock project alone had more than $700,000 in funds left over.

The Massachusetts School Building Authority reimbursed Quincy for about 70 percent of those project costs; Al Grazioso, the city's director of operations, said the money re-allocated Monday was from the city's share of the project cost.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Koch, said $575,000 of the money repurposed Monday will go toward the work at North Quincy High School with $500,000 going toward the City Hall annex.

Grazioso said the work at North Quincy High School would include the replacement of the gymnasium's bleachers because of concerns over safety and handicapped-accessibility as well as its lighting and public address systems.

The roof at the City Hall annex, Grazioso stated, leaks during rainstorms. The replacement of the roof had been included in the city's 2011 capital improvement plan, but was not done because of cost overruns on school roof projects included in the CIP.

Councillors approved repurposing the money for the two projects in a 7-1 vote. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall voted against the proposal, with Councillor Nina Liang not in attendance.

Croall, who is the chairman of the council's finance committee, asked why the $1 million could not have been repurposed toward the Teel Field project, which includes the installation of a new synthetic playing turf, bleachers and a 157-vehicle parking lot.

In May, the council approved allocating $2.75 million from the sale of the former Central Middle School toward Teel Field work at Koch's request, which Croall opposed. The project was first approved in 2014, at which time the council authorized up to $12 million in borrowing.

"My perception is we had that Teel Field (overrun) presented to us, now all of a sudden there is $1 million (available)," Croall said Monday. "To me, it makes sense to service the debt you've already established."

Grazioso said he did not believe the $1 million could have been repurposed for the Teel Field project. The money, he stated, became available "a few months ago" after all the work on the window and door replacement projects was signed off on.

Grazioso said the city went out to bid on the window and door replacement projects twice, because the bids came back too high the first time. Because the bid process took longer than normal, the city was able to put together more precise project documents and there were few change orders once the window and door replacement began.

Marine Unit Trains For Boarding High-Risk Vessels

Police Prepare For Crime Situations Including Terrorism

By SCOTT JACKSON

Members of the Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit recently took part in training exercises on standard procedures to board high-risk vessels in Quincy Bay, joined with officers from nine other departments.

The eight-hour training session took place June 7 off of Wollaston Beach. The Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit was joined by Boston, Braintree, Hingham, Marshfield, Plymouth, New Bedford, Winthrop and Weymouth police and harbor masters, as well as the Massachusetts Environmental Police Department. Hingham-based Maritime Tactical Training donated planning and exercise design services to facilitate the training session.

Lt. Robert Gillan, the head of the Quincy Marine Unit, said the training session was dedicated to boarding high-risk vessels. A high-risk vessel is one in which the occupants are known to have committed a crime, including terrorism.

"Instead of a routine safety inspection, we have intelligence that there are units on board the vessel," Gillan explained.

Quincy's Marine Unit, Gillan said, has not had to respond to such a situation. The training is to prepare the officers in the unit in case a situation does occur, and to act as a deterrent.

"The marine units are preparing in case, God forbid, we have that type of threat on a ferry," Gillan said. "The training is to get the officers in the Marine Unit and in the Special Weapons and Tactics trained up. We hope it will act as a deterrent."

The exercises are part of a federally approved course that followed procedures established by the National Association of State Boating Law Administrators. Gillan said police departments nationwide receive the same training.

"It's a very strict curriculum. All marine units and the Coast Guard are using the exact same training," Gillan said. "We'll be able to work with any partner, federal, state or local."

Quincy Bay off of Wollaston Beach was chosen for the June 7 training session because it provided the needed open expanse of water. Gillan said the session went well, noting that heavy seas that day made the exercises more realistic and challenging than if it had taken place in calmer waters.

"Having the heavy seas instead of calm seas made it a lot more challenging and realistic," he said.

The Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit includes four officers and three vessels; an additional 13 officers have been trained to operate those vessels if necessary. The Police Department also has a 20-member scuba unit, which includes all four members of the Marine Unit.

The Marine Unit trains year-round, Gillan said, both on and off the water.

"We're part of an association where we do on the water or classroom training once a month," he stated.

The four members of the Marine Unit are all certified as instructors, Gillan said.

The Quincy Police Department will help lead two additional high risk boarding exercises this summer along with Maritime Tactical Training and the Massachusetts Environmental Police Department.

The first session is slated for July in Plymouth, and the second will take place in August in New Bedford.

Hancock Street's 8-Hour Traffic Transformation

THING OF THE PAST – Motorists travel southbound on Hancock Street between City Hall (left) and United First Parish Church before 9 a.m. on Friday, June 24. By 9:18 that evening, this stretch of Hancock Street was closed permanently to vehicular traffic to make way for the Adams Hancock Green public park. By 5 a.m. Saturday morning, June 25, traffic had been re-routed around the historic church allowing two-way traffic on Washington Street and Temple Street.

HISTORY MAKERS – Quincy Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines – accompanied by his two sons and two nephews – was the last motorist to drive down Hancock Street between United First Parish Church and City Hall last Friday before this section of Hancock Street was blocked off to vehicular traffic permanently for the construction of the Adams Hancock Green public park. From left: Liam Hines, Dan Andrews, Paul Hines, Sean Andrews and Brendan Hines. The vehicle: a 2009 GMC Yukon Hybrid.

AFTER HANCOCK STREET closed to vehicular traffic permanently between City Hall and United First Parish Church, work crews set up new traffic lights in the area around the church (including Temple and Washington Streets, above) as well as painted new traffic lines to help motorists navigate the new traffic pattern in this area of Quincy Square (below).

Beechwood Knoll 4th Graders Share Your Career Week

Beechwood Knoll Elementary School's fourth graders recently participated in their first annual Share Your Career Week. Over 20 parents and family members enthusiastically participated in the event.

Fourth grade teacher Laura Mulcahy and her Team members, Karen Kelliher and Leslie Coughlin, welcomed parents into the classroom for one week earlier this spring. "In preparing our students to be college and career ready, we wanted to give our students the opportunity to explore possible career choices, while learning how education is connected to a successful future." Mulcahy said. "The response of our parents was overwhelming and made this event a tremendous success for our students."

Students participated in many activities representing a broad range of careers.

Mike Johnston, director of facilities at Eastern Nazarene College, spoke to the students about multi-tasking and managing a budget to respond appropriately to various work orders. Students got to fill out their own work orders and experience what it was like to be the director of facilities.

Another parent, Andrea Popa, an International Student Advisor at Boston University, spoke to the students about the importance of going to college and continuing to earn higher degrees as well. She had students fill out their own passports to gain perspective on international education.

Popa, who grew up in Portugal, attended Eastern Nazarene College majoring in English and Sociology, continued to Lesley College majoring in Intercultural Relations and lived two years in Romania after college. "Going back to school helped me learn how to better communicate with people from other cultures," Popa said.

Business owners Josh Velasquez and Lauren Hendry gave the students motivational pieces of advice. Velasquez told the students, "My biggest piece of advice I can give you is to be honest with yourself. Pick a career you love doing."

Hendry, owner of Mamas Move in Norwell and Wakefield, told the students to "be persistent, confident and passionate."

The event could not have happened without the support and enthusiasm of school parents. "The Beechwood Knoll School community is certainly something special," Mulcahy said.

Thank You,

All of us at Brewster Ambulance would like to thank Mayor Thomas Koch, the City of Quincy Officials, Fire and Police Departments, the staff at Quincy Satellite Emergency Facility, as well as the kind residents of Quincy for helping us complete an exceptional first year of Emergency Medical Service.

July 1st will mark our one-year anniversary providing Quincy it's Emergency Ambulance Service. In one year, we are proud to be able to report some impressive achievements. With over 12,000 calls this past year, we have significantly reduced response times. We've successfully certified over 700 Quincy Public School students in Take 10 CPR and have had 480 combined hours of police, fire and internal Quincy EMS training all while keeping 7 fully staffed dedicated trucks to the city.

We are committed on continuing to provide the City of Quincy with the utmost professionalism and superior clinical emergency medical care.

Thank you for letting us be a part of your city.
We are truly grateful.

QYH Honors 'Bibby' Lewis

Plaque, Bench Dedicated In Memory Of Longtime Youth Hockey Supporter

By BILL GRIFFIN

There is a plaque and a bench outside the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena which honor a great man.

Too often, we pass by these tributes too quickly. There is the busyness of life. There is the sweep of time. We promise ourselves: Next time. Not now. Next time, I will stop and read the words on the plaque. Always there is next time.

Read them. They tell of Wilbur "Bibby" Lewis who gave nearly a half century of his life to hockey in the city for skaters from age three to age 86. His daughter, Susan Lewis Grant, gave a beautiful tribute to her father in a dedication ceremony Monday afternoon before a large crowd of his friends who, like Bibby, will play hockey as long as they can stand and lace their skates.

"My dad spoke of the importance of service to the youth of Quincy," said Lewis Grant. "I can only imagine the number of children who have participated in this program and how big a role Quincy Youth Hockey has played in the community."

A Faithful Companion Through Life's Journey

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Enjoying the independence that we have as Americans is a privilege we've earned, together. It took the sacrifice of millions of entrepreneurs and Service men and women, nurses and caregivers. You've done your job in making this nation what it is today: proud, strong, and secure.

For more than 80 years, Social Security has been doing the same. We're with you through life's journey, from birth to retirement and beyond. And one of the best tools we provide every American is my Social Security, our secure online resource customized for you.

All your hard work is recorded at my Social Security. There, you can:

- Keep track of your earnings and verify them every year;
- Get an estimate of your future benefits, if you are still working;
- Get a letter with proof of your benefits, if you currently receive them; and
- Manage your benefits:
 - * Change your address;
 - * Start or change your direct deposit;
 - * Request a replacement Medicare card; and
 - * Get a replacement SSA-1099 or SSA-1042S for tax season.

It doesn't matter if you've worked one year or forty, checking your personalized account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount gives you control over your future.

We understand that you might lose things from time to time. In some states, you can even request a replacement Social Security card online using my Social Security. It's an easy, convenient, and secure way to request a replacement card. We are working to add more states to this service, so we encourage you to check www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber to see where it is available.

In addition to using my Social Security, there are many other things you can do online with Social Security. For example, you can use the Retirement Estimator to plug in different numbers, retirement dates, and scenarios to help you decide the best time for you to retire. It's available at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

We've been with you and your loved ones for a long time — more than 80 years. The journey you're making to financial independence isn't one you have to make alone. Join the millions of people who are strengthening their future at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Center Stage Studio Wins Softball Division Championship

Center Stage Studio was recently crowned champions in the Quincy Youth Softball League Dorothy Quincy Division.

Center Stage entered the playoffs as the 4th seed. The tournament played out over two weeks in June.

Center Stage entered the championship round undefeated in their bracket and was matched up against a very talented Anytime Fitness team. Needing a win to stay alive, Anytime Fitness pulled out an exciting 6-5 win in the first game, scoring three runs in the bottom of the 6th.

The championship game was a back-and-forth affair with great plays being made all over the field by both teams. Center Stage, which relied on its pitching and defense throughout the playoffs, leaned heavily on the play of veterans Kate Fox, Ashley Caldwell and Alexa Radzik during the thrilling final game. Keira Sleiman and Haley O'Connor, also made key defensive plays throughout the game.

Kate Downey, Emma Glavin and Brook Messing gave solid performances for Anytime.

The game went into extra innings, where Center Stage was able to push three runs across in the top of the 7th. And then Caldwell, who pitched 11 of the 13 total innings played, was able to shut the door for the 9-6 final.

Congratulations to the girls from both teams for providing great competitiveness and spirit during both games.

FENWAY FANTASY - Liam DiPilato, 5, of Quincy, runs the bases at Fenway Park at the recent John Hancock Fenway Fantasy Day. Liam was a patient partner for this year's event that attracted fans of all ages to experience the excitement of playing at Fenway while raising money for the Jimmy Fund that supports cancer research and care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Fans also had the opportunity to sponsor a Dana-Farber patient to give them special on-field playing access and make their baseball dreams come true. Liam, a pediatric cancer patient at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, was diagnosed with anaplastic ependymoma. Liam loves to practice t-ball, play with Legos and play with his friends especially his cousins Lucas and Maddy. When he grows up, he wants to play for the Boston Red Sox. The Patient Partner Program gives patients and their families an opportunity to establish mutually inspiring, non-caregiver relationships with participants in fundraising programs of Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Jimmy Fund. These special friendships can be a fun distraction from medical matters to partners and their families/organizations and offer additional inspiration to event participants for their fundraising efforts.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

WHAT DO YOU MAKE OF YOUR BED?

According to "conventional wisdom," hard mattresses are best for people with back pain. However, a well-designed study found that, over the period of one month, those sleeping on hard mattresses did slightly worse in terms of back symptoms and sleep quality than those sleeping on either body-conforming foam mattresses or water beds. It seems that a hard mattress is more apt to exert more pressure on hips, shoulders, and other areas of the body than its softer counterparts. As a result, sleepers are more likely to toss and turn. Another study, however, found that a "pressure relief" mattress did not induce better sleep than a conventional mattress. The best mattress is the one on which you feel most comfortable.

Our concern is the total health of our patients. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we take a complete look at the overall picture and formulate lifestyle changes that will help them maintain their health. We utilize state-of-the-art equipment and procedures - let us help you. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where our goal is to understand and meet your needs. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. When shopping for a new mattress, bear in mind that there are no industry-wide standards about the definition of "firm," "extra firm," and other terms applied to mattresses.

Quincy Youth Football Programs Host Skills Camp

The Quincy Youth Football League recently held a free Football Skills Camp and Showcase at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Nearly 200 football players from around the City of Quincy, ranging from 6 to 14 years in age, were on hand to take part in the camp.

"The goal for this camp is to showcase the game of football to young players and parents who are apprehensive about football," said League President Steve Koski. "All you hear in the media about football lately, is negative and inaccurate. Our camp showcases the positive influence football has on our players," Koski added.

Every football program in Quincy was represented to staff the event: North Quincy High School Red Raiders, Quincy High School Presidents, North Quincy Apaches, Quincy Point Panthers, West Quincy Elks, Houghs Neck Manets, Squantum Storm and Quincy Militia semi-pro football club. The organization worked well together for the common goal teaching kids the game of football.

"This is what football in Quincy is all about," said

Apaches Head Coach Ryan Craig. "Coaches teaching kids, kids learning and having fun. A great day was had by all." Craig, like many of his coaching colleagues, got started in football as a player in the QYFL. Decades later, the students have now become the teachers.

The Quincy Youth Football League has been around since 1950. After 66 years in game, the League continues to improve its operation and stay on the forefront of youth sports.

"It was great to see so many experienced football coaches, volunteering their time to the kids of Quincy," said Squantum Storm Franchise Holder Nathan Knowles. "The Quincy Youth Football League experience is really second to none in the city."

QYFL teams will enter preseason practices in mid-July. The regular season runs from September to mid-November. All teams are accepting new player sign-ups for the 2016 season.

For more information about the QYFL or your local team, visit their website online at www.QYFL.org or email seanhalpin1@comcast.net.

Quincy Youth Hockey Honors Wilbur 'Bibby' Lewis

Stenberg, and the Board of Directors of Quincy Youth Hockey attended the ceremony. The board members are Tom Maloney, Al Grazioso, Steve DesRoche and Bobby Harding.

"They don't make them like Bibby any more," said Mayor Koch. "He always stepped up. No fanfare, he just did it. For decade after decade, he did the work. It was always about the kids for Bibby."

Lewis first skated on Butler's Pond when he was 10. He stopped playing hockey when he was 81. He served his country in World War II and in Korea. He became involved with youth hockey in Quincy in the late 1960s and stayed involved until 2009. He served on the Board of Directors for 25 years. He passed away in 2011. He played hockey and taught kids how to skate for nearly 50 years. It was a life well lived.

"His love for hockey was everything in our family," said Lewis Grant. "He had his grandsons, my sons, out skating when they were three. My brothers played, my sister played, my kids played."

Bob Hayes started Quincy Youth Hockey in 1965. For the first eight years, they played in Hingham and at Ridge Arena in Braintree. The program swelled to 750 skaters. They needed a home. In 1972 Lewis went to Mayor Walter Hannon and made an offer for the land.

The offer? One dollar.

Hannon accepted. Bibby had his field of dreams. He would build it, and they would come. The rink opened in 1973 and has since served generations of skaters.

In June of 1992, Bibby founded the Bald Eagles, a league for players over 60. It grew and grew and grew. There are currently 70 players in the league. In the first 16 years of the league, they played in 70 tournaments, some as far away as California. CNN did a feature story on them. They were famous.

And they were good. Artie Chisholm is 86 and he is still playing. Chisholm played for the Bruins and is one of the all-time scoring leaders at Northeastern. Jack Garrity was one of the league's original members. He was on the 1948 Olympic team and is in the Boston University Hall of Fame. He played well into his 80s. Eddie Carroll, an All American at Boston College, played in the league.

Bibby's cousin, Warren Lewis, skated on BC's 1949 national championship team. Bibby traveled with Lewis and skated for the San Francisco Flyers in the Santa Rosa Senior Tournament. It was here that the idea for the Bald Eagles may well have been formed.

"I think he just didn't want to stop playing hockey," said teammate Bill Parsley.

It was a league of stories, some moving, some funny. In one game, John "Doc" Meade injured his kidney.

When he was taken to the hospital, the doctors examined the wrong kidney. They found a tumor. They operated and saved his life.

There were players with Alzheimer's. There was a player who skated with an oxygen tank strapped to his leg. They could barely move, think, or breathe. But they played on.

"The players with Alzheimer's were fine on the ice," said Jim White, current president of the Bald Eagles. "Sometimes they would get confused in the dressing room over whether they were going home or going on the ice. But once they were skating, they were fine."

"We used to catch up with the player who had the oxygen tank. We'd switch off his tank for a second. It was pretty funny," said Bill Brady.

Bibby loved teaching kids in the learn-to-skate program.

"Those were the memories he replayed in his head in the last year of his life. I think the simple joy of watching kids learn how to skate gave him satisfaction," said Lewis Grant.

And so they came Monday to shake down the memories, tell their stories and honor their friend. They put a hockey stick and an equipment bag on the bench in front of the plaque. Don't forget the plaque. Next time, take five minutes. Read the words and remember the man.

It will be time well spent.

Black Beats Blue, Braintree

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth split into two teams this year with a record 40 players coming to tryouts looking to play.

Coach Steve Reardon of Wollaston Blue has nine returning players along with some new additions. Jay Fidalgo, Joe Vialpondo and Frank Flora are the new coaches leading Wollaston's new team, Wollaston Black.

For the first time June 16th the two teams met on the diamond at Adams Field. Wollaston Blue came in riding a recent hot streak, scoring 22 runs in their last three games while Wollaston Black was coming off of a tough 2-1 loss to a good Cedar Grove team.

Wollaston Black sent Doug Brown to the mound with the tough task of keeping Wollaston Blue in check. Brown threw a complete game only letting up one run, and made a huge defensive play backing up a throw at third base and throwing out the runner at home. Brian Pham and Alex Kennedy played great behind brown in the middle infield turning a rally stopping double play to end the 5th inning. Pham and Kennedy had nine putouts between them.

Brendan Ganno came up big making a few great plays in right field and crushing an RBI double to give Wollaston Black a commanding 3-0 lead going into the last inning. Ganno also added two stolen bases pushing Wollaston Black's numbers to a league-leading 25 stolen bases. Wollaston Blue had some clutch hitting from Ben Regan (2-2) and Nick Kelly (2-2, 1 RBI) but it just wasn't enough to get past the tough pitching of Brown.

Wollaston Blue will get a shot at redemption under the lights at Adams Field on July 15th and it looks to be a real barn-burner.

In other recent action, Wollaston black (3-4-1) won consecutive games for the first time this season taking down Braintree in exciting fashion June 23.

Brian Pham went 4+ strong innings on the mound striking out 5, while adding an RBI double to help his cause. Josh Moore came in with bases loaded in the 6th and held Braintree to one run and then shut them down in the 7th to give Wollaston a chance to win.

Joe Connaughton had a big rally starting double to get the team excited. Down one run in the bottom of the 7th Pham tied the game with his double driving in the speedy Griffin Kennedy who had stolen second and third base. "Mr. Clutch" Doug Brown came up to bat and hit a monster walk off double to win the game.

Alex Kennedy and Sam McGahee played solid games all around and Brendan Ganno added to his league leading 25 stolen bases, bumping his total to 27.

Wollaston Black goes on the road next week to play Cedar Grove and Braintree.

Morrisette Wins Two For 'Sully'

Ceremony Remembers Assistant Coach John Sullivan; Team Downs Cohasset In Doubleheader

By BILL GRIFFIN

If ever there were two games Morrisette wanted to win, it was the June 19th doubleheader against Cohasset at Adams Field.

Morrisette held the night in honor of assistant coach John Sullivan who died suddenly in November. Sullivan coached at Morrisette for 10 years. His family was honored with a ceremony between games. Two ex-teammates stood with the family on the field. Head coach Steve Maze told fine stories about his close friend. Rows of seats filled with players he had coached and lives he had touched.

Post 294 supplied the perfect touch to the night with a sweep. In the first game, Pat Keohane cracked three triples and Owen Lynch pitched six strong innings as Morrisette rolled to a convincing 11-5 victory.

In the second game, Shawn Kelley (a screaming double), James Mocchio, and Troy Shepherd drilled clutch hits in a three-run eighth, and Josh Helfrich struck out the final batter with the bases loaded to carry Morrisette to its third extra-inning win and a 5-0 start with an 8-6 victory over Cohasset.

"I looked at the schedule at the beginning of the season, and I knew this was the night we wanted to have a ceremony for Sully," said Maze. "We both had great respect for Cohasset. (Cohasset coach) Scott Arnold goes back to when Ray Cattaneo was here. It was a Sunday night, and it was easy for Sully's family to be here.

"To win the two games meant a lot to me and lot to people who came tonight."

Sullivan's mother Sheila, his father Jack, his stepmother Dianne, and his sister Julie walked onto the field between games. Helfrich, Shepherd, and Joe Brady presented flowers to Sheila, Dianne and Julie. Bill Walker and Bryan Linsky, two of Sullivan's teammates from North, joined the family. Sullivan is a member of the North Quincy Hall of Fame. Maze spoke and brought alive the memory of his friend. Jack threw out the first pitch.

"I think I rehearsed what I was going to say 25 times, and every time I broke down. But tonight, I knew I needed to hold things together," said Maze. "Sully was the first person I called when I got the job. We were together for 10 years. If I needed to talk about baseball or about life, he was always there. I miss him dearly."

The foundation of the sweep and Morrisette's sweet start has been a balance of hitting, pitching and defense. Post 294 scored 38 runs in its first five games. They had 19 runs and 24 hits in the sweep over Cohasset. Keohane was a terror in the No. 3 slot with five hits (four for extra bases) and four RBI in the doubleheader, but this is far more than a one-man show.

"We've had three extra-inning wins against Cohasset, Weymouth (6-5) and Milton (6-5)," said Maze. "In each game, a different part of the order came through with the winning hits."

In the second game against Cohasset, six different players hit safely, six players scored runs, six players drove in runs. Everybody came to the party. Mocchio had three hits, two runs scored, and played an excellent centerfield.

Keohane and Kelley had a double, single, an RBI, and a run scored. Tim Keohane had a pair of hits and an RBI. Shepherd had a single and an RBI. Helfrich added a double, two runs scored and an RBI. Brendan McDonald and Martin McCormack each scored runs.

In the opener, Shepherd had two hits and an RBI while Tim Keohane chipped in with a single and two RBI. Helfrich had a double and an RBI. McCormack scored a run. That's eight players contributing to the offense. That is what coaches dream about.

"Right through the order, we've hit the ball well in our first five games. I'm very pleased with the way we've played so far," said Maze.

And they also pitched. Lynch combined a good fastball with an excellent curve to give eight hits, two earned runs and struck out four over six innings in the opener. Kelley finished it with an impressive 1-2-3 seventh.

In the second game, righty Matt Eagles battled through six innings, allowing eight hits, five runs while fanning three. He had a good fastball. He threw strikes. He only gave three earned runs, one walk, and allowed his defense to help him. Helfrich was terrific with men on base. He stranded two in the seventh, escaping a first-and-third jam with two harmless ground balls. In the eighth, with the bases loaded and the tying run at second base, he simply overpowered Owen Gates with a fastball for the final out.

"Josh has experience pitching legion ball. No matter what the situation is, it doesn't bother him. He's our big gun in the late innings," said Maze.

The defense has been good. Morrisette entered the Cohasset doubleheader with three straight errorless games. Post 294 wasn't quite flawless against Cohasset, but they made the plays with men on base late in the second game. In the opener, McCormack was exceptional at shortstop. In the second game, Shepherd made the play of the night with a diving stab of a shot to his right over the third base bag in the second. His throw was a touch low, but Helfrich dug it out to complete the defensive highlight of the game.

It was a memorable and rewarding night. Morrisette honored a great coach. Post 294 won two games. Steve Maze told a funny story about a good friend.

"Sully always took care of the off-season organization," said Maze. "I had to do it this year. I texted the other coaches. We decided to meet at Bugaboo Creek which was absolutely Sully's favorite place. When we got there, it was closed. I couldn't believe it. I figured Sully was having a laugh on us up in heaven somewhere."

If he was looking down Sunday night, he had a smile and a laugh as well. His team not only played two. They won two. It doesn't get any better than that.

MORRISSETTE'S BRENDAN McDONALD makes contact in the first inning in the second game of a doubleheader against Cohasset June 19.

MORRISSETTE RIGHTHANDER Matt Eagles battled through six innings in the second game of a doubleheader against Cohasset. Eagles allowed eight hits and five runs while striking out three in an 8-6 victory.

O'Donnell Delivers Men's, Women's Suits To Interfaith Social Services

Due to the continued great response from the residents' of Norfolk County for the Registry of Deeds "Suits for Success" program, Register William O'Donnell recently delivered a large amount of donated men's and women's suits to the Interfaith Social Services "Career Closet."

Executive Director Rick Doane, Food Pantry Manager Pam Harty and Thrift Shop Manager Charlene Manning were on hand to accept the donation.

"On behalf of Interfaith Social Services I sincerely want to thank Register O'Donnell for his continuing efforts on our behalf," Doane said. "The Registry's 'Suits for Success' program is a wonderful program and through the generosity of the residents of Norfolk County we are the beneficiary. "The 'Suit for Success' program continues to be a great program to help those in need through the continued support of the residents of the county's 28 communities," Doane added.

O'Donnell has been in collaboration with Interfaith Social Services of Quincy for the past eight years in assisting in their efforts to provide clothing to individual's in need.

The Suits for Success program assists men and women who are re-entering the work force, by providing them with business attire free of charge. Interfaith Social Services assists both men and women by providing outfits suitable for employment.

"Everyone wants to make a good impression whether it's at a job interview or the first day on the job and a new suit of clothes can do wonders for ones self-esteem," O'Donnell said. "I truly hope that the business community and residents of Norfolk County will continue to contribute to this worthy endeavor."

Business suits for both men and women, appropriate footwear and accessories are all in need. Donated items should be ready to wear, in style, cleaned/pressed and on hangers.

To participate, bring donations to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds located at 649 High St., Dedham, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Contact Alicia Gardner at 781-461-6104 or at agardner@norfolkdeeds.org with any questions or to schedule a drop-off time.

To receive a charitable tax deductible receipt please provide a list of the donated items. To learn more about these organizations please go to their websites at www.interfaithsocialservices.org and www.helpfbms.org.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. On Sunday, June 19, 2016, at approximately 9:10 p.m., Officer Steven DesRoche was dispatched to the CVS Pharmacy (321 Quincy Shore Drive) for a report of a shoplifter who just fled the scene in a motor vehicle. Quincy communications provided the license plate and said that the vehicle was last seen fleeing the parking lot headed southbound on Quincy Shore Drive.

At the time of being dispatched, Officer DesRoche was on Quincy Shore Drive heading northbound in the area of Rice Road. As the Officer responded, he did not observe the vehicle in question pass by. Upon arrival at the CVS, Officer DesRoche interviewed the caller/employee, who said that a female in her mid 40's came into the store and filled a basket with items and left the store without paying for them. She added that the female was "short, with a purple shirt on and jeans."

While speaking to the caller, Dispatcher Michael Bowes advised Officer DesRoche that the Massachusetts State Police had the suspect vehicle stopped on the Neponset Bridge. Officer DaBilis informed communications that he would assist the State Police on the bridge while Officer DesRoche questioned the caller. The caller said that as she attempted to confront the female suspect in the parking lot, the suspect raised a bottle of Tide detergent and stated, "Get away from me or I'll f@#$%^& kill you." The caller feared the suspect would hit her so she backed away and returned to the store but not before she was able to get the registration of the suspect's vehicle.

Officer DesRoche then spoke with a second employee who said that she was working the front cash register and observed the suspect walk into the store and leave approximately 5-10 minutes later with a basket of store items. She said that she called, "911" as her co-worker went out after the suspect.

During this time, Quincy communications informed Officer DesRoche that the female suspect had an outstanding active straight warrant out of New Bedford District court, so he headed to the suspect's location. The Officers who detained the female suspect attempted to place her in handcuffs which resulted in the suspect becoming agitated. Officer DesRoche looked in the back seat of the suspect's vehicle, which had the matching license plates as provided by the witness. He observed several items with the CVS tags still on them in the backseat of the vehicle, which were then confiscated as evidence.

LT. DAN MINTON

The female suspect, a 46 year old New Bedford resident, was placed under arrest for the warrant, along with several other charges. As Officer DaBilis transported the female to the station, she escalated her hostility by attempting to smash the cruiser window with her feet which prompted him to expedite the transport the rest of the way with his emergency lights on.

Once at the station, additional Officers assisted in getting the suspect into the booking area without incident. The vehicle was towed. Officer DesRoche returned the stolen items to the CVS store and established that the value was $121.16. The suspect was charged with, "Assault by Dangerous Weapon: to wit detergent bottle, Larceny under $250, Threatening to Commit a Crime (To Kill) and Operating After License Revocation." Video surveillance of this incident was not yet available but would be for court purposes. Nice Work!

OBITUARIES

Peter J. Cedrone, 75

PETER J. CEDRONE

A funeral service for Peter J. Cedrone, 75, of Quincy was held Monday in the Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St., Quincy.

Mr. Cedrone died suddenly at his home on June 22.

He was the husband of Sandra L. (Wordell) Cedrone. He was born in Weymouth and was the son of the late Pasqualino and Carmella (Messina) Cedrone. Mr. Cedrone grew up in Quincy and was a graduate of Quincy High School, and served his country in the U.S. Air Force. He was employed as an automobile insurance appraiser for more than 20 years.

Mr. Cedrone loved Harley Davidson motorcycles and was a former member of the Harley Owners Group South Shore Chapter. He also loved spending time in Maine where he enjoyed fishing, hunting, and camping. He was an avid Red Sox and Patriots fan. He loved his family the most and enjoyed spending time with them.

Besides his wife Sandra of the last 49 years he is survived by a son, Paul A. Cedrone and his wife Jennifer of Quincy; two daughters, Marie A. Simonelli and her husband Michael of Mansfield, and Lisa Cedrone of Quincy; six grandchildren, Peter J. Cedrone II, Michael J. Simonelli, Molly E. Casey, Jenay J. Cedrone, Julia M. Simonelli and Nicholas G. Cedrone. He was also the brother of the late Patricia C. Cedrone.

Private interment at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to the National Kidney Foundation, 11 Vanderbilt Ave., Suite 105, Norwood, MA 02062

Richard F. Donovan, 70

Richard F. Donovan, 70, of Quincy died at South Shore Hospital on June 21.

Born in Boston, he was the son of the late Herbert and Dorothy (Riley) Donovan. Mr. Donovan grew up in South Boston and was a graduate of Hyde Park High school. He was a veteran of the U.S. Navy during the Vietnam War. He was employed by the Boston Gas Company for 33 years.

Mr. Donovan was a member of the Holy Name Society and was named man of the year from the Most Blessed Sacrament Church of Quincy. He enjoyed fishing and time spent with his family.

His survivors include four sons, Brian Donovan, Kevin Donovan and his wife Maryanne, Edward Donovan and Joseph Donovan and his wife Tiffany; a brother, Daniel Donovan; six grandchildren, Steven,

RICHARD F. DONOVAN

Patrick, Hunter, Collin, Eamon and Alec. He was also the father of the late Michael Donovan.

Funeral services were held earlier and burial took place at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Arrangements were by the Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St., Quincy.

Mary T. Sheahan, 99

Visiting hours for Mary T. "Sis" (Randolph) Sheahan, 99, of Quincy were held Tuesday in Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Sheahan died peacefully in her sleep on June 23, surrounded by her four children.

A force of nature who beat ovarian cancer in her early 70s, she was retired from the clerk's office in the District Court of Massachusetts at Quincy and, postretirement, served as a volunteer for Quincy Hospice.

Mrs. Sheahan leaves four children: Pamela Brennan and her husband, Peter, of Quincy; Suzanne Johnson and her partner, Klaus Lohmeyer, of Plymouth; Jeffrey Sheahan and his wife, Theresa, of NH; and Randy Sheahan and his wife, Judith, of Cambridge. She also leaves five grandchildren: Sarah Brennan and Emma Brennan of Quincy; Jessica Sheahan and her husband,

MARY T. SHEAHAN

Vien Dobui, of ME; Caroline Sheahan of NY; and Scott Johnson of Plymouth. She is survived, as well, by several nieces and nephews, and was predeceased by her husband, Gerard M. Sheahan, by her sister, Dorothy Poutree, and by her brothers, John and Robert Randolph.

Private interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society at cancer.org/donate.

Helen Grazioso, 93

A funeral service for Helen (Gavaza) Grazioso, 93, of Quincy was celebrated June 25 in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Grazioso died June 21, surrounded by her loving husband of 70 years and her five children.

Daughter of the late George V. and Josephine Gavaza. She was predeceased by her siblings - Victor Gavaza, John (Bud) Gavaza and Betty Isbell.

Mrs. Grazioso was born in Quincy and attended Quincy Public Schools. She raised her five children in the Wollaston Hill area. For the past three years she had been a resident of the William B. Rice Eventide Home along with her husband Alfred.

She is survived by her husband Alfred Grazioso; her daughter Holly Powers and her husband Warren of Norfolk and FL; Ken Grazioso and his wife Melody of FL; Mary-Ellen Schwartz and her husband Ed of NC; Al Grazioso and his wife Cathie of Quincy; and Liz Barry and her husband Tim of NC. They are also the proud grandparents of nine grandchildren.

Mrs. Grazioso loved her family more than life itself. She was a wonderful wife, mother and grandmother. She was an accomplished amateur figure roller-skater. She loved gardening, dancing and politics. But, more important to her was her faith in God. Mrs. Grazioso was the founder of the Cranch Hill Association, past chairman of the South Shore American Cancer Society, past member of the Quincy Catholic Women's Club, and St. Ann's Mary-Ann's.

Mrs. Grazioso and her husband Alfred celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary this past February. They were married on Feb. 14, 1946, at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Quincy. A Mass of Celebration was performed for Al and Helen and attended by family and friends. The Celebrant was the Most Reverend James Hawker, a close family friend.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Boston Catholic TV, PO Box 9196, 34 Chestnut St., Watertown, MA 02471.

OBITUARY

Lisa A. Coyne, 53

A funeral service for Lisa A. (Chetwynd) Coyne, 53, of Hudson, will be held Friday, July 1 at 6:30 p.m. in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Coyne died June 20.

She was a woman with a large heart and was always caring for others. She always acknowledged everyone and never forgot a name and inquired about loved ones, especially when they were sick. She worked as a home health aide and gained a strong relationship with all of her clients.

Mrs. Coyne had a passion for auto races and animals, especially cats. She enjoyed shopping and always made sure she looked her best from her nails to her jewelry.

Despite a prolonged illness, she never lost her sense of humor and her ability to laugh at any situation. Her family, friends and clients will truly miss her huge heart. She always was more concerned about the wellbeing of others more than herself.

Mrs. Coyne will be sadly missed but never forgotten.

Beloved mother of Vanessa Pinciario of Lowell and Michael Mathewson of Hudson, NH. Cherished daughter of John "Chet" Chetwynd Sr. of Quincy and the late Eleanor Chetwynd. Devoted sister of John Chetwynd Jr. of Quincy, Karen Chetwynd and her fiancé John Routier of Haverhill and Steven Chetwynd and his wife Jill of Brockton. Caring aunt of Jeffrey Chetwynd and Matt Zuroms and his son Zack.

LISA A. COYNE

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend the visiting hours on Friday from 4 to 7 p.m. in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. The funeral service will be held at 6:30 p.m. at the funeral home.

In lieu of flowers, donations in memory of Lisa may be made to The Pet Partners at www.petpartners.org. See www.Keohane.com or call 1-800-Keohane for directions and online condolences.

Golf, Hoop Tournaments To Honor Three Residents

There will be a weekend full of fun and competition to celebrate the lives of three Quincy residents July 8-10.

Dennis Thomson, John O'Connell and Charlie Vidoli were standout athletes in North Quincy High's class of 2002 who tragically had their lives cut short in the past 12 years. Their friends and families have established a golf tournament and a basketball tournament in memory of these great friends.

On Friday, July 8, the "Charlie/Okie Open" will take place at Presidents Golf Course. Those interested in playing should contact okie33golf@gmail.com for information. There will be a fundraiser with food and raffle prizes at the Waterclub in Marina Bay following the tournament from 5-8 p.m. There is a suggested $20 donation at the door for non-golfers.

The 11th annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament tips off on Saturday, July 9 at the Fenno Street courts. A number of local college basketball players, as well as many current and former high school players from Quincy, will participate in the tournament, which features a 16-team men's bracket and a four-team women's bracket. Games begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday (July 9) and Sunday (July 10) and will run throughout both days.

The tournaments support memorial scholarships the Thomson, O'Connell and Vidoli families have established to benefit North Quincy High graduates. This year's tournaments will also pay tribute to Matt O'Connell, John's father, who passed away in April.

NQHS Men's Soccer Hall Of Fame

The NQHS Men's Soccer Alumni Committee is slated to select its first Hall of Fame team Nov. 1.

The committee is in the process of gathering as much information possible from the 1960 team to present players.

Although there is an abundance of information regarding certain years, there are many gaps. If any former coaches or players would like to nominate a player email Donovan-bros87@aol.com.

A brief history regarding the player would be very helpful.

Local Events Celebrate Independence Day

By KERRY BYRNE
Consultant, City of Quincy

Two kids from Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams, ignited American independence. So it's only natural that America's Most Patriotic City celebrates the 4th of July in grand fashion with beachfront bonfires, block parties, historically-inspired performances and re-enactments.

A list of celebratory events around the city appears below. You can see more at DiscoverQuincy.com.

Saturday, July 2

The Letters of John and Abigail Adams Set to Opera & Orchestra

Adams National Historical Park, Beale Estate, 181 Adams St., 2 p.m. Free.

Hear the moving letters of Abigail and John Adams set to music in the free showing of My Dearest Friend: A Song Cycle for Soprano, Baritone, and Orchestra on the very grounds where many of these letters were composed.

The performance is made possible, in part, by a grant from Opera America. A free trolley from the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center (1250 Hancock Street) will drop off at the location.

BAUER HOUSE

1 Bedroom Wait List Closed as of June 30th, 2016

Bauer House was constructed under the 202 PRAC program of the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development. The building was dedicated on September 22, 1996. A residence for independent seniors 62 years of age and older, this equal opportunity subsidized housing consists of 75 units that include 70 one-bedroom units and 4 handicap accessible one-bedroom units. The wait list has been closed due an excessive wait time of more than one year. Applications will continue to be accepted for our 4 HP accessible units. Documentation of need for the design features of accessible units is required. Priority will be given to existing residents and applicants (in that order) that demonstrate need. Applicant households must contain at least one member that is at least 62 years of age at the time of application.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You dislike waiting for promises to be fulfilled and for commitments to be kept, but resist your headstrong tendency to push things along. Your patience will be rewarded.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect continuing opposition to your plans from die-hard detractors. However, your determination to see things through will carry the day. A Pisces has romantic ideas.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be too close to a troublesome workplace situation to deal with it successfully. Step away in order to get a better perspective. A solution soon becomes obvious.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might suspect that someone you trust has misled you on an important matter, but a more balanced view of things reveals a misunderstanding to be the culprit.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's animal magnetism has rarely been stronger. You can either just bask in all that admiration or use it to your advantage, especially in the workplace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone who previously balked at cooperating with you on a project suddenly has a change of heart. Accept both help and advice with grace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Some hazy issues still need to be cleared up before you can move on with your new plans. A friend from the past reaches out to re-establish old ties.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Continued positive fall-out follows that risky workplace decision you made some time ago. Your payoff will soon prove to be more substantial than you expected.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A personal relationship continues to be affected by a recent unexpected turn of events. Things need to work themselves out without finger-pointing.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a wonderful week for all you capricious Goats to kick up your heels with friends or family members in some well-earned fun and frivolity.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Caution is advised before making a financial commitment to someone you don't really know. There are better ways to build friendships than with risky fiscal dealings.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Travel plans continue to be favored. A change of scenery brings new opportunities, both personally and professionally. Be open to the possibilities.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a strong sense of loyalty that shows itself best in your relationships with family and friends.
